The Day of Doom Or, a Poetical Description of the Great and Last Judgement

Transcriber's Note: Biblical references were originally present as side notes rather than footnotes. The references for each stanza were collected into a single footnote, as the references are mostly generic to the action of the stanza. The summaries, also present as side notes, have been moved to precede the stanza to which they were attached.

Memoir of the Author.

The following is the substance of an article published in the “New England Historical and Genealogical Register,” for April, 1863, written by John Ward Dean, Esq., of Boston:

A century ago no poetry was more popular in New England than Wigglesworth’s Day of Doom. Francis Jenks, Esq., in an article in the Christian Examiner for Nov., 1828, speaks of it as “a work which was taught our fathers with their catechisms, and which many an aged person with whom we are acquainted can still repeat, though they may not have met with a copy since they were in leading strings; a work that was hawked about the country, printed on sheets like common ballads; and, in fine, a work which fairly represents the prevailing theology of New England at the time it was written, and which Mather thought might, ‘perhaps, find our children till the Day itself arrives.’”

The popularity of Wigglesworth dated from the appearance of his poem, and continued for more than a century. Expressing in earnest words the theology which they believed, and picturing in lively colors the terrors of the judgment day and the awful wrath of an offended God, it commended itself to those zealous Puritans, who had little taste for lofty rhyme or literary excellence. The imaginative youth devoured its horrors with avidity, and shuddered at its fierce denunciation of sin. In the darkness of night he saw its frightful forms arise, and was thus driven to seek the “ark of safety” from the wrath of Jehovah. For the last century, however, the reputation of the Day of Doom has waned, and few at the present day know it except by reputation.

The author of this book, whose wand had summoned up such images of terror, was neither a cynic nor a misanthrope, though sickness, which generally brings out these dispositions where they exist, had long been his doom. His attenuated frame and feeble health were joined to genial manners; and, though subject to fits of despondency, he seems generally to have maintained a cheerful temper, so much so that some of his friends believed his ills to be imaginary.

Rev. Michael Wigglesworth was born October 28, 1631, probably in Yorkshire, England. He was brought to this country in 1638, being then seven years old, but in what ship we are not informed. His father, Edward Wigglesworth, was one of those resolute Puritans who, with their families, found an asylum where they could enjoy their religion without molestation in our then New England wilderness, the distance of which from their English homes can hardly be appreciated now. Here they suffered the severe hardships of a rigorous climate, the fearful dangers from savage tribes around them, while uniting to build up villages which are now cities, and which still retain some of the characteristics of their Puritan founders. The determined purpose and strength of principle that conquered every obstacle was a school of severe training for the children of that period. It was natural that a father who had endured so much for conscience' sake should desire to see his only son a clergyman; and, although the father's means were not large, the son was devoted to the ministry and given a thorough education. Michael, after nearly three years of preparatory studies, entered Harvard College in 1647. Here he had the good fortune to have for a tutor the excellent Jonathan Mitchell, "the glory of the college," and famous as a preacher. The friendship here begun appears to have continued after both had left the college walls. Probably the eight stanzas "on the following work and its author," signed J. Mitchel, were written by that tutor and preacher, who was a native of Yorkshire, the county in which Wigglesworth is believed to have been born.

In 1651 Mr. Wigglesworth graduated, and was soon after appointed a tutor in the College. Some of his pupils were men of note in their day. Among them were. Rev. Shubael Dummer, of York, Me.; Rev. John Eliot, of Newton; and Rev. Samuel Torrey, of Weymouth; but the chief of them, it will be admitted, was Rev. Increase Mather, D.D., pastor of the second church in Boston, and for sixteen years president of Harvard College. That the tutor was faithful to his trust, we have evidence from the sketch of the funeral sermon appended to this work, preached by Rev. Cotton Mather, D.D., son of Increase, who probably derived his information from his father.

While a tutor, he prepared himself for the ministry, and before his father's death he had preached several times. He was invited, probably in the autumn of 1654, to settle at Malden, as the successor of Rev. Marmaduke Matthews, but owing to long-continued sickness was not ordained there till 1656. The precise date of his ordination is not known, but it must have been subsequent to August 25, 1656, for his letter of dismissal from the church at Cambridge bears that date. This letter, addressing the "Church of Christ at Maldon," states that "the good hand of Divine Providence hath so disposed that our beloved and highly esteemed brother, Mr. Wigglesworth, hath his residence and is employed in the good work of ye Lord amongst you, and hath cause to desire of us Letters Dismissive to your church, in order to his joining as a member with you."

The ill health which had delayed his ordination at Malden returned soon after his settlement there, and interrupted his ministry several years. He took a voyage to Bermuda, sailing Sept. 23, 1663, and being absent about seven months and a half. But the tedious and stormy voyage seems to have impaired his health so much that the change of climate afforded him little relief, and he returned much discouraged. He met with a very cordial welcome from his friends and parishioners.

While he was thus withheld from his ministry, he employed his time in literary labors. His Day of Doom was published about 1662, the year before his voyage to Bermuda. The first edition consisting of 1,800 copies, was sold, with some profit to the author, within a year, which considering the population and wealth of New England at that time, shows almost as remarkable a popularity as that of Uncle Tom's Cabin.

While absent on his voyage in search of health, Dec. 9, 1663, Rev. Benjamin Bunker was ordained pastor of the church at Malden. It seems that a distinction was observed at this time in New England between pastor and teacher. Wigglesworth calls Bunker "pastor" in some verses composed on his death, while on the title-page of this, work he calls himself "teacher." After Wigglesworth became sole minister, he was probably considered the pastor. Bunker held this office over six years, till his death, Feb. 3, 1669-70; In the elegy on the death of his colleague, Wigglesworth highly extols Bunker's piety and usefulness. The next colleague of our author was Rev. Benjamin Blackman, settled about 1674. He supplied the desk four years and upward. and left in the year 1679. His next colleague was Rev. Thomas Cheever, son of his early teacher, the celebrated New England schoolmaster, Ezekiel Cheever, author of Latin Accidence. These three ministers were all educated at Harvard College, Bunker having graduated in 1658, Blackman in 1663, and Cheever in 1677. Mr. Cheever began to preach at Maiden Feb. 14, 1679-80, was ordained July 27, 1681, and was dismissed May 20, 1686.

Wigglesworth, though long prevented by sickness from officiating, never resigned his ministerial charge, as appears from a letter which he addressed to Samuel Sprague, July 22, 1687. He was now left alone as minister of the church. He had, however, recovered his health in a measure about this time, which had suffered for nearly twenty years, and for the remainder of his life he continued in public usefulness.

He died on Sunday morning, June 10, 1705, in the 74th year of his age. The epitaph on the last page of this work is believed to have been written by Cotton Mather, as it appears in the appendix to his funeral sermon as by "one that had been gratified by his Meat out of the Eater and Day of Doom."

Mr. Wigglesworth had at least three wives: Mary, daughter of Humphrey Reyner, of Rowley; Martha, whose maiden name was probably Mudge; and Sybil, widow of Dr. Jonathan Avery, of Dedham, and daughter of Nathaniel Sparhawk, of Cambridge.

By his first wife he had (1) Mercy b. Feb., 1655-6; m. 1st, [Samuel?] Brackenbury, by whom she had at least one son, William; m. 2d, [Rev. Samuel.?] Belcher.

By his second wife, Martha, who d. 11th Sept., 1690, a. 28, he had:— (2) Abigail, b. 20th March, 1681; m. Samuel Tappan, 23d Dec, 1700;— (3) Mary, b. 21st Sept., 1682 ; unm. in 1708;— (4) Martha, b. 21st Dec., 1683; m. Wheeler;— (5) Esther, b. 16th April, 1685; m. 1st, John Sewall, June 8, 1708, who d. 1711; m. 2d, Abraham Tappan, Oct. 21, 1713;— (6) Dorothy, b. 22d Feb., 1687-88; m. 2d June, 1709, James Upham;— (7) Rev. Samuel, b. 4th Feb., 1689-90, d. 3d Sept., 1768. By his third wife, Sybil, who d. 6th

Aug., 1708, a. 53, he had:— (8) Prof. Edward, D.D., b. about 1692, d. Jan. 16, 1765.

Rev. Samuel Wigglesworth, the elder son, was settled in Hamilton Parish, in Ipswich, Mass., in 1714. He m. 1st, Mary, dau. of John Brintnal, of Winnisimmet, 30th June, 1715, who d. June 6, 1723, a. 28, having borne him four children, Mary, Michael, Martha, and Phebe. He m. March 12, 1730, Martha Brown, and had nine children.

Edward Wigglesworth, D.D., the younger son, took his degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1710, and applied himself to the study of Divinity. He preached for some time in different parishes, and in 1722 was installed Hollis Professor of Divinity of Harvard College. Not long afterward he was chosen one of the fellows of the corporation. He left an only son, who succeeded him as Hollis Professor in the same college, and an only surviving daughter, who married Prof. Sewall.

The following are the various editions of the Day of Doom, so far as we have been able to ascertain:

The first edition was published in 1661 or 1662, and the second four years after. These facts are obtained from memoranda by the author, which are printed in the Historical Magazine for December, 1863. An edition was printed in London, England, without the author's name, in 1673. This was, probably, the third impression; the date of the fourth is unknown. The fifth edition is said to have been published in 1701. Mr. Dean has made diligent search and repeated inquiries, but can only find two or three copies of the edition of 1673, and several fragments which must have been parts of some of the other editions.

There was an edition published at Newcastle, in England, in 1711. The next edition was published in 1715, called "the 6th edition, enlarged, with Scripture and marginal notes"—"printed by John Allen, for Benjamin Eliot, at his shop in King street." From this edition, which was evidently the seventh, the present one is reprinted, being carefully compared with that of 1673. Another edition appeared in 1751, "Printed and sold by Thomas Fleet, at the Heart and Crown, in Cornhill," Boston. The next edition appeared in 1811, "Published by E. Little & Company, Newburyport," Mass. The last edition, prior to the present, was published in Boston in 1828, by Charles Ewer.

Besides the Day of Doom Mr. Wigglesworth published, in 1669, “Meat out of the Eater; or, Meditations concerning the necessity and usefulness of Afflictions unto God’s Children.” The “fourth edition” appeared in 1689, and subsequent editions in 1717 and 1770. In 1686 he preached an Election Sermon, which was printed by the colony. Among his unpublished writings is a poem entitled “God’s Controversy with New England, written in the time of the great Drought, Anno 1662. By a lover of New England’s prosperity.”

Mr. Wigglesworth borrowed little from other poets, and what he borrowed was probably from the commentaries and theological treatises with which his library abounded, rather than from the poets. Not that his style is wholly prosaic, for there are passages in his writings that are truly poetical, both in thought and expression, and which show that he was capable of attaining a higher position as a poet than can now be claimed for him. The roughness of his verses was surely not owing to carelessness or indolence, for neither of them was characteristic of the man. The true explanation may be, that he sacrificed his poetical taste to his theology, and that, for the sake of inculcating sound doctrine, he was willing to write in halting numbers.

The author of the Day of Doom, belonging to the straitest sect of Puritans, was, like many others of that sect, a man of generous feeling toward his fellows. Rev. Dr. Peabody calls him “a man of the beatitudes.” Obedience to the supreme law gave a heavenly lustre to his example and a sweet fragrance to his memory. The clergy of his day possessed a deep religious earnestness and a fervent piety. They were Bible students and men of prayer. Even many who consider them erroneous in doctrine, are willing to allow that they were strict in morals; that, if they were wrong in faith, they were right in life; that, if their creed was opaque, their hearts were luminous; and that, if their vision did not discern the additional light which the saintly Robinson had prophesied was yet to break forth from God’s Word, they sincerely accepted the light they saw. They were patient, hopeful, humble, believing, faithful. They stood on a higher plane than their successors, and exercised a proportionally higher power over their hearers.

Their people revered them, were constant in attendance on their services, and submitted gladly to their sway.

Autobiography

I was born of Godly Parents, that feared ye Lord greatly, even from their youth, but in an ungodly Place, where ye generality of ye people rather derided than imitated their piety; in a place where, to my knowledge, their children had Learnt wickedness betimes; in a place that was consumed with fire in a great part of it, after God had brought them out of it. These godly parents of mine meeting with opposition and persecution for Religion, because they went from their own Parish church to hear ye word and Receiv ye Lords supper &c, took up resolutions to pluck up their stakes and remove themselves to New England: and accordingly they did so, Leaving dear Relations, friends and acquaintance, their native Land, a new built house, a flourishing Trade, to expose themselves to ye hazzard of ye seas, and to ye Distressing difficulties of a howling wilderness, that they might enjoy Liberty of Conscience and Christ in his ordinances. And the Lord brought them hither and Landed them at Charlstown, after many difficulties and hazzards, and me along with them, being then a child not full seven years old. After about 7 weeks stay at Charlstown, my parents removed again by sea to New Haven in ye month of October. In our passage thither we were in great Danger by a storm which drove us upon a Beach of sand where we lay beating til another Tide fetcht us off; but God carried us to our port in safety. Winter approaching we dwelt in a cellar partly under ground covered with earth the first winter. But I remember that one great rain, brake in upon us and drencht me so in my bed, being asleep, that I fell sick upon it; but ye Lord in mercy spar'd my life and restored my health. When ye next summer was come I was sent to school to Mr. Ezekiel Cheever, who at that time taught school in his own house, and under him in a year or two I profited so much through ye blessing of God, that I began to make Latin and to get forward apace. But God who is infinitely wise and absolutely sovereign, and gives no account concerning any of his proceedings, was pleased about this time to visit my father with Lameness which grew upon him more and more to his dying Day, though he liv'd under it 13 years. He wanting help was fain to take me off from school to follow other employments for ye space of 3 or 4 years, until I had lost all that I had gained in the Latin Tongue. But when I was now in my fourteenth year, my Father, who I suppose was not well satisfied in keeping me from Learning whereto I had been designed from my infancy, and not judging me fit for husbandry, sent me to school again, though at that time I had little or no disposition to it, but I was willing to submit to his authority therein and accordingly I went to school under no small disadvantage and discouragement, seeing those that were far inferior to me, by my discontinuance now gotten far before me. But in a little time it appeared to be of God, who was pleased to facilitate my work and bless my studies that I soon recovered what I had lost, and gained a great deal more, so that in 2 years and 3 quarters I was judged fit for ye Colledge and thither I was sent far from my parents and acquaintance among strangers. But when father and mother both forsook me then ye Lord took care of me. It was an act of great self denial in my father that notwithstanding his own lameness and great weakness of Body which required ye service and helpfulness of a son, and having but one son to be ye staff of his age and supporter of his weakness, he would yet for my good, be content to deny himself of that comfort and Assistance I might have Lent him. It was also an evident proof of a strong Faith in him, in that he durst adventure to send me to ye Colledge, though his estate was but small and little enough to maintain himself and small family left at home. And God let him Live to see how acceptable to himself this service was in giving up his only son to ye Lord and bringing him up to Learning; especially ye Lively actings of his faith and self denial herein. For first, notwithstanding his great weakness of body, yet he Lived til I was so far brought up as that I was called to be a fellow of ye Colledge and improved in Publick servdce there, and until I had preached several Times; yea and more than so, he Lived to see and hear what God had done for my soul in turning me from Darkness to light and from ye power of Sathan unto God, which filled his heart full of joy and thankfulness beyond what can be expressed. And for his outward estate, that was so far from being sunk by what he spent from year to year upon my education, that in 6 years time it was plainly doubled, which himself took great notice of, and spake of it to myself and others, to ye praise of God, with Admiration and thankfulness. And after he had lived under great and sore affliction for ye space of 13 years a pattern of faith, patience, humility, and heavenly mindedness, having done his work in my education and receiv'd an answer to his prayers, God took him to his Heavenly Rest, where he is now reaping ye fruits of his Labors. When I came first to ye Colledge, I had indeed enjoyed ye benefit of Religious and strict education, and God in his mercy and pittie kept me from scandalous sins before I came thither and after I came there, but alas I had a naughty vile heart and was acted by corrupt nature, therefore could propound no Right and noble ends, but acted from self and for self. I was indeed studious and strove to outdoe my compeers, but it was for honour and applause and preferment and such poor Beggarly ends. Thus I had my Ends and God had his Ends far differing from mine, yet it pleased him to Bless my studies, and to make me grow in Knowledge both in ye tongues and inferior Arts and also in Divinity. But when I had been there about three years and a half; God in his Love and Pittie to my soul wrought a great change in me, both in heart and Life, and from that time forward I learnt to study with God and for God. And whereas before that, I had thoughts of applying myself to ye study and Practice of Physick, I wholly laid aside those thoughts, and did chuse to serve Christ in ye work of ye ministry if he would please to fit me for it and to accept of my service in that great work.

Note.—In the foregoing Autobiography the original spelling is retained. In the following poems the spelling is modernized. The use of the acute accent (') to indicate the former pronunciation of the final ed as a separate syllable will be obvious; in other exceptional cases the old apostrophe is retained. In a few instances the termination tion is divided by a hyphen, to indicate its pronunciation as two syllables (she-on). The modern double commas are also used to mark quotations.

W. H. B.

To the Christian Reader.

Reader, I am a fool,
And have adventuréd
To play the fool this once for Christ,
The more his fame to spread.
If this my foolishness
Help thee to be more wise,
I have attainéd what I seek.
And what I only prize.

Thou wonderest, perhaps,
That I in Print appear,
Who to the Pulpit dwell so nigh,
Yet come so seldom there.
The God of Heaven knows
What grief to me it is,
To be withheld from serving Christ;
No sorrow like to this.

This is the sorest pain
That I have felt or feel;
Yet have I stood some shocks that might Make stronger men to reel.
I find more true delight
In serving of the Lord,
Than all the good things upon Earth,
Without it, can afford.

And could my strength endure
That work I count so dear,
Not all the Riches of Peru
Should hire me to forbear.
But I'm a Prisoner,
Under a heavy Chain;

Almighty God's afflicting hand
Doth me by force restrain.

Yet some (I know) do judge Mine inability
To come abroad and do Christ's work.
To be Melancholly;
And that I'm not so weak
As I myself conceit:
But who in other things have found
Me so conceited yet?

Or who of all my Friends
That have my trials seen,
Can tell the time in seven years
When I have dumpish been?
Some think my voice is strong,
Most times when I do Preach;
But ten days after, what I feel
And suffer few can reach.

My prison'd thoughts break forth,
When open'd is the door.
With greater force and violence,
And strain my voice the more.
But vainly do they tell
That I am growing stronger,
Who hear me speak in half an hour,
Till I can speak no longer.

Some for because they see not
My cheerfulness to fail,
Nor that I am disconsolate,
Do think I nothing ail.
If they had borne my griefs,
Their courage might have fail'd them,
And all the Town (perhaps) have known (Once and again) what ail'd them.

But why should I complain
That have so good a God,
That doth mine heart with comfort till Ev'n whilst I feel his Rod?
In God I have been strong,
But wearied and worn out.
And joy'd in him, when twenty woes
Assail'd me round about.

Nor speak I this to boast.
But make Apology
For mine own self, and answer those That fail in Charity.
I am, alas! as frail.
Impatiént a creature,
As most that tread upon the ground,
And have as bad a nature.

Let God be magnified.
Whose everlasting strength
Upholds me under sufferings
Of more than ten years' length;
Through whose Almighty pow'r
Although I am surrounded
With sorrows more than can be told,
Yet am I not confounded.

For his dear sake have I
This service undertaken,
For I am bound to honor him
Who hath not me forsaken.
I am a Debtor too,
Unto the sons of Men, Whom, wanting other means, I would Advantage with my Pen.

I would, but ah! my strength.
When triéd, proves so small,

That to the ground without effect
My wishes often fall.
Weak heads, and hands, and states,
Great things cannot produce ;
And therefore I this little Piece
Have publish'd for thine use.

Although the thing be small,
Yet my good will therein.
Is nothing less than if it had A larger Volume been.
Accept it then in love,
And read it for thy good;
There's nothing in 't can do thee hurt,
If rightly understood.

The God of Heaven grant
These Lines so well to speed,
That thou the things of thine own peace
Through them may'st better heed;
And may'st be stirréd up
To stand upon thy guard.
That Death and Judgment may not come
And find thee unprepar'd.

Oh get a part in Christ,
And make the Judge thy Friend;
So shalt thou be assuréd of
A happy, glorious end.
Thus prays thy real Friend
And Servant for Christ's sake,
Who, had he strength, would not refuse
More pains for thee to take.

Michael Wigglesworth.

On the Following Work and its Author.

A verse may find him who a sermon flies,
Saith Herbert well. Great truths to dress in Meter.
Becomes a Preacher, who men's Souls doth prize,
That Truth in Sugar roll'd may taste the sweeter.
No cost too great, no care too curious is
To set forth Truth and win men's Souls to bliss.

In costly Verse, and most laborious Rhymes,
Are dish'd up here Truths worthy most regard:
No Toys, nor Fables (Poets' wonted crimes)
Here be, but things of worth, with wit prepar'd.
Reader, fall to, and if thy taste be good,
Thou'lt praise the Cook, and say, 'Tis choicest Food.

David's affliction bred us many a Psalm,
From Caves, from mouth of Graves that Singer sweet
Oft tun'd his Soul-felt notes: for not in 's calm,
But storms, to write most Psalms God made him meet.
Affliction turn'd his Pen to Poetry,
Whose serious strains do here before thee lie.

This man with many griefs afflicted sore.
Shut up from speaking much in sickly Cave,
Thence painful seizure hath to write the more.
And send thee Counsels from the mouth o' th' Grave.
One foot i' th' other world long time hath been,
Read, and thou'lt say, Illis heart is all therein.

Oh, happy Cave, that's to mount Nebo turn'd!
Oh, happy prisoner that's at liberty
To walk through th' other World! the Bonds are burn'd, (But nothing else) in Furnace fiéry.

Such fires unfetter Saints, and set more free
Their unscorch'd Souls for Christ's sweet company.

Cheer on, sweet Soul, although in briny tears
Steept is thy seed; though dying every day;
Thy sheaves shall joyful be when Christ appears.
To change our death and pain to life for aye.
The weepers now shall laugh; the jovial laughter
Of vain ones here shall turn to tears hereafter.

Judge right, and his restraint is our Reproof.
The Sins of Hearers Preachers' Lips do close,
And make their Tongue to cleave unto its roof.
Which else would check and cheer full freely those
That need. But from this Eater comes some Meat.
And sweetness good from this affliction great.

In those vast Woods a Christian Poet sings
(Where whilom Heathen wild were only found)
Of things to come, the last and greatest things
Which in our Ears aloud should ever sound.
Of Judgment dread, Hell, Heaven, Eternity, Reader, think oft, and help thy thoughts thereby.

J. Mitchel.

A Prayer Unto Christ the Judge of the World.

*O Dearest, Dread, most glorious King!
I'll of thy justest Judgments sing:
Do thou my head and heart inspire,
To Sing aright, as I desire.
Thee, thee alone I'll invoke,
For I do much abominate
To call the Muses to mine aid:
Which is th' Unchristian use and trade
Of some that Christians would be thought,
And yet they worship worse than naught.
Oh! what a deal of Blasphemy
And Heathenish Impiety
In Christian Poets may be found,
Where Heathen gods with praise are crown'd!
They make Jehovah to stand by Till Juno, Venus, Mercury,
With frowning Mars, and thund'ring Jove, Rule Earth below, and Heav'n above.
But I have learn'd to pray to none,
Save unto God in Christ alone.
Nor will I laud, no, not in jest,
That which I know God doth detest.
I reckon it a damning evil.
To give God's Praises to the Devil.
Thou, Christ, art he to whom I pray;
Thy Glory fain I would display.
Oh! guide me by thy sacred Sprite,
So to indite, and so to write.
That I thine holy Name may praise.
And teach the Sons of Men thy ways.*

But took their course, without remorse, till God began to pour

Destructi-on the World upon,
in a tempestuous show'r;

IV. 4

Who put away the evil day,
and drown'd their cares and fears, Till drown'd were they, and swept away
by vengeance unawares;
So at the last, whilst men sleep fast
in their security,
Surpris'd they are in such a snare
As Cometh suddenly.

The suddenness, Majesty and Terror of Christ's appearing.

V. 5

For at midnight breaks forth a light, which turns the night to day,
And speedily an hideous cry doth all the World dismay.
Sinners awake, their hearts do ache, trembling their loins surpriseth; Amaz'd with fear, by what they hear,
each one of them ariseth.

VI. 6

They rush from beds with giddy heads, and to their windows run.
Viewing this light, which shines more bright than doth the noon-day Sun.
Straightway appears (they see't with tears)
the Son of God most dread, Who with his Train comes on amain to judge both Quick and Dead.

VII. 7

Before his face the Heav'ns give place, and Skies are rent asunder.
With mighty voice and hideous noise,
more terrible than Thunder.
His Brightness damps Heav'n's glorious Lamps and makes them hide their heads;
As if afraid and quite dismay'd, they quit their wonted steads.

VIII.

Ye sons of men that durst contemn
the Threat'nings of God's Word, How cheer you now? Your hearts, I trow, are thrill'd as with a sword.
Now Atheist blind, whose brutish mind
a God could never see, Dost thou perceive, dost now believe that Christ thy Judge shall be?

IX.

Stout Courages, (whose hardiness could Death and Hell outface,) Are you as bold, now you behold your Judge draw near apace?
They cry, "No, no, Alas! and woe!
our courage all is gone:
Our hardiness (fool hardiness) hath us undone, undone!"

X. 8

No heart so bold, but now grows cold, and almost dead with fear;
No eye so dry but now can cry,

and pour out many a tear.
Earth's Potentates and pow'rful States, Captains and Men of Might,
Are quite abasht, their courage dasht,
at this most dreadful sight.

XI. 9

Mean men lament, great men do rent their Robes, and tear their hair;
They do not spare their flesh to tear through horrible despair.
All kindreds wail; all hearts do fail;
Horror the World doth fill With weeping eyes and loud out-cries, yet knows not how to kill.

XII. 10

Some hide themselves in Caves and Delves,
in places under ground:
Some rashly leap into the Deep,
to 'scape by being drown'd:
Some to the Rocks (O senseless blocks!)
and woody mountains run.
That there they might this fearful sight,
and dreaded Presence shun.

XIII.

In vain do they to Mountains say,
"Fall on us and us hide
From Judge's ire, more hot than Fire, for who may it abide?"
No hiding place can from his Face sinners at all conceal, Whose flaming Eye hid things doth spy, and darkest things reveal.

XIV. 11

The Judge draws nigh, exalted high upon a lofty Throne, Amidst the throng of Angels strong,
lo, Israel's Holy One!
The excellence of whose Presence and awful Majesty, Amazeth Nature, and every Creature doth more than terrify.

XV. 12

The Mountains smoke, the Hills are shook, the Earth is rent and torn,
As if she should be clear dissolv'd or from her center borne.
The Sea doth roar, forsakes the shore,
and shrinks away for fear;
The wild beasts flee into the sea,
so soon as he draws near,

XVI. 13

Whose Glory bright, whose wond'rous Might, whose Power Imperial,
So far surpass whatever was in Realms Terrestrial,
That tongues of men (nor Angel's pen)
Cannot the same express;
And therefore I must pass it by,
lest speaking should transgress.

Resurrection of the Dead.

XVII. 14

Before his Throne a Trump is blown, proclaiming th' Day of Doom; Forthwith he cries, "Ye Dead arise and unto Judgment come."
No sooner said, but 'tis obey'd; Sepulchers open'd are;
Dead bodies all rise at his call,
and's mighty Power declare.

XVIII.

Both Sea and Land at his command, their Dead at once surrender;
The Fire and Air constrained are also their dead to tender.
The mighty Word of this great Lord links Body and Soul together, Both of the Just and the unjust,
to part no more for ever.

The living changed

XIX. 15

The same translates from Mortal states to Immortality,
All that survive and be alive,
in th' twinkling of an eye;
That so they may abide for aye,
to endless weal or woe:
Both the Renate and Reprobate are made to die no moe.

All brought to Judgment.

XX. 16

His wingéd Hosts fly through all coasts, together gathering
Both good and bad, both Quick and Dead, and all to Judgment bring.
Out of their holes those creeping Moles,
that hid themselves for fear,
By force they take, and quickly make before the Judge appear.

The Sheep separated from the Goats.

XXI. 17

Thus every one before the Throne of Christ the Judge is brought, Both righteous and impious, that good or ill hath wrought.
A separation and diff'ring station by Christ appointed is (To sinners sad) 'twixt good and bad,
'twixt Heirs of woe and bliss.

Who are Christ's Sheep.

XXII. 18

At Christ's right hand the Sheep do stand, his holy Martyrs, who
For his dear Name suffering shame, calamity and woe.
Like Champions stood and with their Blood their Testimony sealéd; Whose innocence without offence to Christ their Judge appealéd.

XXIII. 19

Next unto whom there find a room
all Christ's afflicted ones, Who being chastis'd, neither despis'd nor sank amidst their groans;
Who by the Rod were turn'd to God,
and lovéd him the more,
Not murmuring nor quarrelling when they were chast'ned sore.

XXIV. 20

Moreover, such as lovéd much,
that had not such a trial.
As might constrain to so great pain,
and such deep self-denial.
Yet ready were the Cross to bear,
when Christ them called thereto,
And did rejoice to hear his voice,— they're counted Sheep also.

XXV. 21

Christ's flock of Lambs there also stands, whose Faith was weak, yet true, sound Believers (Gospel receivers)
those Grace was small, but grew;
And them among an Infant throng of Babes, for whom Christ died; Whom for his own, by ways unknown to Men, he sanctified.

XXVI. 22

All stand before their Savi-or,
in long white Robes yclad,
Their countenance full of pleasance, appearing wond'rous glad.
O glorious sight! Behold how bright dust-heaps are made to shine.

Conforméd so their Lord unto, whose Glory is Divine.

The Goats described, or the several sorts of Reprobates on the left hand.

XXVII. 23

At Christ's left hand the Goats do stand, all whining Hypocrites
Who for self-ends did seem Christ's friends, but foster'd guileful sprites;
Who Sheep resembled, but they dissembled, (their hearts were not sincere,) Who once did throng Christ's Lambs among, but now must not come near.

XXVIII. 24

Apostates base and run-aways, such as have Christ forsaken,
Of whom the Devil, with seven more evil, hath fresh possession taken;
Sinners ingrain, reserv'd to pain,
and torments most severe,
Because 'gainst light they sinn'd with spite,
are also placed there.

XXIX. 25

There also stand a num'rous band, that no profession made Of Godliness, nor to redress their ways at all essay'd;
Who better knew, but (sinful Crew)
Gospel and Law despiséd.

Who all Christ's knocks withstood like blocks, and would not be adviséd.

XXX. 26

Moreover, there with them appear
a number, numberless,
Of great and small, vile wretches all,
that did God's Law transgress;
Idolaters, false worshippers,
Profaners of God's Name,
Who not at all thereon did call,
or took in vain the same.

XXXI. 27

Blasphemers lewd, and Swearers shrewd, scoffers at Purity,
That hated God, contemn'd his Rod,
and lov'd Security;
Sabbath-polluters, Saints-persecutors, presumptuous men and proud,
Who never lov'd those that reprov'd;
all stand amongst this crowd.

XXXII. 28

Adulterers and Whoremongers were there, with all unchast;
There Covetous and Ravenous, that riches got too fast:
Who us'd vile ways themselves to raise t' Estates and worldly wealth, Oppression by or knavery,
by force, or fraud, or stealth.

XXXIII. 29

Moreover, there together were children flagiti-ous.
And Parents who did them, undo
by nurture vici-ous.
False-witness-bearers and self-forswearers,
Murd'ers and Men of Blood,
Witches, Enchanters, and Ale-house haunters, beyond account there stood.

XXXIV. 30

Their place there find all Heathen blind that Nature's light abus'd, Although they had no tidings glad of Gospel grace refus'd
There stand all Nations and Generations of Adam's Progeny, Whom Christ redeem'd not, whom he esteem'd not,
through Infidelity;

XXXV. 31

Who no Peace-maker, no undertaker, to shroud them from God's ire.
Ever obtain'd; they must be pain'd with everlasting fire.
These num'rous bands, wringing their hands,
and weeping all stand there.
Filléd with anguish, whose hearts do languish, through self-tormenting fear,

XXXVI. 32

Fast by them stand at Christ's left hand,
the Lion fierce and fell.
The Dragon bold, that Serpent old,
that hurried Souls to Hell.
There also stand, under command,

legions of Sprites unclean.
And hellish Fiends, that are no friends to God, nor unto Men.

XXXVII. 33

With dismal chains, and strongest reins, like Prisoners of Hell, They're held in place before Christ's face, till He their Doom shall tell.
These void of tears, but fill'd with fears, and dreadful expectation Of endless pains and scalding flames, stand waiting for Damnation.

The Saints cleared and justified.

XXVIII.

All silence keep both Goats and Sheep before the Judge's Throne;
With mild aspect to his Elect then speaks the Holy One:
"My Sheep draw near, your Sentence hear,
which is to you no dread,
Who clearly now discern and know your sins are pardonéd.

XXXIX. 34

"'Twas meet that ye should judgéd be,
that so the World may spy
No cause of grudge, when as I judge and deal impartially.
Know therefore all both great and small,
the ground and reason why

and look so cheerfully.

XL. 35

“These Men be those my Father chose before the World’s foundation,
And to me gave, that I should save from Death and Condemnation; For whose dear sake I flesh did take,
was of a Woman born.
And did inure myself t’ endure unjust reproach and scorn.

XLI. 36

“For then it was that I did pass through sorrows many a one;
That I drank up that bitter Cup which made me sigh and groan.
The Cross’s pain I did sustain;
yea more, my Father’s ire
I underwent, my Blood I spent to save them from Hell-fire.

XLII. 37

“Thus I esteeméd, thus I redeeméd all these from every Nation, That they may be (as now you see) a chosen Generation.
What if ere while they were as vile and bad as any be.
And yet from all their guilt and thrall at once I set them free?

XLIII. 38

“My grace to one is wrong to none;
none can Election claim;
Amongst all those their souls that lose,
none can Rejection blame.
He that may choose, or else refuse,
all men to save or spill,
May this Man choose, and that refuse, redeeming whom he will.

XLIV. 39

“But as for those whom I have chose Salvation’s heirs to be,
I underwent their punishment,
and therefore set them free.
I bore their grief, and their relief
by suffering procur’d.
That they of bliss and happiness might firmly be assur’d.

XLV. 40

“And this my grace they did embrace, believing on my Name;
Which Faith was true, the fruits do shew proceeding from the same;—
Their Penitence, their Pati-ence, their Love and Self-denial,
In suff’ring losses and bearing Crosses, when put upon the trial;—

XLVI. 41

“Their sin forsaking, their cheerful taking my Yoke, their Charity Unto the Saints in all their wants, and in them unto me;—
These things do clear, and make appear their Faith to be unfeigné,

And that a part in my desert and purchase they have gainéd.

XLVII. 42

“Their debts are paid, their peace is made, their sins remitted are;
Therefore at once I do pronounce,
and openly declare,
That Heav’n is theirs, that they be Heirs
of Life and of Salvation;
Nor ever shall they come at all to Death or to Damnation.

XLVIII. 43

“Come blessed Ones and sit on Thrones, judging the World with me;
Come and possess your happiness,
and bought felicity;
Henceforth no fears, no care, no tears,
no sin shall you annoy,
Nor any thing that grief doth bring:
Eternal Rest enjoy.

They are placed on Thrones to join with Christ in judging the wicked.

XLIX. 44

“You bore the Cross, you suffer’d loss of all for my Name’s sake; Receive the Crown that’s now your own;
come, and a Kingdom take.”
Thus spake the Judge: the wicked grudge and grind their teeth in vain;

They see with groans these plac'd on Thrones, which addeth to their pain:

L. 45

That those whom they did wrong and slay, must now their Judgment see!
Such whom they slighted and once despited, must now their Judges be!
Thus 'tis decreed, such is their meed, and guerdon glorious;
With Christ they sit, judging it fit to plague the Impious.

The wicked brought to the Bar.

LI. 46

The wicked are brought to the Bar.
like guilty Malefactors,
That oftentimes of bloody Crimes and Treasons have been Actors.
Of wicked Men, none are so mean
as there to be neglected;
Nor none so high in dignity as there to be respected.

LII. 47

The glorious Judge will privilege nor Emperor nor King;
But every one that hath misdone doth unto judgment bring.
And every one that hath misdone,
the Judge impartially Condemneth to eternal woe, and endless misery.

LIII.

Thus one and all, thus great and small,
the Rich as well as Poor,
And those of place, as the most base,
do stand the Judge before.
They are arraign'd, and there detain'd before Christ's Judgment seat, With trembling fear their Doom to hear,
and feel his Anger's heat.

LIV. 48

There Christ demands at all their hands a strict and straight account Of all things done under the Sun, whose number far surmount Man's wit and thought: they all are brought unto this solemn Trial,
And each offense with evidence,
so that there's no denial.

LV.

There's no excuse for their abuse,
since their own Consciences More proof give in of each Man's sin, than thousand Witnesses.
Though formerly this faculty had grossly been abuséd, (Men could it stifle, or with it trifle, when as it them accuséd,)

LVI.

Now it comes in, and every sin unto Men's charge doth lay;
It judgeth them and doth condemn,

though all the “World say nay.
It so stingeth and tortureth,
it worketh such distress,
That each Man’s self against himself, is forcéd to confess.

Secret sins and works of darkness brought to light.

LVII. 49

It’s vain, moreover, for Men to cover
the least Iniquity;
The Judge hath seen, and privy been to all their villainy.
He unto light and open sight
the work of darkness brings;
He doth unfold both new old,
both known and hidden things.

LVIII. 50

All filthy facts and secret acts, however closely done.
And long conceal’d, are there reveal’d before the mid-day Sun.
Deeds of the night, shunning the light, which darkest corners sought.
To fearful blame, and endless shame, are there most justly brought.

LIX. 51

And as all facts, and grosser acts,
so every word and thought,
Erroneous notion and lustful motion, are unto Judgment brought.
No Sin so small and trivial,

but hither it must come;
Nor so long past but now at last it must receive a doom.

An account demanded of all their actions.

LX. 52

At this sad season, Christ asks a Reason (with just austerity)
Of Grace refus'd, of light abus'd so oft, so wilfully;
Of Talents lent, by them misspent
and on their Lust bestown,
Which if improv'd as it behoov'd Heav'n might have been their own;

LXI. 53

Of times neglected, of means rejected, of God's long-suffering And Pati-ence, to Penitence that sought hard hearts to bring;
Why chords of love did nothing move,
to shame or to remorse?
Why warnings grave, and counsels, have naught chang'd their sinful course?

LXII. 54

Why chastenings, and evils things, why judgments so severe.
Prevailéd not with them a jot,
nor wrought an awful fear?
Why promises of Holiness,
and new Obedience,

They oft did make, but always brake
the same, to God's offense?

LXIII. 55

Why still Hell-ward, without regard,
they bold venturéd,
And chose Damnation before Salvation,
when it was offeréd?
Why sinful pleasures and earthly treasures, like fools, they prizéd more Than Heav'nly wealth. Eternal health, and all Christ's Royal store?

LXIV. 56

Why, when he stood off'ring his Blood to wash them from their sin,
They would embrace no saving Grace,
but liv'd and died therein?
Such aggravations, where no evasions, nor false pretences hold, Exaggerate and cumulate guilt more than can be told.

LXV.

They multiply and magnify
Men's gross Iniquities;
They draw down wrath (as Scripture saith) out of God's treasures.
Thus all their ways Christ open lays to Men and Angels' view,
And as they were makes them appear in their own proper hue.

LXVI. 57

Thus he doth find of all Mankind, that stand at his left hand,
No mother's son but hath misdone, and broken God's command.
All have transgress'd, even the best,
and merited God's wrath, Unto their own perdition and everlasting scath.

LXVII. 58

Earth's dwellers all, both great and small,
have wrought iniquity,
And suffer must (for it is just) Eternal misery.
Amongst the many there come not any,
before the Judge's face.
That able are themselves to clear,
of all this cursed Race.

Hypocrites plead for themselves.

LXVIII.

Nevertheless, they all express.
(Christ granting liberty,)
What for their way they have to say, how they have liv'd, and why.
They all draw near and seek to clear themselves by making pleas;
There Hypocrites, false-hearted wights, do make such pleas as these:

LXIX. 59

“Lord, in thy Name, and by the same,
we Devils dispossess'd;

We rais'd the dead and minist'red
Succor to the distressed.
Our painful teaching and pow'rful preaching by thine own wondrous might, Did throughly win to God from sin many a wretched wight.“

The Judge replyeth.

LXX. 60

“All this,” quoth he, “may granted be,
and your case little better'd,
Who still remain under a chain and many irons fetter'd.
You that the dead have quickened, and rescu'd from the grave.
Yourselves were dead, yet ne'er needéd a Christ your souls to save.

LXXI. 61

“You that could preach, and others teach what way to life doth lead, Why were you slack to find that track and in that way to tread?
How could you bear to see or hear of others freed at last From Satan's paws, whilst in his jaws yourselves were held more fast?

LXXII. 62

“Who though you knew Repentance true, and Faith is my great Name,
The only mean to quit you clean,
from punishment and blame,

Yet took no pain true Faith to gain, such as might not deceive, Nor would repent with true intent, your evil deeds to leave.

LXXIII. 63

“His Master’s will how to fulfil the servant that well knew, Yet left undone his duty known,
more plagues to him are due.
You against light perverted right;
wherefore it shall be now
For Sidon and for Sodom’s Land more easy than for you.”

Another plea of the Hypocrites.

LXXIV. 64

“But we have in thy presence been,” say some, “and eaten there.
Did we not eat thy Flesh for meat, and feed on Heav’nly Cheer?
Whereon who feed shall never need,
as thou thyself dost say,
Nor shall they die eternally,
but live with Christ for aye.

LXXV.

“We may allege, thou gav’st a pledge of thy dear Love to us,
In Wine and Bread, which figuréd thy Grace bestowéd thus.
Of strength’ning Seals, of sweetest Meals,
have we so oft partaken;

And shall we be cast off by thee, and utterly forsaken?”

The answer.

LXXVI. 65

To whom the Lord, thus in a word, returns a short reply:
“I never knew any of you that wrought Iniquity.
You say you’ve been my Presence in;
but then, how came you there With Raiment vile that did defile and quite disgrace my Cheer?

LXXVII.

“Durst you draw near without due fear Unto my holy Table?
Durst you profane and render vain,
so far as you were able,
Those Mysteries, which whoso prize, and carefully improve,
Shall savéd be undoubtedly,
and nothing shall them move?

LXXVIII. 66

“How durst you venture bold guests to enter in such a sordid hue, Amongst my guests unto those Feasts that were not made for you?
How durst you eat for spir’tual meat your bane, and drink damnation, Whilst by your guile you render’d vile so rare and great Salvation?

LXXIX. 67

“Your fancies fed on heav’nly Bread, your hearts fed on some Lust;
You lov’d the Creature more than th’ Creator, your souls clove to the dust.
And think you by Hypocrisy, and cloakéd Wickedness,
To enter in laden with sin,
to lasting Happiness?

LXXX. 68

“This your excuse shews your abuse of things ordain’d for good.
And doth declare you guilty are of my dear Flesh and Blood.
Wherefore those Seals and precious Meals you put so much upon As things Divine, they Seal and Sign you to Perditi-on.”

Another sort of Hypocrites make their pleas.

LXXXI.

Then forth issue another Crew
(those being silencéd),
Who drawing nigh to the Most High,
adventure thus to plead:
“We sinners were,” say they, “’tis clear, deserving condemnation;
But did not we rely on thee,
O Christ, for whole Salvation?

LXXXII. 69

“We did believe, and oft receive thy gracious Promises;
We took great care to get a share in endless Happiness.
We pray’d and wept, and Fast-days kept,
lewd ways we did eschew;
We joyful were thy Word to hear;
we form’d our lives anew.

LXXXIII. 70

“We thought our sin had pardon’d been,
that our Estate was good,
Our debts all paid, our peace well made,
our Souls wash’d with thy Blood.
Lord, why dost thou reject us now,
who have not thee rejected, Nor utterly true sanctity and holy life neglected?”

The Judge uneaseth them.

LXXXIV. 71

The Judge incens’d at their pretens’d self-vaunting Piety,
With such a look as trembling strook unto them made reply: “O impudent, impenitent, and guileful generation!
Think you that I cannot descry your hearts’ abomination?”

LXXXV. 72

“You nor receiv’d, nor yet believ’d my Promises of Grace,

Nor were you wise enough to prize
my reconciléd Face;
But did presume that to assume which was not yours to take,
And challengéd the Children's Bread, yet would not sin forsake.

LXXXVI. 73

“Being too bold you laid fast hold where int'rest you had none, Yourselves deceiving by your believing,
all which you might have known.
You ran away but ran astray with Gospel Promises, And perishéd, being still dead in sins and trespasses.

LXXXVII. 74

“How oft did I Hypocrisy and Hearts' deceits unmask Before your sight, giving you light know a Christian's task?
But you held fast unto the last your own conceits so vain, No warning could prevail; you would your own Deceits retain.

LXXXVIII. 75

“As for your care to get a share in Bliss; the fear of Hell,
And of a part in endless smart,
did thereunto compel.
Your holiness and ways redress,
such as it was, did spring

From no true love to things above,
But from some other thing.

LXXXIX. 76

“You pray’d and wept, you Fast-days kept,
but did you this to me?
No, but for sin you sought to win
the greater liberty.
For all your vaunts, you had vile haunts, which for your Consciences Did you alarm, whose voice to charm you us’d these practices.

XC. 77

“Your Penitence, your diligence to Read, to Pray, to Hear,
Were but to drown the clam’rous sound of Conscience in your Ear.
If light you lov’d, vain glory mov’d yourselves therewith to store,
That seeming wise men might you prize,
and honor you the more.

XCI. 78

“Thus from yourselves unto yourselves, your duties all do tend;
And as self-love the wheels doth move,
so in self-love they end.”
Thus Christ detects their vain projects, and close Impiety,
And plainly shews that all their shows were but Hypocrisy.

Civil honest men’s pleas.

XCII. 79

Then were brought nigh a Company of Civil honest Men,
That lov'd true dealing and hated stealing,
ne'er wrong'd their Bretheren;
Who pleaded thus: "Thou knowest us that we were blameless livers;
No Whoremongers, no Murderers, no quarrelers nor strivers.

XCIII.

"Idolaters, Adulterers,
Church-robbers we were none,
Nor false dealers, nor cozeners,
but paid each man his own.
Our way was fair, our dealing square,
we were no wasteful spenders,
No lewd toss-pots, no drunken sots, no scandalous offenders.

XCIV. 80

"We hated vice and set great price,
by virtuous conversation;
And by the same we got a name and no small commendation.
God's Laws express that righteousness is that which he doth prize;
And to obey, as he doth say,
is more than sacrifice.

XCV. 81

"Thus to obey hath been our way;
let our good deeds, we pray, Find some regard and some reward with thee, Lord, this day.

And whereas we transgressors be,
of Adam's race were none,
No, not the best, but have confess'd themselves to have misdome."

Are taken off and rendered invalid.

XCVI. 82

Then answeréd unto their dread,
the Judge: "True Piety God doth desire and eke require,
no less than honesty.
Justice demands at all your hands perfect Obedience;
If but in part you have come short,
that is a just offense.

XCVII.

"On Earth below, where men did owe a thousand pounds and more.
Could twenty pence it recompense?
Could that have clear'd the score?
Think you to buy Felicity with part of what's due debt?
Or for desert of one small part,
the whole should off be set?

XCVIII. 83

"And yet that part whose great desert
you think to reach so far,
For your excuse doth you accuse,
and will your boasting mar.
However fair, however square your way and work hath been Before men's eyes, yet God espies iniquity therein.

XCIX. 84

“God looks upon th’ affecti-on and temper of the heart;
Not only on the acti-on,
and the external part.
Whatever end vain men pretend,
God knows the verity,
And by the end which they intend their words and deeds doth try.

C. 85

“Without true Faith, the Scripture saith, God cannot take delight
In any deed that doth proceed from any sinful wight.
And without love all actions prove but barren empty things;
Dead works they be and vanity,
the which vexation brings.

CI.

“Nor from true Faith, which quencheth wrath, hath your obedience flown;
Nor from true Love, which wont to move Believers, hath it grown.
Your argument shews your intent
in all that you have done;
You thought to scale Heav’n’s lofty Wall
by Ladders of your own.

CII. 86

“Your blinded spirit hoping to merit
by your own Righteousness, Needed no Savior but your behavior, and blameless carriages.
You trusted to what you could do,
and in no need you stood;
Your haughty pride laid me aside.
And trampled on my Blood.

CIII. 87

“All men have gone astray, and done that which God’s laws condemn;
But my Purchase and offer’d Grace
All men did not contemn.
The Ninevites and Sodomites had no such sin as this;
Yet as if all your sins were small,
you say, ‘All did amiss.’

CIV. 88

“Again you thought and mainly sought a name with men t’ acquire;
Pride bare the Bell that made you swell,
and your own selves admire.
Mean fruit it is, and vile, I wiss, that springs from such a root; Virtue divine and genuine wonts not from pride to shoot.

CV. 89

“Such deeds as your are worse than poor; they are but sins gilt over With silver dross, whose glist’ring gloss can them no longer cover.
The best of them would you condemn,

and ruin you alone.
Although you were from faults so clear,
that other you had none.

CVI. 90

“Your gold is brass, your silver dross, your righteousness is sin;
And think you by such honesty
Eternal life to win?
You much mistake, if for its sake
you dream of acceptation;
Whereas the same deserveth shame and meriteth damnation.”

Those that pretend want of opportunity to repent.

CVII. 91

A wondrous crowd then ’gan aloud
thus for themselves to say:
“We did intend, Lord, to amend,
and to reform our way.
Our true intent was to repent and make our peace with thee;
But sudden death stopping our breath, left us no liberty.

CVIII.

“Short was our time, for in its prime our youthful pow’r was cropt;
We died in youth before full growth,
so was our purpose stopt.
Let our good will to turn from ill,
and sin to have forsaken,

Accepted be, Lord, by thee, and in good part be taken.“

Are confuted and convicted.

CIX. 92

To whom the Judge: “Where you allege the shortness of the space,
That from your birth you liv’d on earth,
to compass saving Grace,
It was Free Grace that any space was given you at all,
To turn from evil, defy the Devil,
and upon God to call.

CX. 93

“One day, one week wherein to seek God’s face with all your hearts,
A favor was that far did pass
the best of your deserts.
You had a season; what was your reason such precious hours to waste?
What could you find, what could you mind that was of greater haste?

CXI. 94

“Could you find time for vain pastime, for loose, licentious mirth?
For fruitless toys and fading joys,
that perish in the birth?
Had you good leisure for carnal Pleasure, in days of health and youth?
And yet no space to seek God’s face,
and turn to him in truth?

CXII. 95

“In younger years, beyond your fears, what if you were surprizéd?
You put away the evil day,
and of long life deviséd.
You oft were told, and might behold,
that Death no Age doth spare;
Why then did you your time foreslow, and slight your soul’s welfare?”

CXIII. 96

“Had your intent been to repent, and had you it desir’d,
There would have been endeavors seen before your time expir’d.
God makes no treasure, nor hath he pleasure in idle purposes;
Such fair pretenses are foul offenses, and cloaks for wickedness.”

Some plead examples of their betters.

CXIV. 97

Then were brought in and charg’d with sin, another Company,
Who by Petition obtain’d permission to make Apology.
They arguéd, “We were misled,
as is well known to thee.
By their example that had more ample abilities than we;

CXV. 98

“Such, as profess’d they did detest and hate each wicked way;
Whose seeming grace whilst we did trace,
our Souls were led astray.
When men of Parts, Learning, and Arts, professing Piety,
Did thus and thus, it seem’d to us
we might take liberty.”

Who are told that examples are no Rules.

CXVI. 99

The Judge replies: “I gave you eyes,
And light to see your way,
Which had you lov’d and well improv’d,
you had not gone astray.
My Word was pure, the Rule was sure;
Why did you it forsake,
Or thereon trample, and men’s example your Directory make?

CXVII. 100

“This you well knew: that God is true, and that most men are liars,
In word professing holiness, in deed thereof deniers.
simple fools! that having Rules,
your lives to regulate.
Would them refuse, and rather choose vile men to imitate.”

They urge that they were led by godly men’s Examples. But all their shifts turn to their greater shame.

CXVIII.

“But, Lord,” say they, “we went astray, and did more wickedly,
By means of those whom thou has chose Salvation’s heirs to be.”
To whom the Judge: “What you allege doth nothing help the case, But makes appear how vile you were,
and rend’r eth you more base.

CXIX. 101

“You understood that what was good,
was to be followéd.
And that you ought that which was naught to have relinquished.
Contrariwise it was your guise only to imitate
Good men’s defects, and their neglects who were regenerate.

CXX. 102

“But to express their holiness, or imitate their grace.
You little car’d, nor once prepar’d your hearts to seek my Face.
They did repent and truly rent their hearts for all known sin;
You did offend, but not amend,
to follow them therein.”

Some plead the Scripture’s darkness, and difference among Interpreters.

CXXI. 103

“We had thy Word,” say some, “Lord, but wiser men than we Could never yet interpret it,
but always disagree.
How could we fools be led by Rules
so far beyond our ken.
Which to explain did so much pain and puzzle wisest men?”

They are confuted.

CXXII. 104

“Was all my Word abstruse and hard?”
the Judge then answeréd;
“It did contain much Truth so plain you might have run and read.
But what was hard you never car’d to know, or studiéd;
And things that were most plain and clear you never practiséd.

CXXIII. 105

“The Mystery of Piety
God unto Babes reveals,
When to the Wise he it denies,
and from the world conceals.
If to fulfil God’s holy Will had seemed good to you,
You would have sought light as you ought,
and done the good you knew.”

Others the fear of persecution.

CXXIV. 106

Then came in view another crew,
and 'gan to make their pleas;
Amongst the rest, some of the best had such poor shifts as these:
“Thou know'st right well, who all canst tell,
we liv'd amongst thy foes.
Who the Renate did sorely hate and goodness much oppose.

CXXV. 107

“We holiness durst not profess, fearing to be forlorn
Of all our friends, and for amends to be the wicked's scorn.
We knew their anger would much endanger our lives and our estates; Therefore, for fear, we durst appear no better than our mates.”

They are answered.

CXXVI. 108

To whom the Lord returns this word:
“O wonderful deceits!
To cast off awe of God's strict law,
and fear men's wrath and threats;
To fear hell-fire and God's fierce ire less than the rage of men;
As if God's wrath could do less scath than wrath of bretheren!

CXXVII.

“To use such strife, a temp'ral life to rescue and secure,

And be so blind as not to mind that life that will endure!
This was your case, who carnal peace more than true joys did savor;
Who fed on dust, clave to your lust,
and spurned at my favor.

CXXVIII. 109

“To please your kin, men’s love to win,
to flow in worldly wealth,
To save your skin, these things have been more than Eternal health.
You had your choice, wherein rejoice;
it was your porti-on.
For which you chose your souls t’ expose unto Perditi-on.

CXXIX. 110

“Who did not hate friends, life, and state, with all things else for me, forsake and’s Cross up-take shall never happy be.
Well worthy they to die for aye, who death than life had rather;
Death is their due that so value
the friendship of my Father.”

Others plead for pardon from God’s Mercy and Justice.

CXXX. 111

Others plead Others argue, and not a few,
“Is not God graci-ous?
His Equity and Clemency,
are they not marvellous?

Thus we believ'd; are we deceiv'd?
Cannot his Mercy great,
(As hath been told to us of old,) assuage his anger's heat?

CXXXI.

“How can it be that God should see his Creatures' endless pain.
Or hear their groans and rueful moans, and still his wrath retain?
Can it agree with Equity, can Mercy have the heart.
To recompense few years' offense with everlasting smart?

CXXXII. 112

“Can God delight in such a sight as sinners' misery?
Or what great good can this our blood
bring unto the most High?
O thou that dost thy Glory most in pard'ning sin display, Lord, might it please thee to release and pardon us this day!

CXXXIII.

“Unto thy name more glorious fame would not such Mercy bring?
Would not it raise thine endless praise,
more than our suffering?“
With that they cease, holding their peace, but cease not still to weep;
Grief ministers a flood of tears,
in which their words do steep.

They are answered.

CXXXIV.

But all too late; grief's out of date,
when Life is at an end.
The glorious King thus answering,
all to his voice attend:
"God gracious is," quoth he; "like his,
no mercy can be found:
His Equity and Clemency
to sinners do abound,

Mercy now shines forth in the vessels of Mercy.

CXXXV. 113

"As may appear by those that here are plac'd at my right hand, Whose stripes I bore, and clear'd the score,
that they might quitted stand.
For surely none but God alone,
whose Grace transcends men's thought.
For such as those that were his foes like wonders would have wrought.

Did also wait upon such as abused it.

CXXXVI. 114

"And none but he such lenity and patience would have shown To you so long, who did him wrong, and pull'd his Judgment down.
How long a space, stiff-neck'd race,
did patience you afford?

How oft did love you gently move,
to turn unto the Lord?

The day of Grace now past

CXXXVII. 115

“With chords of love God often strove your stubborn hearts to tame; Nevertheless your wickedness did still resist the same.
If now at last Mercy be past from you for evermore,
And Justice come in Mercy’s room, yet grudge you not therefore.

CXXXVIII. 116

“If into wrath God turnéd hath his long, long-suffering,
And now for love you vengeance prove,
is an equal thing.
Your waxing worse hath stopt the course of wonted Clemency, Mercy refus’d and Grace misus’d call for severity.

CXXXIX. 117

“It’s now high time that ev’ry Crime be brought to punishment;
Wrath long contain’d and oft restrain’d,
at last must have a vent.
Justice severe cannot forbear to plague sin any longer, But must inflict with hand most strict mischief upon the wronger.

CXL. 118

“In vain do they for Mercy pray, the season being past,
Who had no care to get a share therein, while time did last.
The man whose ear refus’d to hear the voice of Wisdom’s cry, Earn’d this reward, that none regard him in his misery.

CXLI. 119

“It doth agree with Equity and with God’s holy Law, That those should die eternally that Death upon them draw.
The soul that sins Damnation wins,
for so the Law ordains;
Which Law is just; and therefore must such suffer endless pains.

CXLII. 120

“Eternal smart is the desert
ev’n of the least offense;
Then wonder not if I allot to you this Recompense;
But wonder more that since so sore and lasting plagues are due To every sin, you liv’d therein, who well the danger knew.

CXLIII. 121

“God hath no joy to crush or ’stroy, and ruin wretched wights;
But to display the glorious Ray of Justice he delights.

To manifest he doth detest,
and throughly hate all sin,
By plaguing it as is most fit—
this shall him Glory win.“

Some pretend they were shut out of Heaven by God's Decree.

CXLIV. 122

Then at the Bar arraignéd are an impudenter sort,
Who to evade the guilt that's laid Upon them, thus retort:
“How could we cease thus to transgress?
How could we Hell avoid,
Whom God's Decree shut out from thee, and sign'd to be destroy'd ?

CXLV. 123

“Whom God ordains to endless pains
by Law unalterable, Repentance true, Obedience new,
to save such are unable.
Sorrow for sin no good can win,
to such as are rejected;
Nor can they grieve nor yet believe,
that never were elected.

CXLVI.

“Of Man's fall'n race, who can true Grace or Holiness obtain?
Who can convert or change his heart,
if God withhold the same?
Had we applied ourselves and tried as much as who did most,

God's love to gain, our busy pain and labor had been lost."

Their pleas taken off.

CXLVII. 124

Christ readily makes this Reply:
"I damn you not because You are rejected, nor yet elected;
but you have broke my Laws.
It is in vain your wits to strain
the end and means to sever; Men fondly seek to part or break
what God hath link'd together.

CXLVIII. 125

"Whom God will save, such he will have the means of life to use;
Whom he'll pass by shall choose to die,
and ways of life refuse.
He that fore-sees and fore-decrees, in wisdom order'd has.
That man's free-will, electing ill, shall bring his Will to pass.

CXLIX. 126

"High God's Decree, as it is free, so doth it none compel Against their will to good or ill;
it forceth none to Hell.
They have their wish whose Souls perish with Torments in Hell-fire,

Who rather choose their souls to lose,
than leave a loose desire.

CL. 127

“God did ordain sinners to pain, yet he to Hell sends none
But such as swerv’d and have deserv’d destruction as their own.
His pleasure is, that none from Bliss and endless happiness
Be barr’d, but such as wrong’d him much by willful wickedness.

CLI. 128

“You, sinful Crew! no other knew but you might be elect;
Why did you then yourselves condemn?
Why did you me reject?
Where was your strife to gain that life which lasteth evermore?
You never knock’d, yet say God lock’d against you Heaven’s door.

CLII. 129

“’Twas no vain task to knock and ask, whilst life continuéd.
Who ever sought Heav’n as he ought,
and seeking perishéd?
The lowly, meek, who truly seek for Christ and for Salvation, There’s no decree whereby such be ordain’d to condemnation.

CLIII. 130

You argue then: 'But abject men, whom God resolves to spill, Cannot repent, nor their hearts rent;
nor can they change their will.'
Not for his Can is any man
adjudgéd unto Hell,
But for his Will to do what's ill,
and nilling to do well.

CLIV. 131

"I often stood tend'ring my Blood to wash away your guilt,
And eke my Sprite to frame you right,
lest your Souls should be spilt.
But you, vile Race, rejected Grace,
when Grace was freely proflfer'd,
No changéd heart, no heav'nly part would you, when it was offer' d.

CLV. 132

"Who willfully the remedy,
and means of life contemnéd.
Cause have the same themselves to blame,
if now they be condemnéd.
You have yourselves, you and none else,
to blame that you must die
You chose the way to your decay, and perish'd willfully."

CLVI.

These words appall and daunt them all,
dismay'd and all amort,
Like stocks that stand at Christ's left hand and dare no more retort.
Then were brought near with trembling fear,

a number numberless,
Of Blind Heathen and brutish men,
that did God's Law transgress;

Heathen men plead want of the Written Word.

CLVII.

Whose wicked ways Christ open lays,
and makes their sins appear,
They making pleas their case to ease,
if not themselves to clear.
"Thy Written Word," say they, "good Lord,
we never did enjoy;
We ne'er refus'd, nor it abus'd;
Oh, do not us destroy!"

CLVIII. 133

"You ne'er abus'd, nor yet refus'd
my Written Word, you plead; That's true," quoth he, "therefore shall ye the less be punishéd.
You shall not smart for any part of other men's offense, But for your own transgressi-on receive due recompense."

Insufficiency of the light of Nature.

CLIX. 134

"But we were blind," say they, "in mind;
too dim was Nature's Light,
Our only guide, as hath been tried,
to bring us to the sight
Of our estate degenerate,

and curs'd by Adam's Fall;
How we were born and lay forlorn in bondage and in thrall.

CLX. 135

“We did not know a Christ till now, nor how fall'n men be savéd, Else would we not, right well we wot,
have so ourselves behaved.
We should have mourn'd, we should have turn'd from sin at thy Reproof,
And been more wise through thy advice,
for our own soul's behoof.

They are answered.

CLXI.

“But Nature's light shin'd not so bright to teach us the right way:
We might have lov'd it and well improv'd it,
and yet have gone astray.“
The Judge most High makes this Reply:
“You ignorance pretend.
Dimness of sight, and want of light,
your course Heav'nward to bend.

CLXII. 136

“How came your mind to be so blind?
I once you knowledge gave.
Clearness of sight and judgment light:
who did the same deprave?
If to your cost you have it lost,
and quite defac'd the same,

Your own desert hath caus'd the smart;
you ought not me to blame.

CLXIII. 137

“Yourself into a pit of woe, your own transgression led;
If I to none my Grace had shown who had been injured?
If to a few, and not to you,
I shew'd a way of life,
My Grace so free, you clearly see,
gives you no ground of strife.

CLXIV. 138

“’Tis vain to tell, you wot fall well, if you in time had known
Your misery and remedy,
your actions had it shown:
You, sinful Crew, have not been true unto the Light of Nature, Nor done the good you understood,
nor ownéd your Creator.

CLXV. 139

“He that the Light, because ’tis slight, hath uséd to despise,
Would not the Light shining more bright,
be likely for to prize.
If you had lov’d, and well improv’d your knowledge and dim sight, Herein your pain had not been vain,
your plagues had been more light.”

Reprobate Infants plead for themselves.

CLXVI. 140

Then to the Bar all they drew near
Who died in infancy,
And never had or good or bad effected pers'nally;
But from the womb unto the tomb were straightway carriéd, (Or at the least ere they transgress'd) who thus began to plead:

CLXVII.

“If for our own transgressi-on,
or disobedience.
We here did stand at thy left hand,
just were the Recompense;
But Adam's guilt our souls hath spilt,
his fault is charg'd upon us;
And that alone hath overthrown and utterly undone us.

CLXVIII.

“Not we, but he ate of the Tree, whose fruit was interdicted;
Yet on us all of his sad Fall
the punishment's inflicted.
How could we sin that had not been,
or how is his sin our,
Without consent, which to prevent we never had the pow'r?

CLXIX. 141

“O great Creator why was our Nature depravéd and forlorn?
Why so defil'd, and made so vil'd,

whilst we were jet unborn?
If it be just, and needs we must transgressors reckon'd be.
Thy Mercy, Lord, to us afford, which sinners hath set free.

CLXX.

“Behold we see Adam set free,
and sav'd from his trespass, Whose sinful Fall hath split us all,
and brought us to this pass.
Canst thou deny us once to try,
or Grace to us to tender,
When he finds grace before thy face,
who was the chief offender?”

Their arguments taken off.

CLXXI. 142

Then answer'd the Judge most dread:
God doth such doom forbid,
That men should die eternally for what they never did.
But what you call old Adam's Fall,
and only his Trespass,
You call amiss to call it his,
both his and yours it was.

CLXXII. 143

“He was design'd of all Mankind to be a public Head;
A common Root, whence all should shoot,
and stood in all their stead.
He stood and fell, did ill or well,

not for himself alone.
But for you all, who now his Fall and trespass would disown.

CLXXIII.

“If he had stood, then all his brood had been establishéd
In God’s true love never to move,
nor once awry to tread;
Then all his Race my Father’s Grace should have enjoy’d for ever.
And wicked Sprites by subtile sleights could them have harméd never.

CLXXIV.

Would you have griev’d to have receiv’d through Adam so much good,
As had been your for evermore,
if he at first had stood?
Would you have said, ‘We ne’er obey’d nor did thy laws regard;
It ill befits with benefits, us, Lord, to so reward?’

CLXXV. 144

“Since then to share in his welfare, you could have been content,
You may with reason share in his treason,
and in the punishment.
Hence you were born in state forlorn, with Natures so depravéd; Death was your due because that yo had thus yourselves behavéd.

CLXXVI. 145

“You think ’If we had been as he whom God did so betrust,
We to our cost would ne’er have lost all for a paltry lust.’
Had you been made in Adam’s stead,
you would like things have wrought,
And so into the self-same woe, yourselves and yours have brought.

The free gift.

CLXXVII. 146

“I may deny you once to try,
or Grace to you to tender.
Though he finds Grace before my face
who was the chief offender;
Else should my Grace cease to be Grace,
for it would not be free,
If to release whom I should please
I have no liberty.

CLXXVIII.

“If upon one what’s due to none.
I frankly shall bestow,
And on the rest shall not think best compassion’s skirt to throw, Whom injure I? will you envy and grudge at others’ weal?
Or me accuse, who do refuse yourselves to help and heal ?

CLXXIX. 147

“Am I alone of what’s my own, no Master or no Lord?

And if I am, how can you claim
what I to some afford?
Will you demand Grace at my hand,
and challenge what is mine?
Will you teach me whom to set free,
and thus my Grace confine?

CLXXX. 148

“You sinners are, and such a share as sinners, may expect;
Such you shall have, for I do save none but mine own Elect.
Yet to compare your sin with their who liv’d a longer time,
I do confess yours is much less,
though every sin’s a crime.

The wicked all convinced and put to silence.

CLXXXI. 149

“A crime it is, therefore in bliss
you may not hope to dwell;
But unto you I shall allow
The easiest room in Hell.”
The glorious King thus answering,
they cease, and plead no longer;
Their Consciences must needs confess his Reasons are the stronger.

Behold the formidable estate of all the ungodly as they stand hopeless and helpless before an impartial Judge, expecting their final Sentence.

CLXXXII. 150

Thus all men's pleas the Judge with ease doth answer and confute, Until that all, both great and small,
are silencéd and mute.
Vain hopes are cropt, all mouths are stopt,
sinners have naught to say,
But that 'tis just and equal most they should be damn'd for aye.

CLXXXIII.

Now what remains, but that to pains and everlasting smart, Christ should condemn the sons of men,
which is their just desert?
Oh rueful plights of sinful wights!
Oh wretches all forlorn!
'T had happy been they ne'er had seen the sun, or not been born.

CLXXXIV.

Yea now it would be good they could themselves annihilate.
And cease to be, themselves to free from such a fearful state.
O happy Dogs, and Swine, and Frogs, yea, Serpent's generation!
Who do not fear this doom to hear,
and sentence of Damnation!

CLXXXV. 151

This is their state so desperate;
their sins are fully known;
Their vanities and villanies before the world are shown.
As they are gross and impious,

so are their numbers more Than motes in th' Air, or than their hair, or sands upon the shore.

CLXXXVI. 152

Divine Justice offended is,
and satisfaction claimeth;
God's wrathful ire, kindled like fire.
against them fiercely flameth.
Their Judge severe doth quite cashier,
and all their pleas off take,
That ne'er a man, or dare, or can a further answer make.

CLXXXVII. 153

Their mouths are shut, each man is put to silence and to shame,
Nor have they aught within their thought,
Christ's Justice for to blame.
The Judge is just, and plague them must,
nor will he Mercy shew,
For Mercy's day is past away to any of this Crew.

CLXXXVIII. 154

The Judge is strong, doers of wrong cannot his pow'r withstand; None can by flight run out of sight,
nor 'scape out of his hand.
Sad is their state; for Advocate, to plead their cause, there's none;
None to prevent their punishment, or mis'ry to bemoan.

CLXXXIX. 155

O dismal day! whither shall they for help and succor flee?
To God above with hopes to move their greatest Enemy?
His wrath is great, whose burning heat
no floods of tears can slake;
His Word stands fast that they be cast into the burning Lake.

CXC. 156

To Christ their Judge? He doth adjudge them to the Pit of Sorrow;
Nor will he hear, or cry or tear,
nor respite them one morrow.
To Heav'n, alas! they cannot pass,
it is against them shut;
To enter there (O heavy cheer) they out of hopes are put.

CXCI. 157

Unto their Treasures, or to their Pleasures?
All these have them forsaken;
Had they full coffers to make large offers,
their gold would not be taken.
Unto the place where whilom was their birth and Education?
Lo! Christ begins for their great sins, to fire the Earth's Foundation;

CXCII. 158

And by and by the flaming Sky shall drop like molten Lead About their ears, t' increase their fears, and aggravate their dread.
To Angel's good that ever stood in their integrity, Should they betake themselves, and make their suit incessantly?

CXCIII. 159

They've neither skill, nor do they will
to work them any ease;
They will not mourn to see them burn,
nor beg for their release.
To wicked men, their bretheren in sin and wickedness, Should they make moan? Their case is one;
they're in the same distress.

CXCIV. 160

Ah! cold comfort and mean support, from such like Comforters!
Ah! little joy of Company, and fellow-sufferers!
Such shall increase their heart's disease,
and add unto their woe,
Because that they brought to decay themselves and many moe.

CXCV. 161

Unto the Saints with sad complaints should they themselves apply?
They're not dejected nor aught affected with all their misery.
Friends stand aloof and make no proof
what Prayers or Tears can do;
Your Godly friends are now more friends to Christ than unto you.

CXCVI. 162

Where tender love men's hearts did move unto a sympathy,
And bearing part of others' smart
in their anxiety,
Now such compassion is out of fashion,
and wholly laid aside;
No friends so near, but Saints to hear their Sentence can abide.

CXCVII. 163

One natural Brother beholds another in his astonied fit.
Yet sorrows not thereat a jot,
nor pities him a whit.
The godly Wife conceives no grief
nor can she shed a tear
For the sad state of her dear Mate, when she his doom doth hear.

CXCVIII.

He that was erst a Husband pierc'd with sense of Wife's distress.
Whose tender heart did bear a part of all her grievances, Shall mourn no more as heretofore,
because of her ill plight.
Although he see her now to be a damn'd forsaken wight.

CXCIX. 164

The tender Mother will own no other of all her num'rous brood,
But such as stand at Christ's right hand, acquitted through his Blood.
The pious Father had now much rather his graceless Son should lie In Hell with Devils, for all his evils, burning eternally,

CC. 165

Than God most High should injury
by sparing him sustain;
And doth rejoice to hear Christ's voice, adjudging him to pain.
Thus having all, both great and small,
convinc'd and silenc'd,
Christ did proceed their Doom to read,
and thus it utteréd:

The Judge pronounceth the sentence of condemnation.

CCI. 166

*“Ye sinful wights and curséd sprights, that work iniquity, Depart together from me for ever to endless Misery;
Your portion take in yonder Lake,
where Fire and Brimstone flameth; Suffer the smart which your desert,
as its due wages claimeth.”*

The terror of it.

CCII.

Oh piercing words, more sharp than swords!
What! to depart from Thee, Whose face before for evermore
the best of Pleasures be!
What! to depart (unto our smart),

from thee Eternally!
To be for aye banish'd away with Devils' company!

CCIII.

What! to be sent to Punishment, and flames of burning Fire!
To be surrounded, and eke confounded with God's revengeful Ire!
What! to abide, not for a tide,
these Torments, but for Ever!
To be releas'd, or to be eas'd, not after years, but Never!

CCIV.

Oh fearful Doom! now there's no room for hope or help at all;
Sentence is past which aye shall last;
Christ will not it recall.
Then might you hear them rend and tear
the Air with their out-cries;
The hideous noise of their sad voice ascendeth to the Skies.

CCV. 167

They wring their hands, their caitiff-hands, and gnash their teeth for terror;
They cry, they roar for anguish sore,
and gnaw their tongues for horror.
But get away without delay,
Christ pities not your cry;
Depart to Hell, there may you yell, and roar Eternally.

It is put in Execution.

CCVI. 168

That word “Depart,” maugre their heart, drives every wicked one,
With mighty pow’r, the self-same hour,
far from the Judge’s Throne.
Away they’re chas’d by the strong blast of his Death-threat’ning mouth;
They flee full fast, as if in haste,
although they be full loath.

CCVII. 169

As chaff that’s dry, as dust doth fly before the Northern wind.
Right so are they chaséd away,
and can no Refuge find.
They hasten to the Pit of Woe, guarded by Angels stout.
Who to fulfil Christ’s holy Will, attend this wickéd Rout;

HELL.

CCVIII. 170

Whom having brought as they are taught,
unto the brink of Hell, (That dismal place, far from Christ’s face,
where Death and Darkness dwell,
Where God’s fierce Ire kindleth the fire, and vengeance feeds the flame.
With piles of Wood and Brimstone Flood, so none can quench the same,)

Wicked men and Devils cast into it forever.

CCIX. 171

With Iron bands they bind their hands and curséd feet together,
And cast them all, both great and small,
into that Lake forever,
Where day and night, without respite,
they wail, and cry and howl,
For tort'ring pain which they sustain, in Body and in Soul.

CCX. 172

For day and night, in their despite, their torment's smoke ascendeth.
Their pain and grief have no relief, their anguish never endeth.
There must they lie and never die,
though dying every day;
There must they dying ever lie,
and not consume away.

CCXI.

Die fain they would if die they could,
but Death will not be had;
God's direful wrath their bodies hath forev'r immortal made.
They live to lie in misery,
and bear eternal woe;
And live they must whilst God is just,
that he may plague them so.

The unsufferable torments of the Damned.

CCXII. 173

But who can tell the plagues of Hell, and torments exquisite?
Who can relate their dismal state,
and terrors infinite?
Who fare the best and feel the least,
yet feel that punishment Whereby to nought they would be brought if God did not prevent.

CCXIII. 174

The least degree of misery
there felt is incomparable;
The lightest pain they there sustain is more than intolerable.
But God's great pow'r from hour to hour upholds them in the fire,
That they shall not consume a jot nor by its force expire.

CCXIV. 175

But, ah, the woe they undergo (they more than all beside) Who had the light, and knew the right, yet would not it abide!
The sev'n fold smart which to their part and porti-on doth fall.
Who Christ's free Grace would not embrace, nor hearken to his call.

CCXV. 176

The Amorites and Sodomites, although their plagues be sore,
Yet find some ease compar'd to these,
who feel a great deal more.
Almighty God, whose Iron Rod, to smite them never lins.

Doth most declare his Justice rare in plaguing these men's sins.

CCXVI. 177

The pain of loss their souls doth toss, and wond'rously distress,
To think what they have cast away
by willful wickedness.
“We might have been redeem'd from sin,” think they, “and liv'd above.
Being possesst of Heav'nly rest, and joying in God's love

CCXVII. 178

“But woe, woe, woe, our Souls unto!
we would not happy be;
And therefore bear God's vengeance here to all Eternity.
Experience and woful sense must be our painful teachers, Who'd not believe, nor credit give unto our faithful Preachers.”

CCXVIII. 179

Thus shall they lie and wail and cry, tormented and tormenting;
Their galléd hearts with poison'd darts,
but now too late repenting.
There let them dwell in th' Flames of Hell:
there leave we them to burn,
And back again unto the men whom Christ acquits, return.

The Saints rejoice to see the Judgment executed upon the Wicked World.

CCXIX. 180

The Saints behold with courage bold and thankful wonderment,
To see all those that were their foes
thus sent to punishment.
Then do they sing unto their King
a Song of endless Praise;
They praise his Name and do proclaim that just are all his ways.

They ascend with Christ into Heaven triumphing.

CCXX. 181

Thus with great joy and melody to Heav'n they all ascend, Him there to praise with sweetest lays,
and Hymns that never end;
Where with long rest they shall be blest,
and naught shall them annoy,
Where they shall see as seen they be,
and whom they love enjoy.

Their eternal happiness and incomparable glory there.

CCXXI. 182

Oh glorious Place! where face to face
Jehovah may be seen,
By such as were sinners while here,
and no dark veil between!
Where the Sunshine and light Divine of God's bright countenance, Doth rest upon them every one,

with sweetest influence!

CCXXII. 183

Oh blessed state of the Renate!
Oh wond'rous happiness.
To which they're brought beyond what thought can reach or words express!
Grief's watercourse and sorrow's source are turn'd to joyful streams;
Their old distress and heaviness are vanished like dreams.

CCXXIII. 184

For God above in arms of love doth dearly them embrace.
And fills their sprights with such delights,
and pleasures in his Grace,
As shall not fail, nor yet grow stale,
through frequency of use;
Nor do they fear God's favor there to forfeit by abuse.

CCXXIV. 185

For there the Saints are perfect Saints, and holy ones indeed;
From all the sin that dwelt within their mortal bodies freed; Made Kings and Priests to God through Christ's
dear Love's transcendency,
There to remain and there to reign with him Eternally.

A Short Discourse On Eternity.

What mortal man can with a Span mete out Eternity?
Or fathom it by depth of Wit, or strength of Memory?
The lofty Sky is not so high,
Hell's depth to this is small;
The World so wide is but a stride, comparéd therewithal.

It is a main great Oce-an withouten bank or bound,
A deep Abyss, wherein there is no bottom to be found.
This World hath stood now since the Flood,
four thousand years well near,
And had before endured more than sixteen hundred year.

But what's the time from the World's prime,
unto this present day,
If we thereby Eternity
to measure should essay?
The whole duration since the Creation, though long, yet is more little.
If placed by Eternity, than is the smallest tittle.

Tell every Star both near and far,
in Heav'n's bright Canopy That doth appear throughout the year of high or low degree:
Tell every Tree that thou canst see in this vast Wilderness,

Up in the Woods, down by the Floods,
in thousand miles Progress:

The sum is vast, yet not so vast but that thou may'st go on To multiply the leaves thereby, that hang those Trees upon:
Add thereunto the Drops that thou imaginest to be In April Show'rs, that bring forth Flow'rs and blossoms plenteously:

Number the Fowls and living Souls that through the Air do fly,
The wingéd Hosts in all their Coasts beneath the starry Sky:
Count all the Grass as thou dost pass through many a pasture-land, And dewy Drops that on the tops of Herbs and Plants do stand:

Number the Sand upon the Strand,
and atoms of the Air;
And do thy best on Man and Beast,
to reckon every Hair:
Take all the Dust, if so thou lust,
and add to thine Account:
Yet shall the Years of Sinners' tears,
the Number far surmount.

Naught join'd to naught can ne'er make aught,
nor Cyphers make a Sum;
Nor things finite, to infinite by multiplying come:
A Cockle-shell may serve as well to lade the Ocean dry
As finite things and reckonings to bound Eternity.

Oh happy they that live for aye,
with Christ in Heav'n above!
Who know withal that nothing shall deprive them of his love.

Eternity, Eternity!

Oh! were it not for thee,
The Saints in bliss and happiness could never happy be.

For if they were in any fear that this their joy might cease,
It would annoy (if not destroy) and interrupt their peace.
But being sure it shall endure
so long as God shall live;
The thoughts of this, unto their bliss,
do full perfection give.

Cheer up ye Saints amidst your wants and sorrows many a one;
Lift up the head, shake off all dread,
and moderate your moan.
Your sufferings and evil things will suddenly be past;
Your sweet Fruitions and blessed Visions, for evermore shall last.

Lament and mourn you that must burn
amidst those flaming Seas:
If once you come to such a doom,
for ever farewell ease.
O sad estate and desperate,
that never can be mended,
Until God's Will shall change, or till Eternity be ended!

If any one this Questi-on shall unto me propound:

What! have the years of Sinners' tears
no limits or no bound?

It kills our heart to think of smart,
and pains that last for ever;
And hear of fire that shall expire,
or be extinguish'd never,

I'll answer make (and let them take my words as I intend them;
For this is all the Cordi-al that here I have to lend them:) When Heav'n shall cease to flow with peace and all felicity.
Then Hell may cease to be the place of Woe and Misery.

When Heav'n is Hell, when Ill is Well,
when Virtue turns to Vice;
When Wrong is Right, when Dark is Light,
when Naught is of great price;
Then may the years of Sinners' tears and sufferings expire.
And all the Hosts of damnéd Ghosts escape out of Hell-fire.

When Christ above shall cease to love,
when God shall cease to reign
And be no more as heretofore
the World's great Sovérein;
Or not be just, or favor lust,
or in Men's sins delight;
Then wicked men (and not till then) to Heav'n may take their flight.

When God's great Power shall be brought lower,
by foreign Puissance,
Or be decay'd and weaker made through Time's continuance;

When drowsiness shall him oppress,
and lay him fast asleep,
Then sinful men may break their pen,
and out of Prison creep.

When those in Glory shall be right sorry
they may not change their place,
And wish to dwell with those in Hell,
never to see Christ's face;
Then those in pain may freedom gain and be with Glory dight:
Then Hellish fiends may be Christ's Friends, and Heirs of Heaven hight.

Then, ah! poor men! What! not till then?
No, not an hour before;
For God is just, and therefore must torment them evermore.

Eternity! Eternity!

thou mak'st hard hearts to bleed:
The thoughts of thee in misery,
do make men wail indeed.

When they remind what's still behind and ponder this word NEVER,
That they must there be made to bear
God's Vengeance for EVER:
The thought of this more bitter is than all they feel beside;
Yet what they feel, nor heart of steel,
nor flesh of brass can bide.

To lie in woe and undergo the direful pains of Hell, And know withal, that there they shall for aye and ever dwell;
And that they are from rest as far when fifty thousand year,

Twice told, are spent in punishment,
as when they first came there;

This, oh! this makes Hell's fiery flakes much more intolerable;
This makes frail wights and damnéd sprites to bear their plagues unable.
This makes men bite, for fell despite,
their very tongues in twain;
This makes them roar for great horror,
and trebleth all their pain.

A Postscript Unto The Reader.

And now, good Reader, I return again
To talk with thee who hast been at the pain
To read throughout and heed what went before;
And unto thee I'll speak a little more.
Give ear I pray thee unto what I say,
That God may hear thy voice another day.
Thou hast a Soul, my Friend, and so have I,
To save or lose; a Soul that cannot die;
A Soul of greater price than Gold or Gems;
A Soul more worth than Crowns and Diadems;
A Soul at first created like its Maker,
And of God's Image made to be partaker:
Upon the wings of noblest Faculties,
Taught for to soar above the Starry Skies,
And not to rest, until it understood Itself possesséd of the chiefest Good.
And since the Fall thy Soul retaineth still Those faculties of Reason and of Will,
But oh! how much deprav'd and out of frame,
As if they were some other's, not the same!
Thine Understanding dismally benighted,
And Reason's eye in Spir'tual things dim-sighted,
Or else stark blind; thy Will inclin'd to evil.
And nothing else; a slave unto the Devil;
That loves to live, and liveth to transgress.
But shuns the way of God and Holiness.
All thine Affections are disorderéd,
And thus by headstrong Passions are misled.
What need I tell thee of thy crooked way,
And many wicked wand'rings every day?
Or that thine own transgressi-ons are more
In number than the sands upon the Shore?

Thou art a lump of wickedness become,
And may'st with horror think upon thy Doom,
Until thy Soul be washéd in the flood
Of Christ's most dear, soul-cleansing, precious Blood.
That, that alone can do away thy sin,
Which thou wert born and hast long livéd in;
That, only that can pacify God's wrath,
If apprehended by a lively Faith,
Now whilst the day and means of Grace do last,
Before the opportunity be past.

But if, man, thou liv'st a Christless creature,
And Death surprise thee in a state of nature,
(As who can tell but that may be thy case?)
How wilt thou stand before the Judge's face,
When he shall be reveal'd in flaming fire.
And come to pay ungodly men their hire.
To execute due vengeance upon those
That knew him not, or that had been his foes?
What wilt thou answer unto his demands,
When he requires a reason at thy hands,
Of all the things that thou hast said or done.
Or left undone, or set thine heart upon?
When he shall thus with thee expostulate:
"What cause hadst thou thy Maker for to hate;
To take up arms against thy Sovéreign,
And enmity against him to maintain?
What injury hath God Almighty done thee?
What good hath he withheld that might have won thee?
What evil, or injustice hast thou found
In him that might unto thine hurt redound?
If neither felt nor fearéd injury
Hath movéd thee to such hostility,
What made thee then the Fountain to forsake,
And unto broken Pits thyself betake?
What reason hadst thou to dishonor God,
Who thee with Mercies never ceas'd to load?

Because the Lord was good hast thou been evil,
And taken part against him with the Devil?
For all his cost to pay him with despite,
And all his love with hatred to requite?
Is this the fruit of God's great patience,
To wax more bold in disobedience?
To kick against the bowels of his Love?
Is this aright his Bounty to improve?
Stand still, ye Heav'ns, and be astonishéd,
That God by man should thus be injuréd!
Give ear, Earth, and tremble at the sin
Of those that thine Inhabitants have been!
But thou, vile wretch, hast added unto all Thine other faults and facts so criminal,
The damning sin of willful unbelief;
Of all Transgressors hast thou been the chief.
Yet when time was thou might'st have been set free
From Sin and Wrath and punishment by me;
But thou would'st not accept of Gospel Grace,
Nor on my terms Eternal Life embrace.
As if that all thy breaches of God's Law
Were not enough upon thy head to draw Eternal Wrath, thou hast despis'd a Savior, Rejected me, and trampled on my favor.
How oft have I stood knocking at thy door,
And been denied entrance evermore?
How often hath my Spirit been withstood,
When as I sent him to have done thee good?
Thou hast no need of any one to plead
Thy cause or for thy Soul to intercede:
Plead for thyself, if thou hast aught to say,
And pay thy forfeiture without delay.
Behold thou dost ten thousand Talents owe;
Pay thou the debt or else to Prison go."

Think, think, man, when Christ shall thus unfold
Thy secret guilt, and make thee to behold

The ugly face of all thy sinful errors,
And fill thy soul with his amazing terrors,
And let thee see the flaming Pit of Hell,
Where all that have no part in him shall dwell;
When he shall thus expostulate the case,
How canst thou bear to look him in the face?
What wilt thou do without an Advocate,
Or plead, when thus thy state is desperate?
Dost think to put him off with fair pretenses?
Or wilt thou hide and cover thine offenses?
Can anything from him conceal'd be,
Who doth the hidden things of darkness see?
Art thou of force his Power to withstand?
Canst thou by might escape out of his hand?
Dost thou intend to run out of his sight,
And save thyself from punishment by flight?
Or wilt thou be eternally accurst,
And 'bide his Vengeance, let him do his worst?
Oh! who can bear his indignation's heat?
Or 'bide the pains of Hell which are so great?

If, then, thou neither canst his Wrath endure,
Nor any ransom after death procure;
If neither Cries nor Tears can move his heart
To pardon thee or mitigate thy smart,
But unto Hell thou must perforce be sent,
With dismal horror and astonishment,
Consider, O my Friend, what cause thou hast,
With fear and trembling (while as yet thou may'st),
To lay to heart thy sin and misery,
And to make out after the Remedy.
Consider well the greatness of thy danger,
O Child of wrath, and object of God's anger.
Thou hangest over the Infernal Pit,
By one small thread, and car'st not thou a whit?
There's but a step between thy Soul and Death;
Nothing remains but stopping of thy breath,

(Which may be done to-morrow, or before)
And then thou art undone forevermore.
Let this awaken thy security,
And make thee look about thee speedily.

How canst thou rest an hour or sleep a night,
Or in thy creature-comforts take delight?
Or with vain Toys thyself forgetful make
How near thou art unto the burning Lake?
How canst thou live without tormenting fears?
How canst thou hold from weeping floods of tears?
Yea, tears of blood, I might almost have said,
If such-like tears could from thine eyes be shed.
To gain the world what will it profit thee,
And lose thy soul and self eternally?
Eternity on one small point dependeth;
The man is lost that this short life misspendeth.
For as the Tree doth fall, right so it lies,
And man continues in what state he dies.
Who happy die shall happy rise again;
Who curséd die shall curséd still remain.
If under Sin and Wrath Death leaves thee bound,
At Judgment under Wrath thou shalt be found;
And then woe woe that ever thou wert born,
O wretched man, of Heav'n and Earth forlorn!
Consider this, all ye that God forget,
Who all his threatenings at naught do set,
Lest into pieces he begin to tear
Your souls, and there be no deliverer.

O you that now sing care and fear away,
Think often of the formidable Day,
Wherein the Heavens with a mighty noise.
And with a hideous, heart-confounding voice
Shall pass away, together being roll'd,
As men are wont their garments up to fold;
When th' Elements with fervent heat shall melt,

And living Creatures in the same shall swelt.
And altogether in those flames expire,
Which set the Earth's Foundati-ons on fire.
Oh! what amazements will your hearts be in,
And how will you to curse yourselves begin.
For all your damned sloth and negligence,
And unbelief and gross Impenitence,
When you shall hear that dreadful Sentence pass'd,
That all the wicked into Hell be cast!
What horrors will your Consciences surprise,
When you shall hear the fruitless, doleful cries
Of such as are compelléd to depart
Unto the place of everlasting smart!
What! when you see the sparks fly out of Hell,
And view the Dungeon where you are to dwell,
Wherein you must eternally remain
In anguish and intolerable pain!
What! when your hands and feet are bound together,
And you are cast into the Lake forever!
Then shall you feel the truth of what you hear,
That Hellish pains are more than you can bear,
And that those Torments are an hundred fold
More terrible than ever you were told.

Nor speak I this, good Reader, to torment thee
Before the time, but rather to prevent thee
From running headlong to thine own decay,
In such a perilous and deadly way.
We who have known and felt Jehovah's terrors,
Persuade men to repent them of their errors.
And turn to God in time ere his Decree
Bring forth, and then there be no Remedy.
If in the night, when thou art fast asleep,
Some friend of thine that better watch doth keep,
Should see thy house all on a burning flame,
And thee almost inclosed with the same:
If such a friend should break thy door and wake thee,

Or else by force out of the peril take thee,
What! wouldst thou take his kindness in ill part,
Or frown upon him for his good desert?

Such, my friend, such is thy present state
And danger, being unregenerate.
Awake, awake, and then thou shalt perceive Thy peril greater than thou wilt believe.
Lift up thine eyes, and see God's wrathful ire
Preparing unextinguishable fire
For all that live and die impenitent.
Awake, awake, Sinner, and repent,
And quarrel not because I thus alarm
Thy Soul, to save it from eternal harm.

Perhaps thou harborest such thoughts as these:
"I hope I may enjoy my carnal ease
A little longer, and myself refresh
With those delights that gratify the flesh,
And yet repent before it be too late,
And get into a comfortable state.
I hope I have yet many years to spend,
And time enough those matters to attend," Presumptuous heart! Is God engag'd to give A longer time to such as love to live
Like Rebels still, who think to strain his Glory
By wickedness, and after to be sorry?
Unto thy lust shall he be made a drudge,
Who thee and all ungodly men shall judge?
Canst thou account sin sweet, and yet confess
That first or last it ends in bitterness?
Is sin a thing that must procure thee sorrow,
And wouldst thou dally with't another morrow?

O foolish man who lovest to enjoy
That which will thee distress, or else destroy!
What gainéd Samson by his Delilah?

What gainéd David by his Bathshebah?
The one became a slave, lost both his eyes,
And made them sport that were his enemies;
The other penneth, as a certain token
Of God's displeasure, that his bones were broken,
Besides the woes he after met withal.
To chasten him for that his grievous Fall:
His own Son Ammon, using crafty wiles,
His Daughter Tamar wickedly defiles:
His second Son, more beautiful than good.
His hands embreweth in his Brother's blood:
And by and by, aspiring to the Crown,
He strives to pull his gentle Father down;
With hellish rage, him fiercely persecuting,
And brutishly his Concubines polluting.
Read whoso list, and ponder what he reads,
And he shall find small joy in evil deeds.

Moreover this consider, that the longer
Thou liv'st in sin, thy sins will grow the stronger;
And then it will an harder matter prove
To leave those wicked haunts that thou dost love.
The Black'moor may as eas'ly change his skin,
As old Transgressors leave their wonted sin.
And who can tell what will become of thee,
Or where thy Soul in one day's time may be?
We see that Death ne'er old nor young men spares,
But one and other takes at unawares;
For in a moment, whilst men Peace do cry,
Destruction seizeth on them suddenly.
Thou who this morning art a lively wight,
May'st be a corpse and damnéd Ghost ere night.

Oh! dream not then that it will serve thy turn Upon thy Death-bed for thy sins to mourn;
But think how many have been snatch'd away,
And had no time for mercy once to pray.

It's just with God Repentance to deny
To such as put it off until they die.
And late Repentance seldom proveth true,
Which, if it fail, thou know'st what must ensue;
For after this short life is at an end,
What is amiss thou never canst amend.
Believe, man, that to procrastinate,
And put it off until it be too late,
As 'tis thy sin, so it is Satan's wile,
Whereby he doth great multitudes beguile.
How many thousands hath this strong delusion Already brought to ruin and confusion,
Whose souls are now reserv'd in iron chains,
Under thick darkness to Eternal Pains!
They thought of many years, as thou dost now,
But were deceiv'd quite, and so may'st thou.

Oh! then, my friend, waste not away thy time,
Nor by rebellion aggravate thy crime.
Oh! put not off Repentance till to-morrow,
Adventure not, without God's leave, to borrow Another day to spend upon thy lust, Lest God (that is most Holy, Wise, and Just) Denounce in wrath, and to thy terror say,
"This night shall Devils fetch thy Soul away."

Now seek the face of God with all thy heart,
Acknowledge unto him how vile thou art.
Tell him thy Sins deserve eternal wrath,
And that it is a wonder that he hath Permitted thee so long to draw thy breath,
Who might have cut thee off by sudden death,
And sent thy Soul into the lowest Pit,
From whence no price should ever ransom it;
And that he may most justly do it still,
(Because thou hast deserv'd it) if he will.
Yet also tell him that, if he shall please,

He can forgive thy sins and thee release,
And that in Christ his Son he may be just
And justify all those that on him trust;
That though thy sins are of a crimson dye.
Yet Christ his Blood can cleanse thee thoroughly.
Tell him that he may make his Glorious Name
More wonderful by covering thy shame;
That Mercy may be greatly magnified,
And justice also fully satisfied.
If he shall please to own thee in his Son,
Who hath paid dear for Man's Redempti-on.
Tell him thou hast an unbelieving heart,
Which hind'reth thee from coming for a part
In Christ; and that although his terrors awe thee,
Thou canst not come till he be pleas'd to draw thee.
Tell him thou know'st thine heart to be so bad,
And thy condition so exceeding sad,
That though Salvation may be had for naught
Thou canst not come and take it till thou'rt brought.

Oh! beg of him to bow thy stubborn will
To come to Christ, that he thy lusts may kill.
Look up to Christ for his attractive pow'r,
Which he exerteth in a needful hour;
Who saith, "When as I lifted up shall be,
Then will I draw all sorts of men to me."
Oh! wait upon him with true diligence
And trembling fear in every Ordinance;
Unto his Call earnest attention give,
Whose voice makes deaf men hear and dead men live.
Thus weep and mourn, thus hearken, pray, and wait,
Till he behold and pity thine estate,
Who is more ready to bestow his Grace
Than thou the same art willing to embrace;
Yea, he hath Might enough to bring thee home,
Though thou hast neither strength nor will to come.

If he delay to answer thy request,
Know that oftentimes he doth it for the best;
Not with intent to drive us from his door,
But for to make us importune him more;
Or else to bring us daily to confess,
And be convinc'd of our unworthiness.
Oh! be not weary, then, but persevere
To beg his Grace till he thy suit shall hear;
And leave him not, nor from his footstool go,
Till over thee Compassion's skirt he throw.
Eternal Life shall recompense thy pains,
If found at last, with everlasting gains.
For if the Lord be pleas'd to hear thy cries,
And to forgive thy great iniquities,
Thou wilt have cause forever to admire
And laud his Grace, that granted thy desire.
Then shalt thou find thy labor is not lost,
But that the good obtain'd surmounts the cost.
Nor shalt thou grieve for loss of sinful pleasures,
Exchang'd for Heav'nly joys and lasting treasures.
The yoke of Christ which once thou didst esteem
A tedious yoke, shall then most easy seem.
For why? The love of Christ shall thee constrain
To take delight in that which was thy pain.
The ways of Wisdom shall be pleasant ways,
And thou shalt choose therein to spend thy days.

If once thy Soul be brought to such a pass,
O bless the Lord and magnify his Grace.
Thou that of late hadst reason to be sad,
May'st now rejoice and be exceeding glad;
For thy condition is as happy now
As erst it was disconsolate and low.
Thou art become as rich, as whilom poor;
As blesséd now as curséd heretofore.
For being cleanséd with Christ's precious Blood,
Thou hast an int'rest in the chiefest Good;

God's anger is towards thy Soul pleas'd,
And in his Christ he is with thee well pleas'd.
Yea, he doth look upon thee with a mild
And gracious aspect, as upon his child.
He is become thy Father and thy Friend,
And will defend thee from the curséd Fiend.
Thou need'st not fear the roaring Lion's rage, Since God Almighty doth himself engage
To bear thy Soul in everlasting Arms,
Above the reach of all destructive harms.
Whatever here thy sufferings may be,
Yet from them all the Lord shall rescue thee.
He will preserve thee by his wond'rous Might Unto that rich Inheritance in Light.

O sing for joy, all ye Regenerate,
Whom Christ hath brought unto this blessed state!
O love the Lord all ye his saints, who hath Redeeméd you from everlasting wrath!
Who hath by dying made your Souls to live,
And what he dearly bought doth freely give.
Give up yourselves to walk in all his ways,
And study how to live unto his praise.
The time is short you have to serve him here;
The day of your deliv'rance draweth near.
Lift up your heads, ye upright ones in heart,
Who in Christ's purchase have obtain'd a part.
Behold he rides upon a shining cloud,
With angel's voice and Trumpet sounding loud.
He comes to save his folk from all their foes,
And plague the men that Holiness oppose.
So come, Lord Jesus, quickly come, we pray;
Yea, come and hasten our Redemption-day.

Vanity of Vanities.

A SONG OF EMPTINESS.

Vain, frail, sliort-liv'd, and miserable Man,
Learn what tliou art wlien thy estate is best;
A restless Wave o' th' troubled Oce-an,
A Dream, a lifeless Picture finely drest.

A Wind, a Flower, a Vapor, and a Bubble,
A Wheel that stands not still, a trembling Reed,
A trolling Stone, dry Dust, light Chaff, and Stubble,
A shadow of something but truly naught indeed.

Learn what deceitful Toys and empty things
This World and all its best Enjoyments be;
Out of the Earth no true Contentment springs,
But all things here are vexing Vanity.

For what is Beauty but a fading Flower?
Or what is Pleasure but the Devil's bait,
Whereby he catcheth whom he would devour,
And multitudes of Souls doth ruinate?

And what are Friends but mortal men as we,
Whom Death from us may quickly separate?
Or else their hearts may quite estrangéd be,
And all their love be turnéd into hate.

And what are Riches to be doted on?
Uncertain, fickle, and ensnaring things;
They draw men's Souls into Perditi-on,
And when most needed take them to their wings.

Ah! foolish man! that sets his heart upon Such empty shadows, such wild Fowl as these,
That being gotten will be quickly gone,
And whilst they stay increase but his disease.

As in a Dropsy, drinking drought begets,
The more he drinks the more he still requires,
So on this World whoso affection sets,
As Wealth's increase, increaseth his desires.

O happy Man, whose portion is above,
Where Floods, where Flames, where Foes cannot bereave him!
Most wretched Man that fixéd hath his love
Upon this World, that surely will deceive him!

For what is Honor? what is Sovereignty,
Whereto men's hearts so restlessly aspire?
Whom have they crowned with Felicity?
When did they ever satisfy desire?

The Ear of Man with hearing is not fill'd;
To see new sights still coveteth the Eye;
The craving stomach, though it may be still'd.
Yet craves again without a new supply.

All Earthly things man's cravings answer not,
Whose little heart would all the World contain,
(If all the World should fall to one man's lot)
And notwithstanding empty still remain.

The Eastern Conqueror was said to weep
When he the Indian Oce-an did view,
To see his Conquest bounded by the Deep,
And no more Worlds remaining to subdue.

Who would that man in his Enjoyment bless,
Or envy him, or covet his Estate,

Whose gettings do augment his greediness.
And make his wishes more intemperate?

Such is the wonted and the common guise
Of those on Earth that bear the greatest sway;
If with a few the case be otherwise,
They seek a Kingdom that abides for aye.

Moreover they of all the Sons of Men
That rule, and are in highest Places set,
Are most inclin'd to scorn their Bretheren,
And God himself (without great Grace) forget.

For as the Sun doth blind the gazers' eyes,
That for a time they naught discern aright,
So Honor doth befool and blind the Wise,
And their own lustre 'reaves them of their sight.

Great are their Dangers, manifold their Cares,
Through which, whilst others sleep, they scarcely Nap,
And yet are oft surprised unawares,
And fall unwilling into Envy's Trap.

The mean Mechanic finds his kindly rest;
All void of fear sleepeth the Country Clown;
When greatest Princes often are distrest,
And cannot sleep upon their Beds of Down.

Could Strength or Valor men immortalize,
Could Wealth or Honor keep them from decay
There were some cause the same to idolize,
And give the lie to that which I do say.

But neither can such things themselves end are,
Without the hazard of a change, one hour,
Nor such as trust in them can they secure
From dismal days, or Death's prevailing pow'r.

If Beauty could the Beautiful defend
From Death's dominion, then fair Absalom
Had not been brought to such a shameful end:
But fair and foul unto the Grave must come.

If Wealth or Scepters could Immortal make,
Then, wealthy Cræsus, wherefore art thou dead?
If Warlike force which makes the World to quake,
Then why is Julius Caesar perished?

Where are the Scipio's Thunderbolts of War?
Renowned Pompey, Caesar's Enemy?
Stout Hannibal, Rome's Terror known so far?
Great Alexander, what's become of thee?

If Gifts and Bribes Death's favor might but win,
If Pow'r, if Force, or Threat'nings might it fray,
All these, and more had still surviving been;
But all are gone, for Death will have no Nay.

Such is this World, with all her Pomp and Glory;
Such are the men whom worldly eyes admire,
Cut down by time, and now become a Story,
That we might after better things aspire.

Go boast thyself of what thy heart enjoys,
Vain Man! triumph in all thy worldly Bliss:
Thy best Enjoyments are but Trash and Toys; Delight thyself in that which worthless is.

Omnia prætereunt præter amare Deum.

Death Expected and Welcomed.

Welcome sweet Rest, by me so long Desir'd,
Who have with Sins and Grievs so long been tir'd;
And welcome Death, my Father's Messenger;
Of my Felicity the Hastener.

Welcome good Angels, who, for me distrest,
Are come to guard me to Eternal Rest.
Welcome, Christ, who hast my Soul Redeem'd, Whose Favor I have more than Life esteem'd.

Oh! do not now my sinful soul forsake.
But to thyself thy Servant gath'ring take.
Into thy Hands I recommend my Spirit,
Trusting through Thee Eternal Life t' inherit.

A Farewell to the World.

Now Farewell, World, in which is not my Treasure;
I have in thee enjoy'd but little Pleasure.
And now I leave thee for a Better Place,
Where lasting Pleasures are, before Christ's face.

Farewell, ye Sons of Men, who do not savor
The things of God; who little prize his Favor.
Farewell, I say, with your Fool's Paradise,
Until the King of Terrors you surprise,
And bring you trembling to Christ's Judgment Seat,
To give Account of your Transgressions great.

Farewell, New England, which hast long enjoy'd
The Day of Grace, but hast most vainly toy'd
And trifled with the Gospel's glorious Light;
Thou may'st expect a dark Egyptian Night.

Farewell, young Brood and rising Generation,
Wanton and proud, ripe for God's Indignation,
Which neither you nor others can prevent,
Except in Truth you speedily repent.

Farewell, sweet Saints of God, Christ's little Number,
Beware lest ye through sloth securely slumber;
Stand to your Spir'tual Arms and keep your Watch,
Let not your Enemy you napping catch;
Take up your Cross, prepare for Tribulation,
Through which doth lie the way unto salvation.

Love Jesus Christ with all sincerity;
Eschew Will-worship and Idolatry.
Farewell, again, until we all appear Before our Lord, a Well-done there to hear.

Farewell, ye faithful Servants of the Lord,
Painful dispensers of his Holy Word,
From whose Communion and Society
I once was kept through long infirmity.
This of my Sorrows was an aggravation;
But Christ be thankéd, through whose Mediation
I have at length obtainéd Liberty
To dwell with Soul-delighting Company,
Where many of our Friends are gone before,
And you shall follow with a many more.
Meanwhile stand fast, the Truth of God maintain,
Suffer for Christ, and great shall be your Gain.

Farewell, my natural Friends and dear Relations,
Who have my Trials seen and great Temptations;
You have no cause to make for me great Moan;
My Death to you is little Loss or none.
But unto me it is no little Gain,
For Death at once frees me from all my Pain.
Make Christ your greatest Friend, who never dies;
All other Friends are fading Vanities.
Make him your Light, your Life, your End, your All;
Prepare for Death, be ready for his Call.

Farewell, vile Body, subject to decay.
Which art with lingering sickness worn away;
I have by thee much Pain and Smart endur'd;
Great Grief of Mind hast thou to me procur'd;
Great Grief of Mind by being Impotent,
And to Christ's Work an awkward Instrument.
Thou shalt not henceforth be a clog to me.
Nor shall my Soul a Burthen be to thee.

Rest in thy Grave until the Resurrection,
Then shalt thou be revivéd in Perfection,
Endow'd with wonderful Agility,
Clothéd with Strength and Immortality;

With shining Brightness gloriously array'd,
Like to Christ's glorious Body, glorious made.
Thus Christ shall thee again to me restore,
Ever to live with him and part no more.
Meanwhile my Soul shall enter into Peace,
Where Fears and Tears, where Sin and Smart shall cease.

He was Descended of Eminently Religious Parents, who were Sufferers for that which was then The Cause of God and of New-England. While he was yet a youth, he was marvellously concerned that he might have an Heart filled with the Spirit of God. This Concernment upon his mind appeared especially in his watchful Endeavors to have Spiritual Sins chased out of his cleansed Heart. Pride, the Sin of Young Men, yea, of all Men; Pride, the Sin which few Men try or trouble themselves about; this Devout Youth was full of Holy and Watchful Trouble about it: And he then wrote a very Savoury Discourse, Entituled, Considerations against Pride, and another, Entituled, Considerations against Delighting more in the Creature than in God. This was to Mortify in himself the Sins rarely minded by the most of men.

Having had a Pious and a Learned Education, the first Publick Station wherein I find him, was that of a Fellow and a Tutor in Harvard Colledge. With a rare Faithfulness did he adorn that Station! He used all means imaginable to make his Pupils not only good Scholars, but also good Christians, and instil into them those things which might render them rich Blessings unto the Churches of God. Unto his Watchful and Painful Essays to keep them close under their Academical Exercises he added Serious Admonitions unto them about their Interior State; and he Employed his Prayers and Tears to God for them, and had such a flaming zeal to make them worthy Men, that upon Reflection he was afraid Lest his cares for their Good, and his affection to them, should so drink up his very Spirit, as to steal away his Heart from God.

From Cambridge he made his remove to Malden, and was their Faithful Pastor for about a Jubilee of years together.

It was not long after his coming to Maiden that a sickly Constitution so prevailed upon him, as to confine him from his Publick Work for some whole seven of Years. His Faithfulness continued when his Ministry was thus interrupted. The Kindness of his Tender Flock unto him was answered in his Kind Concern to have them served by other Hands. He took a short voyage unto another Country for the Recovery of his Health; which, though he recovered not, yet at his Return I find him comforting himself with inserting of this Passage in his Reserved Papers:

“Peradventure the Lord Removed me for a season that he might set a better Watchman over his Flock, and a more painful Laborer in his Vineyard. This was one thing that I aimed at in Removing (to help the People’s Modesty in the case), and I believe the Lord aimed at it, in Removing me for a season.”

His Faithfulness now appeared in his Edifying Discourses to those that came near him; much bewailing the want of a Profitable and Religious conversation in so many that profess Religion. And that yet he might more Faithfully set himself to do Good, when he could not Preach he Wrote several Composures, wherein he proposed the edification of such Readers as are for plain Truths, dressed up in a Plain Meeter. These Composures have had their Acceptance and Advantage among that sort of Readers; and one of them, the Day of Doom, which has been often Reprinted in both Englands, may find our Children till the Day itself arrive.

It pleased God, when the distress of the Church in Malden did extremely call for it, wondrously to restore his Faithful Servant. He that had been for near Twenty Years almost Buried Alive, comes abroad again, and for as many years more, must, in Publick Usefulness, receive the Answer and Harvest of the Thousands of Supplications with which the God of his Health had favoured him.

How Faithfully did he now Deliver the Whole Counsel of God!

How Faithfully did he Rebuke Sin, both in his Ministry and Discipline!

How Faithful was he to the Work of God in the Churches of New-England, and grieved at every thing that he thought had any Tendency to incommode that Glorious Work! But how Patient, how Loving, how Charitable to such as in lesser Matters differed from him!

How Faithful was he in the Education of his Family! A very Abraham for his Commands unto them, to Keep the Way of the Lord! A very David for his charge unto them to Know the God of their Father and Serve Him!

His long Weakness and Illness made him an able Physician for the Body as well the Soul.

As he was Faithful to the Death, so he was Lively to the Death.

It was a surprise to us to see a little, feeble Shadow of a Man, beyond Seventy, Preaching usually twice or thrice in a week, Visiting, Comforting the Afflicted, Encouraging the Private Meetings, Catechising the Children of the Flock, and managing the Government of the Church, and attending the Sick, not only as a Pastor, but as a Physician too; and this not only in his own Town, but also in all those of the Vicinity. Thus he did unto the Last; and he was but one Lord's-Day taken off before his Last. But in the Last Week of his Life, how full of Resignation! How full of Satisfaction!

From his Exemplary Life I will single out one thing, his EARLY RELIGION. Our Wigglesworth was a Godly child, and he held on living to God and Christ until the Seventy-Fourth Year of his Age.

When he lay a Dying, some one spoke to him about his having secured his Interest in the Favor of Heaven, and his Assurance of that Interest. He Replied, [Methoughts like my Polycarp,]

“I bless God I began that Work betimes, and ere I was Twenty Years Old I had made thorow work of it. Ever since then I have been pressing after the Power of Godliness, the Power of Godliness! For more than Fifty Years together I have been Laboring to uphold a Life of Communion with God; and I thank the Lord I now find the Comfort of it!

Words that contain in them A History of a Life more Valuable than I have seen a Volume in Folio.

Epitaph. (Believed to Have Been Written by Rev. Cotton Mather.) The Excellent Wigglesworth; Remembered by Some Good Tokens.

His Pen did once Meat from the Eater fetch;
And now he's gone beyond the Eater's reach.
His Body once so Thin, was next to None;
From hence he's to Unbodied Spirits flown.
Once his rare skill did all Diseases heal;
And he does nothing now uneasy feel.
He to his Paradise is joyful come,
And waits with joy to see his Day of Doom.

 END OF THE PROJECT GUTENBERG EBOOK THE DAY OF DOOM; OR, A POETICAL DESCRIPTION OF THE GREAT AND LAST JUDGEMENT ***

Updated editions will replace the previous one—the old editions will be renamed.

Creating the works from print editions not protected by U.S. copyright law means that no one owns a United States copyright in these works, so the Foundation (and you!) can copy and distribute it in the United States without permission and without paying copyright royalties. Special rules, set forth in the General Terms of Use part of this license, apply to copying and distributing Project Gutenberg™ electronic works to protect the PROJECT GUTENBERG™ concept and trademark. Project Gutenberg is a registered trademark, and may not be used if you charge for an eBook, except by following the terms of the trademark license, including paying royalties for use of the Project Gutenberg trademark. If you do not charge anything for copies of this eBook, complying with the trademark license is very easy. You may use this eBook for nearly any purpose such as creation of derivative works, reports, performances and research. Project Gutenberg eBooks may be modified and printed and given away—you may do practically ANYTHING in the United States with eBooks not protected by U.S. copyright law. Redistribution is subject to the trademark license, especially commercial redistribution.

START: FULL LICENSE

THE FULL PROJECT GUTENBERG™ LICENSE

PLEASE READ THIS BEFORE YOU DISTRIBUTE OR USE THIS WORK

To protect the Project Gutenberg™ mission of promoting the free distribution of electronic works, by using or distributing this work (or any other work associated in any way with the phrase “Project Gutenberg”), you agree to comply with all the terms of the Full Project Gutenberg License available with this file or online at www.gutenberg.org/license.

Section 1. General Terms of Use and Redistributing Project Gutenberg electronic works

1.A. By reading or using any part of this Project Gutenberg electronic work, you indicate that you have read, understand, agree to and accept all the terms of this license and intellectual property (trademark/copyright) agreement. If you do not agree to abide by all the terms of this agreement, you must cease using and return or destroy all copies of Project Gutenberg electronic works in your possession. If you paid a fee for obtaining a copy of or access to a Project Gutenberg electronic work and you do not agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement, you may obtain a refund from the person or entity to whom you paid the fee as set forth in paragraph 1.E.8.

1.B. “Project Gutenberg” is a registered trademark. It may only be used on or associated in any way with an electronic work by people who agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement. There are a few things that you can do with most Project Gutenberg electronic works even without complying with the full terms of this agreement. See paragraph 1.C below. There are a lot of things you can do with Project Gutenberg electronic works if you follow the terms of this agreement and help preserve free future access to Project Gutenberg electronic works. See paragraph 1.E below.

1.C. The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation (“the Foundation” or PGLAF), owns a compilation copyright in the collection of Project Gutenberg electronic works. Nearly all the individual works in the collection are in the public domain in the United States. If an individual work is unprotected by copyright law in the United States and you are located in the United States, we do not claim a right to prevent you from copying, distributing, performing, displaying or creating derivative works based on the work as long as all references to Project Gutenberg are removed. Of course, we hope that you will support the Project Gutenberg mission of promoting free access to electronic works by freely sharing Project Gutenberg works in compliance with the terms of this agreement for keeping the Project Gutenberg name associated with the work. You can easily comply with the terms of this agreement by keeping this work in the same format with its attached full Project Gutenberg License when you share it without charge with others.

1.D. The copyright laws of the place where you are located also govern what you can do with this work. Copyright laws in most countries are in a constant state of change. If you are outside the United States, check the laws of your country in addition to the terms of this agreement before downloading, copying, displaying, performing, distributing or creating derivative works based on this work or any other Project Gutenberg work. The Foundation makes no representations concerning the copyright status of any work in any country other than the United States.

1.E. Unless you have removed all references to Project Gutenberg:

1.E.1. The following sentence, with active links to, or other immediate access to, the full Project Gutenberg License must appear prominently whenever any copy of a Project Gutenberg work (any work on which the phrase “Project Gutenberg” appears, or with which the phrase “Project Gutenberg” is associated) is accessed, displayed, performed, viewed, copied or distributed:

This eBook is for the use of anyone anywhere in the United States and most other parts of the world at no cost and with almost no restrictions whatsoever. You may copy it, give it away or re-use it under the terms of the Project Gutenberg™ License included with this eBook or online at www.gutenberg.org. If you are not located in the United States, you will have to check the laws of the country where you are located before using this eBook.

1.E.2. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is derived from texts not protected by U.S. copyright law (does not contain a notice indicating that it is posted with permission of the copyright holder), the work can be copied and distributed to anyone in the United States without paying any fees or charges. If you are redistributing or providing access to a work with the phrase “Project Gutenberg” associated with or appearing on the work, you must comply either with the requirements of paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 or obtain permission for the use of the work and the Project Gutenberg trademark as set forth in paragraphs 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.3. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is posted with the permission of the copyright holder, your use and distribution must comply with both paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 and any additional terms imposed by the copyright holder. Additional terms will be linked to the Project Gutenberg License for all works posted with the permission of the copyright holder found at the beginning of this work.

1.E.4. Do not unlink or detach or remove the full Project Gutenberg License terms from this work, or any files containing a part of this work or any other work associated with Project Gutenberg.

1.E.5. Do not copy, display, perform, distribute or redistribute this electronic work, or any part of this electronic work, without prominently displaying the sentence set forth in paragraph 1.E.1 with active links or immediate access to the full terms of the Project Gutenberg License.

1.E.6. You may convert to and distribute this work in any binary, compressed, marked up, nonproprietary or proprietary form, including any word processing or hypertext form. However, if you provide access to or distribute copies of a Project Gutenberg work in a format other than “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other format used in the official version posted on the official Project Gutenberg website (www.gutenberg.org), you must, at no additional cost, fee or expense to the user, provide a copy, a means of exporting a copy, or a means of obtaining a copy upon request, of the work in its original “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other form. Any alternate format must include the full Project Gutenberg License as specified in paragraph 1.E.1.

1.E.7. Do not charge a fee for access to, viewing, displaying, performing, copying or distributing any Project Gutenberg works unless you comply with paragraph 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.8. You may charge a reasonable fee for copies of or providing access to or distributing Project Gutenberg electronic works provided that:

- You pay a royalty fee of 20% of the gross profits you derive from the use of Project Gutenberg works calculated using the method you already use to calculate your applicable taxes. The fee is owed to the owner of the Project Gutenberg trademark, but he has agreed to donate royalties under this paragraph to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation. Royalty payments must be paid within 60 days following each date on which you prepare (or are legally required to prepare) your periodic tax returns. Royalty payments should be clearly marked as such and sent to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation at the address specified in Section 4, "Information about donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation."
- You provide a full refund of any money paid by a user who notifies you in writing (or by e-mail) within 30 days of receipt that s/he does not agree to the terms of the full Project Gutenberg™ License. You must require such a user to return or destroy all copies of the works possessed in a physical medium and discontinue all use of and all access to other copies of Project Gutenberg™ works.
- You provide, in accordance with paragraph 1.F.3, a full refund of any money paid for a work or a replacement copy, if a defect in the electronic work is discovered and reported to you within 90 days of receipt of the work.
- You comply with all other terms of this agreement for free distribution of Project Gutenberg™ works.

1.E.9. If you wish to charge a fee or distribute a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work or group of works on different terms than are set forth in this agreement, you must obtain permission in writing from the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the manager of the Project

Gutenberg™ trademark. Contact the Foundation as set forth in Section 3 below.

1.F.

1.F.1. Project Gutenberg volunteers and employees expend considerable effort to identify, do copyright research on, transcribe and proofread works not protected by U.S. copyright law in creating the Project Gutenberg™ collection. Despite these efforts, Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, and the medium on which they may be stored, may contain “Defects,” such as, but not limited to, incomplete, inaccurate or corrupt data, transcription errors, a copyright or other intellectual property infringement, a defective or damaged disk or other medium, a computer virus, or computer codes that damage or cannot be read by your equipment.

1.F.2. LIMITED WARRANTY, DISCLAIMER OF DAMAGES - Except for the “Right of Replacement or Refund” described in paragraph 1.F.3, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the owner of the Project Gutenberg™ trademark, and any other party distributing a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work under this agreement, disclaim all liability to you for damages, costs and expenses, including legal fees. YOU AGREE THAT YOU HAVE NO REMEDIES FOR NEGLIGENCE, STRICT LIABILITY, BREACH OF WARRANTY OR BREACH OF CONTRACT EXCEPT THOSE PROVIDED IN PARAGRAPH 1.F.3. YOU AGREE THAT THE FOUNDATION, THE TRADEMARK OWNER, AND ANY DISTRIBUTOR UNDER THIS AGREEMENT WILL NOT BE LIABLE TO YOU FOR ACTUAL, DIRECT, INDIRECT, CONSEQUENTIAL, PUNITIVE OR INCIDENTAL DAMAGES EVEN IF YOU GIVE NOTICE OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGE.

1.F.3. LIMITED RIGHT OF REPLACEMENT OR REFUND - If you discover a defect in this electronic work within 90 days of receiving it, you can receive a refund of the money (if any) you paid for it by sending a written explanation to the person you received the work from. If you received the work on a physical medium, you must return the medium with your written explanation. The person or entity that provided you with the defective work may elect to provide a replacement copy in lieu of a refund. If you received the work electronically, the person or entity providing it to you may choose to give you a second opportunity to receive the work electronically in lieu of a refund. If the second copy is also defective, you may demand a refund in writing without further opportunities to fix the problem.

1.F.4. Except for the limited right of replacement or refund set forth in paragraph 1.F.3, this work is provided to you 'AS-IS', WITH NO OTHER WARRANTIES OF ANY KIND, EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY OR FITNESS FOR ANY PURPOSE.

1.F.5. Some states do not allow disclaimers of certain implied warranties or the exclusion or limitation of certain types of damages. If any disclaimer or limitation set forth in this agreement violates the law of the state applicable to this agreement, the agreement shall be interpreted to make the maximum disclaimer or limitation permitted by the applicable state law. The invalidity or unenforceability of any provision of this agreement shall not void the remaining provisions.

1.F.6. INDEMNITY - You agree to indemnify and hold the Foundation, the trademark owner, any agent or employee of the Foundation, anyone providing copies of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works in accordance with this agreement, and any volunteers associated with the production, promotion and distribution of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, harmless from all liability, costs and expenses, including legal fees, that arise directly or indirectly from any of the following which you do or cause to occur: (a) distribution of this or any Project Gutenberg work, (b) alteration, modification, or additions or deletions to any Project Gutenberg work, and (c) any Defect you cause.

Section 2. Information about the Mission of Project Gutenberg

Project Gutenberg is synonymous with the free distribution of electronic works in formats readable by the widest variety of computers including obsolete, old, middle-aged and new computers. It exists because of the efforts of hundreds of volunteers and donations from people in all walks of life.

Volunteers and financial support to provide volunteers with the assistance they need are critical to reaching Project Gutenberg's goals and ensuring that the Project Gutenberg collection will remain freely available for generations to come. In 2001, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation was created to provide a secure and permanent future for Project Gutenberg and future generations. To learn more about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation and how your efforts and donations can help, see Sections 3 and 4 and the Foundation information page at www.gutenberg.org.

Section 3. Information about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation is a non-profit 501(c)(3) educational corporation organized under the laws of the state of Mississippi and granted tax exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service. The Foundation's EIN or federal tax identification number is 64-6221541. Contributions to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation are tax deductible to the full extent permitted by U.S. federal laws and your state's laws.

The Foundation's business office is located at 41 Watchung Plaza #516, Montclair NJ 07042, USA, +1 (862) 621-9288. Email contact links and up to date contact information can be found at the Foundation's website and official page at www.gutenberg.org/contact

Section 4. Information about Donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

Project Gutenberg™ depends upon and cannot survive without widespread public support and donations to carry out its mission of increasing the number of public domain and licensed works that can be freely distributed in machine-readable form accessible by the widest array of equipment including outdated equipment. Many small donations ($1 to $5,000) are particularly important to maintaining tax exempt status with the IRS.

The Foundation is committed to complying with the laws regulating charities and charitable donations in all 50 states of the United States. Compliance requirements are not uniform and it takes a considerable effort, much paperwork and many fees to meet and keep up with these requirements. We do not solicit donations in locations where we have not received written confirmation of compliance. To SEND DONATIONS or determine the status of compliance for any particular state visit www.gutenberg.org/donate.

While we cannot and do not solicit contributions from states where we have not met the solicitation requirements, we know of no prohibition against accepting unsolicited donations from donors in such states who approach us with offers to donate.

International donations are gratefully accepted, but we cannot make any statements concerning tax treatment of donations received from outside the United States. U.S. laws alone swamp our small staff.

Please check the Project Gutenberg web pages for current donation methods and addresses. Donations are accepted in a number of other ways including checks, online payments and credit card donations. To donate, please visit: www.gutenberg.org/donate.

Section 5. General Information About Project Gutenberg electronic works

Professor Michael S. Hart was the originator of the Project Gutenberg concept of a library of electronic works that could be freely shared with anyone. For forty years, he produced and distributed Project Gutenberg eBooks with only a loose network of volunteer support.

Project Gutenberg eBooks are often created from several printed editions, all of which are confirmed as not protected by copyright in the U.S. unless a copyright notice is included. Thus, we do not necessarily keep eBooks in compliance with any particular paper edition.

Most people start at our website which has the main PG search facility:
www.gutenberg.org.

This website includes information about Project Gutenberg, including how to make donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, how to help produce our new eBooks, and how to subscribe to our email newsletter to hear about new eBooks.
