NIAGARA.

Majestic symbol of eternal power!
Dread oracle of eons all unknown!
Before thy presence Pomp and Passion cower,—
All men are equal at thy awful throne.

Abashed, the eager babble of the mart,—
To silence shamed, the vulgar greed for gain;
No more ambition goads the weary heart,
And Toil forgets its unrequited pain.

Stern type of Truth's inexorable law!
No room remains for envy or for pride;
Here prince and pauper stand in common awe,
Swayed by the spell of thy resistless tide.

A rushing, seething Sinai,—thou dost pour
On sluggish consciences the solemn sense
Of justice infinite:—thy thunder's roar
Declares to Wrong relentless recompense.

Against our arrogance thy strength doth plead;
Deep unto deep imperiously calls;
Impartial annalist! the nations read
Their transient glory on thy ageless walls.

Yet dost thou deign to dower the moment's need,—
Our dreams exceeding by thy bounteous sway;
With power unrivaled thy proud flood shall speed
The New World's progress toward Time's perfect day.

O mighty monitor! O seer sublime!
The soul's surpassing grandeur thou dost show;—
The fountains of thy immemorial prime
Through man's immortal being freely flow.

THE MEADOW AIR IS SWEET.

The meadow air is sweet;—
The cowslip's cup of gold
Is full of fresh and fragrant dew,—
More full than it can hold.

The meadow air is sweet;—
The blackbird's mellow note,
Like water in a little brook,
Flows gurgling from his throat.

The meadow air is sweet;—
The stream that cheers the lea
Will feel the willow's tender kiss,
E'en to the distant sea.

The meadow air is sweet;—
Hark! from the old elm tree:—
Ah! only lovers understand
The oriole's ecstasy.

The meadow air is sweet;—
The clover, handsome-white,
With dainty odors woos the bee,
And fills her with delight.

The meadow air is sweet;—
The bobolink is there!
When he is mute a faery flute
Seems echoing in the air.

The meadow air is sweet;—
The daisy in the grass
Looks up to see the clouds, and feel
Their shadow as they pass.

The meadow air is sweet;—
The swallow flashes by,
Too merry for a moment's rest

WHEN LIFE WAS LIKE A SUNNY STREAM.

Alas! it seemeth but a dream,—
My childhood's bright, bright day,
When life was like a sunny stream

How wonderful the radiant Spring,
In garden, glade, and wood!
Fresh from God's hand seemed everything,
"And everything was good!"

Close by the door, the apple tree,
From many a fruitful bough,
Its richest blossoms spread for me;—
I feel their fragrance now!

The robin and the oriole,
(I loved them both the same),
Their sweetest songs to me did troll,—
I think they knew my name!

A little brook, from hidden spring,
Ran babbling down the hill;
It seemed to me a living thing,—
I hear its laughter still!

Ah! ours was bliss without alloy,
And friendship fondly leal;—
I brought it human love and joy,—
It turned my water-wheel!

And, tired of play, what peace I found,
As the bright clouds sailed by,
Just to lie down upon the ground
And look into the sky!

Deep, deep, that look of calm delight,
So free from care and pain;—
Would God I might its holy height

THE FIRST ROBIN.

Herald of the happy year,
Robin redbreast, art thou here?
Welcome to thy destined goal;
Welcome, songster of the soul!

Age and Childhood find, in thee,
Kindred bond of sympathy;
Hope and memory are one,
In thy song's sweet unison.

Common freehold all hearts claim
In thy nature's artless aim;
Best of priests and poets, thou,
Singing on the leafless bough.

Mead and mountain, wood and wold,
Wait the rapture manifold,
Which shall prove thee saint and seer,—
Dearest minstrel of the year!

Every note like April rain,—
Thou transmutest, in thy strain,
With the season's subtle power,
Winter's dearth to summer's dower.

Glow the mold with vernal fire
Kindled by thy love's desire;
Nature wakens, at thy call,
To her Easter festival.

Mateless messenger divine!
Peerless privilege is thine:—
Thou interpretest to Faith
The deep mystery of death.

THE GOAL.

Sweet scents, sweet sounds, sweet scenes!
With all that intervenes
 In sweeter solemn silences profound,— Whereinto overflows,
In forest, river, rose,
 Passionless being, beauty without bound.

How deep the mind's repose!
The vagrant sea-breeze blows
 With kindred pulses through the fragrant shade;
And sod and soul are blent
In blest enfranchisement,—
 Prefiguring the end for all things made.

For life and love, supreme
Beyond the poet's dream,
 Shall bear all being to its blissful goal;
The wondrous word is true—
"Lo! I make all things new;"
 The universe is ransomed with the soul!

THE REWARD.

From green to gold
The year grows old,
 With beautiful increase;
The seasons wane
To ripened grain
 And Nature's deepest peace.

The same sure plan
Is thine, O man!
 Alike for sod and soul,
The law of love,—
Enthroned above—
 That guides thee to thy goal.

Have faith in God:—
Who gives the clod
 Its meed of fruit or flower,
Shall crown thy cares,
Thy tears, thy prayers,
 With an immortal dower.

STRENGTH AND BEAUTY.

The Useful and the Beautiful,
Indissolubly blent,
One law reveal, one Will and weal,
In sod and firmament.

The earth below, the sky above,
With flowers and stars are sprent;—
The child to cheer, the saint, the seer,
Their love and light are lent.

For Strength and Beauty equal are,
In Nature's kind intent,—
The hawthorn hedge, and granite ledge
That binds the continent.

Were wish and will more dutiful,
And life more nobly spent,
Would we not know, with souls aglow,
What such high vision meant?

Ah, yes! our lowliest tasks would then
In heaven's own glory shine,
And time be told on harps of gold,
In dream and deed divine.

VIOLET, ROSE, AND GOLDEN-ROD.

Violet, rose, and golden-rod!
Blossoms of the self-same sod,
Springing from the breathing mold
Into beauty manifold.

Each its season knoweth well,
Without sign or syllable,—
Faithful to the law benign
Potent over palm and pine.

Excellent in their degree,
Rivals they can never be;
Fashioned with divinest grace,
Each is perfect in its place.

Dear to Childhood and to Age,
Each hath ample heritage
In these human hearts of ours,
Kindred with the leaves and flowers.

Children of the shower and sun,
Soon, like theirs, our day is done;—
We are fading e'en as they,—
We with them must pass away.

But the flowers shall bloom again;
Ends, at last, the winter's reign;—
Life is larger than a breath,—
Love is master over death!

Precious, in the sight of God,
Violet, rose, and golden-rod;—
Dearer far to Heaven are we,
Children of eternity!

OCTOBER.

Crimson-and-gold, October's boughs proclaim
The approaching Passion of the waning year;
By sacramental signs, for aye the same,
Pathetic portents show the end is near.

The landscape lessens in the shimmering haze;
The songless silence chants the season's grief;—
Too soon shall follow, with the darkening days,
The fading field-flower and the falling leaf.

No more allures the lovely glade or glen;
A nameless sorrow haunts the lonely shore;
The frosts have fallen on the hearts of men;
The little children seek the woods no more.

For Nature holds us surely as her own,
In sleet and snow, or under skies of blue;
From birth to death we share her mirth or moan,—
Forever to our faithful mother true.

Yet, in our loneliest hours, alike we feel
The comfort Heaven to wood and wold supplies,—
A hope that doth the season's sadness heal
And binds us closer still, in tenderest ties.

A kindred impulse stirs our common dust
To look beyond the winter's dearth and dole,
And find in God, our Life, our Strength, our Trust,
The everlasting summer of the soul.

THE WINDOW OVER THE STABLE-DOOR.

An Idyl of the Common Life.

From the window over the stable-door,
Hark! how the notes of gladness pour!
Like playful brook, their free, clear flow,—
But why such joy I do not know;
For 'tis the coachman's humble cot;—
The horses share his lowly lot:—
The same roof shelters beast and man;—
So prudently doth Dives plan!

Who here would look to see enshrin'd
A happy heart, a peaceful mind?
The fact exceeds my fancy's range,—
Yet 'tis as true as it is strange;—
For hark! how the notes of gladness pour
Through the window over the stable-door!

In such secluded spot, I fear
'T were sacrilege to venture near;—
Half guiltily I close the book,
And turn, unseen, an eager look
To the window over the stable-door,
Whence still those notes of gladness pour.

Ah! now the meaning plain I see
Of that sweet-throated mystery;—
For, rocking softly to and fro,
With fair, fine forehead bending low,
A mother lulls to slumber blest
Her first-born babe upon her breast.
A lovelier sight, through leafy screen,
By faun or fairy ne'er was seen;
And never more melodious word
The sylvan silence ever stirred.

Not hers to see the grace she wears,—
Nor hers to dream the peace she bears,
By such a blessed minstrelsy,

“HAIL TO THE CHIEF!”

(William McKinley.)

Niagara-like the welcome which awaits
The Nation's Chief, approaching now our gates;
From depths sincere the People's joy shall pour
Like many waters thundering on the shore,
As to her heart her honored Guest she takes,—
The Town we love,—the Empress of the Lakes!
Nor ours alone the President to greet;—
The North, the South, the East, the West, here meet,—
Each Commonwealth contributing its share
Of honor due, beneath one banner fair:—
Brothers forevermore, from sea to sea,—
One country dear, one hope, one destiny!
Nor even here shall the wide welcome end;—
Beyond our bounds its ardour shall extend;
For neighboring Nations, each American,
Admire with us the President, the man!
And, sharing with delight the common feast,
Shall feel anew their noblest aims increased.

City of Light! Crown-jewel of our fame!
Throw wide your gates to him of blameless name;—
With peerless pageant swell the rising tide
Of grateful joy and patriotic pride.
Rehearse the thrilling history once more:—
Manila's bay and Santiago's shore!
Let glowing dome and pennoned turret tell,
To God's sole praise, the matchless miracle.
Nor fail to voice the Present's mighty plan,
And justify the name American!
Saxon, or Latin-born,—we're all one blood:—
The Exposition stands for brotherhood.

So may the morrow dawn,—so pass away,
In cheer prophetic of our widening sway;—
And when the evening's deepening shadows fall,
And heaven's sweet silence broodeth over all,
May the blest memories of the day be blent

In that fair Vision in mid-firmament,
The Tower of Light! Niagara's flood in flame!
The radiant symbol of our Future's fame:—
Pledge of an age whose light shall never cease,—
The boundless empire of the Prince of Peace!

The above lines were written September 3, 1901, and printed the following afternoon in the Buffalo Commercial, an hour or two before President McKinley's arrival in the city the evening before "President's Day" at the Pan-American Exposition.

B. C.

CUBA LIBRE.

(Tune: Maryland, My Maryland.)

The work is wrought; the cannon's roar
On sea or land is heard no more;
The battle's rage and tumult cease
In songs of victory and peace.
The Heaven-appointed task is done;
The cause for which we fought is won;
And Cuba Libre, fairest gem,
Is set in Freedom's diadem!

Havana's waters, blue and broad,
Reflect the righteousness of God;
And Santiago's wreck-strewn shore
Resounds His praise for evermore.
The islands of the sea rejoice;
The floods lift up their mighty voice;
From shore to shore the anthems rise,—
A nation's grateful sacrifice.

Long as the stars shall shine o'erhead,
In deathless fame shall live the dead;
Their country's glory and renown
Their fadeless, everlasting crown.
The morning breaks! the shadows flee!
Christ's kingdom comes on land and sea:—
The rule of love, the reign of good,—
The whole round world one brotherhood!

THE GREATER REPUBLIC.

Our destiny was cast in an imperial mold,—
Our mission drawn on an immenser plan
Than marked, in deathless lines, our sires' high faith of old,—
Earth's broadest-visioned prophecy of man.

From ancient feuds removed, and favoring seas between,
In isolation enviable, supreme,
We dwelt apart content,—self-center'd and serene,—
The Old World's wonder and the Ages' dream.

When suddenly a cry from out the surging deep
We fondly deemed the guardian of our peace:—
A wail of anguish sore from breaking hearts that weep
Sweet Freedom's doom and savage Wrong's release.

Deep calling unto deep! the Island's bitter cry
Awakes the Continent to sleep no more:—
Heart ever answers heart:—America's reply
Is Santiago's world-resounding shore.

Nor here, alone, the Hand mysterious and divine;—
Manila's equal miracle foreshowed
The Providential path, with yet unsealed sign,
Where first our arms to scathless triumph rode.

True to the unsought task we could not comprehend,—
By foes maligned, by friends misunderstood,
This faith sustained us still, to the appointed end:—
Heaven serves the Sword unsheath'd for human good.

Clear, now, the purpose of the Highest,—plain His plan:—
To mould the Nation after His own mind,
And give, in common emprise with the Son of Man,
The moral leadership of all mankind.

EMERSON.

Bard of the soaring soul,
Of thought sublime, serene,—
Lord of the Pleiades
And all the stars between!

And further still thy sway:—
Thy realm, that vaster deep
Where galaxies unseen
Their radiant courses keep.

With measure masterful
Thou raisest our desire,
Till to thy boldest flight
Our eager souls aspire.

But not alone thy thought
In star-sprent spaces strown;
Thy largess manifold
Hath nearer harvests sown.

Ah! yes;—a richer crop
We gather, in thy song,
Than ever homeward brought
The Wain with “oxen strong.”

THE SNOW STORM, and WOOD NOTES,
FORERUNNERS, and MAY-DAYS,
To the dear earth belong,
And grace our lowliest ways.

CONCORD, and BOSTON “HYMN,”—
They stir our pulses still,
And hold, for Freedom’s need,
The patriot heart and will.

THE PROBLEM,—EACH and ALL,
Thy kind theology!
And like the Lord Christ’s heart

DANIEL WEBSTER.

The grandeur of the mountains
Is in his deep tones heard;—
Atlantic's mighty fountains
Inundate every word.

Torrential thought and feeling
In tides of passion pour,—
To patriot hearts appealing,
As sea to storm-swept shore.

Columbia's star-crown'd daughters
Own his majestic will;—
Like voice of many waters,
His name is potent still.

In loftiest communion
With seer and sage of yore,
For Liberty and Union
He pleads for evermore!

LINCOLN.

Like monarch of the forest
He looms out of the Past:—
Our strength when need was sorest,—
Our pride while Time shall last.

To God, the gracious Giver,
All praise and glory be,
While flows each free-born river
Unfettered to the sea.

AGASSIZ—EMERSON.

Far different the task assigned,
 Yet were they one in loftiest aim;
True mirror, each, of the Eternal Mind,
 They share a common fadeless fame.

One Will they owned, with rapturous awe,
 One sway supreme from man to Mars,—
Chanting the chorus of the moral law
 With Seraphim and Morning Stars!

WELCOME!

With love no words may measure,
Deep as life's hidden wells,—
With sweetest, purest pleasure,
Chautauqua's bosom swells.

A memory true and tender,
At which the warm tears start,—
Her Founder and Defender—
His home is in her heart!

O gratefully she meets him,
Restored to her once more;
And rapturously greets him,
With welcomes o'er and o'er.

Her joy untold confessing,
(Now be God's goodness prais'd!)
As for a father's blessing,
Her eyes to his are raised.

Full well she knows attend her
His prayers on sea and shore—
His spotless fame her splendor,
Her pride for evermore!

St. Vincent, we would name him,
Ere yet his crown is won,—
Before the skies shall claim him
For Christ's dear word, "Well done!"

Chautauqua, 1902.

FAME.

In empty rumor sown to woful ruth,
How many reputations pass like chaff,
Before Time's judgment winnowing for Truth
Immortal morrow and eternal youth.
Recalled for mirth,—remembered with a laugh!
Poor fames! that flower and wither with the grass,—
Once fondly deemed more durable than brass.
Heed well the clarion sounding through the sky,
Impartial herald of the Voice of God!
Proclaiming to the ages wide abroad
The mighty names that were not born to die.
Hark! 'tis the centuries' roll-call, calm and clear,—
From thrones of fadeless glory answered, "Here!"
By souls supreme whose record is on high.

DEFEATED?

I raise a pillar, fine and fair,—
The monument of my despair;
No fame of conqueror or king
E'er won a nobler offering:—
Behold, where strength and beauty meet
To celebrate a life's defeat!

From hearts of stone to heart of stone,
The soul appeals, as to her own;—
The stainless granite, stately, strong,
Shall chant my failure's deathless song;
Severe as Truth, this shaft shall shame
The poor world's pitiable blame.

FIDELITY.

The sunbeam in the hovel,
And in the Hall, are one,—
Each in his station faithful,
Until his task is done.

In soul and service, brothers,
To one blest birth-right born,
Nor chance nor change can sever
The children of the Morn.

Co-workers in one purpose,
Co-partners of one plan,
Each bears on stainless pinions,
The love of Heaven to man.

If true to God, what matters,
Where'er our work is done?
The sunbeam in the hovel,
And in the Hall, are one.

TRANSFIGURED!

(“The Word was made flesh.”)

Garment of Flesh, to thee was given
The virgin glow of sun and sod:—
Dawn-woven in the loom of Heaven,—
The last, the tenderest touch of God!

With human passion dear, divine,
Thou dost the deathless soul supply;
Altar and hearth alike are thine,
Sweet bridal of the earth and sky!

The glory of Eternity
Rests like a crown upon thy brow;
Celestial light o’ershadows thee:—
Blest mother of my Lord art thou!

BETRAYED.

Deceived, deflowered, despoiled!
O drooping lily, late with light aglow!
Around thy root is coiled
The hidden horror of a nameless woe.

Deceived, defiled, despoiled!
Is there no healing for a broken heart?
O God! hadst Thou but foiled
The fatal spell of the betrayer's art.

Deceived, despised, despoiled!
The blight has fallen on thy peerless bloom;
To bless thy bridal eager ages toiled;—
A moment's glamour leaves thee endless gloom.

SUNSET.

Crimson and cloth-of-gold,
His cloud-couch, rarely wrought;—
To bower so beautiful
No bride was ever brought.

Save his,—of tender grace,—
Dear Twilight, faithful, fair,
On whose sweet lips he seeks
Surcease of toil and care.

O light ineffable!
Wonder of wood and wold;—
The vision and the pledge
Of rapture manifold.

FULFILLMENT.

Lips to lips in rapture pressed,—
Dearest secret of the breast
In a moment all confessed;—
Love is best; love is best!

Worn with care, by pain oppressed,—
Empty arms and aching breast,—
Longing for release and rest;—
Death is best; death is best!

Home at last! O welcome blest!
Heart to heart our loved ones pressed,—
Of eternal life possessed;—
Heaven is best! heaven is best!

CONTENTMENT.

Content with life's allotted hours,
Or brook or river,—may mine be Forever cheered by its unfailing Source,—
A happy stream unhasting to the Sea,—
With little children, birds and flowers,
The dear companions of its tranquil course.

COMPANIONSHIP.

Lured by no lower goal between,
From light to light still upward move,
Aspiring to the heights serene
Of magnanimity and love.

Thou shalt not take thy way alone;—
The Beautiful, the True, the Good,
Shall draw to thee, undream'd, unknown,
Heaven's fairest First-Born Brotherhood!

And with them, steadfast to the end,
The sons of God of like degree,
Earth's noblest souls shall thee attend
With kingliest, kindest company.

ASPIRATION AND ATTAINMENT.

Two natures, ours,—two lives
Attest our heavenly birth;—
In “the third heaven,” one,—
The other, on the earth.

One soars to realms above,
Where saints and angels dwell;
The other strives alone
With all the powers of hell.

The soul’s clear vision, one,
And ecstasy untold;
The other, darkness, doubt,
And sorrow manifold.

The one is triumph, rest;
The other, struggle, pain:—
A fearful fight, wherein
Both prayers and tears seem vain.

And yet they are but one,
Though worlds between them roll;
One, also, their reward
In God, their glorious goal.

For duty, in the dust,
Is equally divine
With victor wreath and crown
Which in His presence shine.

A QUESTION OR TWO.

If, as you say, like dogs we die,
Why, then, like angels live?
Let faithless Reason make reply,
And honest answer give.

What power shall check the downward trend
Of wilful hearts of men,
If in eternal nothing end
Their three score years and ten?

That Virtue is its own reward—
Think you sufficient cause
To move men to the due regard
Of Heaven's holiest laws?

While blood is blood, and gold is gold,
Alas, you vainly try,
With fine-spun calculations cold,
To lure us to the sky.

Be naught beyond to hold in awe
The beast in every breast,
Then tooth and claw shall be our law;—
Why need to paint the rest?

Grant us for our protection here,
This boon, Philosophy,
If not the hope, the wholesome fear,
Of immortality.

And, meanwhile, in our memory keep
That earnest word of old:—
Whate'er thou sowest thou shalt reap,
In measure manifold.

OTHER SHEEP.

Pagan, Papist, Protestant!
What is that to thee or me?
Make not Heaven's mercy scant
With thy pampered bigotry.

Who made thee the judge to be
Of thy brother's destiny?
Deem not that thy shibboleth
Holds the keys of life and death.

Ah, that secret, sullen sign!
Call it not decree divine;
For a letter, more, or less,
Measures not God's tenderness.

"Other sheep I have," said One
Who was more than Mary's son;—
Eyes as blind as thine shall see
His amazing charity.

When it claims the judgment-throne,
What is creed but craft and cant?
God will surely know His own:—
Pagan, Papist, Protestant.

BY MANY PATHS.

By many names the one true God is known;
By many shrines man's faith in Him is shown;—
Varuna, Vishnu, Agni, Indra,—One!
As stars confess the all-sustaining sun.
By many paths true, humble hearts are brought
At last to Him whom they in darkness sought.

All lands alike the Father's mercies share;
No age was ever orphaned of His care;—
For souls sincere, forever has sufficed
The boundless merit of the blessed Christ;
And over all forever shall extend
The love that knows no measure and no end.

[A] POOR LITTLE JOE!

“Poor little Joe!” the poet said,
When it was told him she was dead;—
“Poor little Joe!” the warm tears start
From the deep fountains of his heart;—
“Poor little Joe!” he loved her so.

“Poor little Joe!” he knows too well
What darkness on his darling fell,
When, in her loneliness and pain,
“Papa!” she called,—but called in vain;—
“Poor little Joe!” she missed him so.

“Poor little Joe!” she loved him so,
And wished to stay, yet longed to go;—
One fond caress, one sweet “Good-night,”
Had made the way to heaven so bright!
“Poor little Joe!” she loved him so.

“Poor little Joe!” was all he said,
When it was told him she was dead;
But everywhere the warm tears start
Responsive to his breaking heart;—
“Poor little Joe!” we loved her so.

DARK, AND DAYS.

The same old problems vex mankind;
In meager beams the light is given;
Nor may the race e'er hope to find
The rest for which each age has striven.

The same old problems vex mankind;
But to our fears this faith is given:—
Broods over all the Eternal Mind,
And night on earth is day in heaven.

EXPERIENCE.

Slowly is life revealed, and slower still
The mystic scroll of the Eternal Will;
But, calming our impatience, Hope replies,—
“The days are ignorant,—the years are wise.”

A SURE FOUNDATION.

Hold firmly, for thy soul's behoof,
 This holy faith, divinely broad:—
The good in us is blessed proof
 Of goodness infinite in God!

THE VOYAGE.

Embarked upon an unknown sea,
And borne by tide which ne'er returns,—
Awed by the deepening mystery,
The stoutest heart for comfort yearns.

Fear not;—we are not left alone;
To wiser hands the helm is given;—
A guidance better than our own
Directs our way from earth to heaven.

THE STONECROFT.

Dauntless in drouth and dearth,
 Its pure, bright bloom is given
Not by the damps of earth,
 But by the dews of heaven.

O soul shut in with pain,—
 By want and woe oppressed,
Look up,—take heart again;
 In God's sure keeping rest.

The bounty of thy birth
 Remains, whate'er be given;
Denied the damps of earth,
 Thine, still, the dews of heaven!

PROGRESS.

Onward and upward moves the world,—
As toward the sun the seasons roll;—
Aspiring, striving, struggling, still,—
Onward and upward toward the goal.

Onward and upward moves the world!
The night is spent; and, clear and broad,
The dawn predicts the perfect day:—
Onward and upward still toward God!

A BENEDICTION.

The Christ of Cana brighten
The bliss thy heart may share;—
The Christ of Calvary lighten
The cross thy soul must bear.

LOVE AND TRUTH.

Like shy arbutus' bloom,
Half hidden, half revealed,
Her heart for love makes sweetest room,—
Disclosed, and yet concealed.

Ah! it was ever so,—
Disclosed, and yet concealed:
As to her eyes her breasts of snow,
Half hidden, half revealed!

And darkly truth is known,—
Half hidden, half revealed;
And dimly, still, Christ's dear face shown,—
Disclosed, and yet concealed.

Will it be ever so,—
Disclosed, and yet concealed?
All that we most desire to know,
Half hidden, half revealed?

BEAUTY.

What is it, but the point where meet
The finite and the infinite?
The light on childhood's brow that hovers,—
The all-revealing glance of lovers;
The troth of flowers and stars on high,—
The bridal of the earth and sky;
The sheen of heaven on soul and sod,—
The glory and the grace of God;—
The gleam of Sun beyond the sun,—
The mortal and immortal, one!

HEART OF LOVE.

Out of the heart of Love all beauty blows,
Of star-sprent sky or flower-sweet sod;—
One Source all being owns, one sure repose,—
The bosom of the life of God!

THE CORONATION.

'Tis not enough to hold the faith
To saints and sages given;
Truth asks of thee a fealty
Like her fair throne in heaven.

Transmute it into character,—
Translate it into life;
And crown thy creed with golden deed
And love that conquers strife.

DISCIPLESHIP.

Be thine thy Master's portion,
Who found, where all seemed loss,
His Kingdom in His serving,
His kingdom in His cross.

THE GREATER DEEP.

O vast and variable Sea!
Image alike of peace and strife,—
Like that immenser mystery
Which shrouds our little life.

FAITH.

Dim mirrors are our mortal minds,
 In which all truth is darkly seen;
Our only wisdom is to love,
 And leave to God what death may mean.

THE GIFT.

Unhasting, yet advancing evermore,
The morning breaks, at last, on every shore;
And through the gloom, until the day-star beam,
To us Heaven grants the vision and the dream.

SONSHIP.

Adapted to infinity,
Our souls, O God, aspire to Thee;—
Created in Thy likeness blest,
In Thee alone our hearts find rest.

REALITY.

Truth is the soul's eternal quest,—
Reality its only rest;—
Shadow for substance ne'er sufficed,—
Symbol nor sacrament,—but Christ!

INFINITY.

To confines infinitely lonely,
 Extends, unknown, Creation's shoreless sea:—
The sun itself a porch-light, only,
 To the fair palace of Eternity.

UNANSWERED.

Whither away, ye argosies of Heaven,
In solemn state advancing from afar?
What mission marshals you? What chivalrous emprise
Darkens the glory of the sapphire skies?
Say, was your empire's ancient quiet riven
With rumor ominous of distant wrong and war?
Or speed ye forth with snowy sails unfurled,
And radiant pennons shimmering in the haze,
To bring with proper pomp, to his empyreal throne,
Your monarch with his bride? he loveth her alone,
Dear daughter of the Sun, the peerless virgin world,
Long cloistered in his bosom's brightest rays.

* * * * *

No answer but a deeper shadow cast,—
And lo! the splendid mystery is passed.

SELF-SENTENCED.

Though born a man, he lives a mole;
In vain for him the seasons roll;
Poor earth-worm; in a world of light,
Still deeper digging into night.

Indifferent to life and law,
He knoweth neither love nor awe;—
Askance he eyes the daisied sod,
And turns a Ghetto face on God.

With servile mind and sordid soul,
He shall not miss the chosen goal;
Though all the path with gold be paved,
He cannot from himself be saved.

A ROYAL PRIESTHOOD.

To lift and lighten the heart of man,
Was ever the Poet's lofty plan;—
Confederate with stars and sun,
His songs their radiant courses run.

INSPIRATION.

Genius is only common dust,
Unkindled by the Breath of Heaven;—
Except God be their light and life,
Vainly the richest gifts are given.

Dark as a row of silver lamps,
Fair, all, as fancy's fine desire,
And furnished, each, with rarest oil,
But all untouched with fire.

For noblest service, man's first need
Is inspiration from on high;
The finite needs the Infinite,
As flower and forest need the sky.

UNCONSCIOUS INFLUENCE.

Faint not, though fruitless still the labor seems
 Wherewith love serves the Master dear, divine;
You do not know how far it throws its beams,
 The lamp which you keep burning at His shrine.

HOLD FAST THIS TRUTH.

Hold fast this truth, whoe'er thou art,
And through all sorrow take it:—
God did not make the human heart
Simply that He might break it.

For not in vain love yearns for love;—
Beyond the grave's dark portal,
In everlasting bliss above,
Awaits the life immortal!

GLORIA IN EXCELSIS!

The infinitely High
Is the infinitely Near,—
And the infinitely Holy
Is the infinitely Dear.

A single ray from heaven—
And all is understood,—
For the infinitely Great
Is the infinitely Good.

A CONTRAST.

Stone by stone the palace grows,
 Haughtily, mid dust and din;
On the garden wall the rose
 Drinks the quiet sunshine in.

Stone by stone the prison rears,
 Frowningly, its bars of night;—
Like a bride with love's sweet fears,
 Leans the lily to the light.

CROWNED!

With peaceful brow, and eyes beneath
 Disclosing memories, tender, dear,
And hopes secure from earthly strife,
 She stands—good angels know how near
To heaven,—crown'd with the harvest-wreath
 Of a fair, fruitful life:—
A lovelier diadem, I ween,
On seraph brow was never seen.

THE MEASURE.

From what a depth within the poet's heart,
The sorrow Dante weds to deathless Art!
From what a height within the poet's brain,
The immortal notes of Shakespeare's star-bright strain!

HUMILITY.

Naught is new beneath the sun:
Ages since the deed was done;—
Ay! a thousand wrought like one,—
And a thousand thought like one.
Greatest souls are first to own
None is wise or strong alone.

ENTREATY.

O Lord of life and death!
To whom all souls belong,
Let not the thread be cut,
While yet I weave my song.

Let not the workman's form
Be broken ere the time;—
Oh shatter not, with "Dust to Dust,"
The marble's dream sublime!

AT LAST!

Faint not because so far away
Seems, still, the world's redemption day;
Though deepest night the sky o'ercast,
The glorious morn shall break at last.

For strife shall close in fadeless peace,
And wrong and woe forever cease,—
And end, in rapturous notes sublime,
The whole long requiem of Time.

FORGIVE US, LORD!

Forgive us, Lord, our foolish fears;
For, to Thy patient sway,
A day is as a thousand years,
And a thousand years as a day.

Thy will, O God, is sure alway;—
This faith our darkness cheers:—
Thine, equally, the flying day,
And the march of a thousand years!

ASSURANCE.

Not where the Martyrs knelt, but where we kneel,
Is holy ground for us and ours;—
Not what the Saints have felt, but what we feel,
With strength divine the fainting soul empowers.

Not what the Apostles held, but what we hold,
Makes radiant death's dread mystery;—
From living faith, deep-welled, has onward rolled
The widening stream of Christian history.

THE LITTLE ONES.

Heaven bless the little children!
Their lives to earth are lent
From some dear clime serener
Than star-sown firmament.

The sunshine of God's glory,
Their happy spirits are;—
Each soul, in His pure likeness,
Refulgent as a star!

Their free, abundant beauty,
(Love's largess, manifold),
They shed with lavish splendor
On all that they behold.

Their joy the morning brightens,—
And loveliest flowers are fair
With radiance strangely tender,
Which their sweet rapture share.

And holier still their mission,—
And sweeter still their charm;
Like angels they attend us,
To guard our hearts from harm.

Their looks, so kind, confiding,
Our fevered pulses calm,—
And on the wounded spirit
They pour their love like balm.

And ever they remind us
Of our dear home on high,
Beyond all sin and sorrow,—
Eternal in the sky!

God bless the little children,
Or here, or there above,
The sunshine of His glory

LITTLE RUTH.

I cannot feel that she is gone
So far, so far away;
Her little heart close to my own
Is beating day by day.

Ah! tender are these human ties;—
May heaven at last reveal
Why on her eyes a slumber lies
E'en tears cannot unseal.

A look this darkness would displace
With a divine delight;
The soul's rare grace in her fair face,—
It was a blessed sight!

Her hair a happy halo wore,
That lit the hearth and hall;
Alas! no more my study door
Heeds her confiding call.

Dear lips! where mirth and music wrote
The lore in Eden sung;
Seemed every note from her sweet throat
By elf or angel strung.

The robin, hark! is here again,
To woo the wondrous child;
But all in vain his ardent strain,—
Death may not be beguiled.

Sleep, Darling, sleep; we will not weep,
Nor moan or murmur make;
But oh! how deep the dreamless sleep,—
Would God she might awake!

Asleep? awake! the Shepherd takes
His little lamb above;
And where she wakes the morning breaks

LITTLE THEODORE.

Lay them in his little hand;—
He will know,—and understand.

Darling, shall we meet again,
In a world that knows no sorrow?
Where there shall be no more pain,
And no parting comes to-morrow?

Precious gift! love's priceless dower—
Still our yearning hearts deplore thee,
Marking many a lonely hour,
Still, with tears, till Heaven restore thee.

Bright thy little life's brief day,
With the rose and lily number'd;—
Waken, darling; rise and play;—
Those sweet eyes too long have slumber'd.

Falling flower and fading spray,
Tenderly thy kind look noted;—
Did they beckon thee away,
Dear, dear child, to death devoted?

Flowers will bloom where snow-flakes fall;
Birds return;—but thou, oh, never!
Comes no answer to my call;—
Have I lost thee, Love, forever?

Hush, my heart,—it cannot be;—
Lo! beyond the grave's dark portal,
Where thy dearest wait for thee,
Breaks the morning, blest, immortal!

Darling we shall meet again,
In the home that knows no sorrow,—
Where there shall be no more pain,
And no parting comes to-morrow.

WHERE THERE IS NO MORE PAIN.

The sharpest pang, the tenderest tear,
Not yet are known to thee,
Unless thy heart has learned how dear
A little grave can be.

A little grave—but oh, how wide
The room it left for grief!
A grief which, like the ebbing tide,
Returns without relief.

Dear child! by death made doubly dear,—
God grant it may not be
That thou in heaven should'st ever hear
How much we mourn for thee.

One after one the seasons wane,—
Our loss, it grows not less;
Time's balm is vain to heal the pain
Of such a loneliness.

O little grave, that darkened so
The path by Sorrow trod,
Sometimes the sunset's golden glow
Rests on thy daisied sod;—

And then we feel that God is good,
And we take heart again,—
Assured 'twill all be understood
Where there is no more pain.

Where there is no more pain—'tis there,
'Tis there we long to be!
O Thou, who didst our sorrows bear,
Bring us to dwell with Thee.

Where there is no more pain—how blest
Love's kingdom, fadeless, fair!
That blissful rest naught shall molest —

THE EASTER ANSWER.

There is no light in sun or star,
Nor any voice in wind or wave,
To tell us where our loved ones are,
And cheer our journey to the grave.

The wedding garment and the shroud,
From the same texture, Nature weaves;—
Alike to her are sky and cloud:
She neither joys with us nor grieves.

Indifferent to life and death,
She heedeth not our hopes or fears;
Our days seem bounded by a breath;—
Why should she note our smiles or tears.

From depths of sorrow manifold
We call, and, weeping, wait reply;—
No answer comes from wood or wold,
And silent are the sea and sky.

O pitying Christ, to Thee we turn,
In loneliest grief uncomforted;
For Thee and Thy sure love we yearn,
Light of the living and the dead!

Thou healest, Lord, the heart's sore strife;—
With Thee, with Thee our dearest dwell—
Crowned, in Thy grace, O Prince of life,
With peace and joy ineffable.

And ours, at last, the home above!
We, too, from sin and sorrow free,
Shall share that life of cloudless love
For evermore with them and Thee.

COMMUNION.

Some meet memorial I would raise,
O gracious God, to Thy kind care:—
A fane for silent, unshared praise,
A shrine for solitary prayer.

An altar in the wilderness,
Known only to the stars above,—
Whose grateful incense shall confess
The comfort of Thy sheltering love.

Such monument my heart would rear,
O blessed God, my God! to Thee;
Thy presence ever proving near,
My Strength, my Song, eternally!

ST. AUGUSTINE.

O Thou my inmost life, my God!
How blind the soul can be!
Thou wert within, and I abroad,
And there I searched for Thee.

A stranger to my own poor heart,
A stranger, Lord, to Thee,
I sought Thee, from Thyself apart,
Throughout immensity.

In vain the weary, painful quest,—
Still further did I stray
From Thee, my being's only rest,—
Thyself the Truth, the Way.

I found Thee not, O sovereign Good!
Though seeking Thee alone;
I found Thee not,—nor understood
Thy grace, Thy love unknown.

For Thou hast chosen, in Thy grace,
As all who seek Thee find,
To make Thy dearest dwelling-place
The lowly, loving mind.

Close to the fountain of our tears
Dost Thou set up Thy rest;
And nearer than our doubts and fears
Art Thou, the Heavenly Guest.

O child of sorrow and of pain!
Know this, where'er thou art,—
Thy long and lonely quest is vain;—
Return into thy heart.

The Blessed Presence is enshrined
Deep, deep within the breast;—
Who seeks Thee there O God shall find

BETHEL.

Not on couch of ivory,
Cushioned, curtained, daintily,—
But upon the flinty ground,
The dread wilderness around,
Jacob sleeps, afar, alone,—
And his pillow is a stone!
Ah! poor friendless fugitive,
What can now thy birth-right give?

Pitiless the stars look down,
Like his brother's haunting frown;—
In his heart are many fears,—
In his eyes are bitter tears;
Even in his sleep he groans;
Even as he sleeps he moans,
“God be merciful to me!
Pity, Lord, my misery.”

Rest thee, pilgrim; not in vain
Thy repentance and thy pain.
Wonderful the grace divine!
Thine the covenant,—still thine,
Sealed to Abraham of old,—
Bearing blessing manifold
Unto ages yet unborn,
Through thee, desolate, forlorn.

Ay! e'en now to him is given
Token of the love of Heaven;
For behold! about him stand
Ministers of God's right hand:
Angels excellent in might,
Radiant in robes of light;—
And, before his ravished eyes,
Lo, the ladder to the skies!

Oh, that blessed, wondrous sight!
Making all the midnight bright,—
Bringing hope and healing in,
To the spirit stained with sin,—
Driving grief and gloom away,
With the breaking of the day,—
Wakening every tender chord
With the glory of the Lord!

Passed the Vision;—it is dawn;
Shining sons of light are gone;—
Wakes the servant of the Lord,
Wondering, at His gracious word;—
From his lips in language meet,
Faith's confession, grateful, sweet:—
“Surely God was in this place,
And upon me shone His face!”

So, upon the holy ground
Where the gate of heaven he found,
Buildeth he with pious care,
Joining praise with humble prayer,
From the stones of that blest place,
A memorial to God's grace:—
“Bethel, Lord, its name shall be,— Covenant 'twixt Thee and me.”

Glory to Thy holy Name,—
Thou, O Lord, art still the same!
Angel-guides our way attend;
Angel-guards our souls defend;—
We, too, know the blessed ground
Where the shining gate was found:—
Trysting-place of earth and heaven,—
Let the same sweet name be given:—
Bethel, through the ages past,—
Bethel still, while time shall last;
Bethel, then, its dear name be,—

AN IDYL OF THE SPIRITUAL LIFE.

Silently, to lowly minds,
 God communicates His grace,
And the wondering spirit finds
 The dear favor of His face.

Secretly the Voice divine
 Whispers low to each, apart;
Suddenly, without a sign,
 Glows His presence in the heart.

Like the light of evening star,
 Reigns the peace that heals all strife;
Passionless as lilies are,
 Love enthrones the heavenly life.

Silently the morning breaks,
 And the shadows flee away;
So, in death, the soul awakes
 To the light of endless day!

OPPORTUNITY.

Before this truth be bared each brow,—
The infinite is here and now!
As sacred as the stars, the sod,—
As near to Heaven, as close to God.

Call nothing common or unclean,—
Nor deem thou any service mean;
Forevermore this faith be thine,—
All days, all duties, are divine.

E'en now, at thy reluctant feet,
The seed-time and the harvest meet;
"The morrow in the moment lies:"
Heed well the Voice; awake! arise!

He, only he, is free indeed,
Who in his heart holds fast this creed,—
(A fadeless wreath for every brow),
The infinite is here and now!

LET IN THE LIGHT!

Let in the light!
The sky is bright,
The air is flowing free;
The mountains glow,—
The vale, below,
Is holding jubilee.

Let in the light!
Sad oversight
To miss so sweet a morn;—
The vision flies;
Awake! arise!
Each dawn is life reborn.

Let in the light!
O, read aright
The day's Apocalypse;
Its hours enfold
The age of gold,
And all thy dreams eclipse.

Let in the light!
'Twill soon be night;—
Prize every moment given;
With all thy might
Serve thou the right,
And leave the rest to Heaven.

THE LAW OF LOVE.

O, the sky is blue above me,
And the earth beneath is green,
And softly bright the flowing light
Floods the boundless space between.

But what if the day should darken,
And death's dread shadows fall?
I need not fear; with heaven so near,
Why should the night appall?

'Tis but the peaceful portal
Unto a morn immortal;
For the light that once gladdened the garden's deep gloom,
At last shall transfigure all blight into bloom.

For over and under the soul's sore strife
Is the blessed law of an endless life;
From the sod to the stars, and the stars to the sod,
Sways the everlasting love of God.

SUPPLICATION.

A cup of pleasure passing sweet,
Sometimes, this life of hopes and fears,—
But oft, a fountain full of grief,
O'erflowing still with lonely tears.

When brightest skies above us bend,
Dark o'er our heads the tempest lowers;—
At best, a sombre happiness,
A partial light, at best, is ours.

What waits beyond,—of good or ill,
We vainly struggle to discern;—
Poor, sinful, blind, and comfortless,
O pitying Christ! to Thee we turn.

Our only help and refuge, Thou;—
Give joy for sorrow, peace for strife;
We bring our burdened hearts to Thee,
O Love divine! our Light, our Life.

OUR LIFE IS LENT.

Our life is Lent:—
Our years are spent
 In penance for the past;
Our songs are sighs;
Our brightest skies
 With clouds are overcast.

Our life is Lent:—
The old lament—
 “All, all is vanity;”
And Youth, in tears,
Awaits with fears
 The morrow’s mystery.

Our life is Lent:—
Lord, we repent
 Each folly, fault, and fall;
Our best resolve
Do thou absolve,—
 Forgive, forget it all.

Our life is Lent:—
Our hearts are rent,
 As we Thy gifts recount,
And mark again,
With bitter pain,
 “The pattern in the mount.”

Our life is Lent:—
Our strength is spent;
 O holy Judge, and just,
Receive our prayer,—
Poor sinners spare;
 Remember we are dust.

Our life is Lent:—
But Jesus went
 To Calvary’s hill,
 To die for all.

LENTEN LESSONS.

Not of one day or age alone,
In unfeared Future far away,—
But here, and now, the Great White Throne:—
To-day, to-day, the Judgment-Day!

On every heart, O God, impress
This truth,—for all souls given,—
That heaven does not make holiness,
But holiness makes heaven.

Thy rightful dower Earth cannot give;
Far other, thou, than sun and sod;—
The soul of man can only live
By living in the life of God.

The creed of a contracted heart,
The code of a self-serving will,
Ne'er matched thy nature's nobler part,
Nor could thy being's end fulfill.

Peace is not here; in vain thy quest;—
Thou art not brother to the clod;
The heart of man can only rest
By resting on the heart of God.

REMEMBER!

Remember, Soul, the solemn word,
Still uttered by thy loving Lord:—
“That which thou sowest, thou shalt reap.”
Let not thy nobler nature sleep;
The word the Voice within thee saith,
Reveals the law of life and death.
That law, inexorably just,
For good or ill, binds soul and dust,—
And sways, with equal sovereignty,
The shoreless sea of Destiny!
Choose well; for baser choice endures:—
Each heedless hour its age ensures,—
Planting, in place of memories blest,
A cypress forest in the breast.

THE RECKONING.

Search well thy ways, thy wishes,—
Thy deepest life lay bare;
Against to-morrow's daylight,
Desire and deed prepare.

Of reckless ease and pleasure,
And slothful will, beware;
Against to-morrow's daylight,
Thy stewardship prepare.

Ambition, aim, and motive,—
To each give honest care;
Against to-morrow's daylight,
Thy character prepare.

O Judgment-journeying brother!
Thyself shall meet thee there;—
Against to-morrow's daylight,
Thy destiny prepare.

Choose well; thy choice is endless!
Be this our earnest prayer:—
“Against to-morrow's daylight,
O God, my soul prepare.”

THE FONT, THE ALTAR, AND THE TOMB.

The font, the altar, and the tomb,—
And but a step between!
A pulse, a breath, 'twixt birth and death—
And ends life's sombre scene.

The font, the altar, and the tomb!
How swift through mirth and moan,
The silent shuttles of life's loom,
Guided by hands unknown!

The font, the altar, and the tomb!
Poor heart, seek not in vain
To move the unrelenting gloom,
For short surcease of pain.

The font, the altar, and the tomb!
Accept frail nature's dower;—
To thee, to all, an equal doom,—
The inevitable hour!

The font, the altar, and the tomb!
Faint not at "Dust to Dust;"—
The love of God leaves ample room
For deathless hope and trust.

The font, the altar, and the tomb!
Christ crowns the soul's sore strife;—
The morning breaks! the victor wakes
To everlasting life!

EVENTIDE.

The evening shadows deepen fast,
 Enshrouding sea and shore;
The day so bright, so quickly past,
 Returneth nevermore.

The night is come; but lo! on high
 The steadfast stars appear;
A holy calm is in the sky,
 And heaven seems very near.

So fades, at last, life's little day,—
 So falls death's deepening gloom;
We hasten, each a different way,
 To reach one goal,—the tomb!

But God is good, whate'er may come;—
 To every heart is given
A tender memory of home,
 A trembling hope of heaven.

THE LARGER LIFE.

My years are very few, O God!
More rapidly they pass
Than clouds whose transient tale is told
In shadows on the grass.

My years are very few, O God!
But they are full of Thee:—
A drop of being in Thy life's Unfathomable sea.

My years are very few, O God!
Oh, let me clearly see
How they grow strong and beautiful
In Thy immensity.

My years are very few, O God!
The sum of them is small,—
But each may serve Thy blessed will,
And Thou shalt have them all.

My years are very few, O God!
On earth, but not in heaven;—
To Thee, eternal Life and Love,
Be endless praises given.

A PRAYER.

Deepen, Lord, the light divine,
In this darkened heart of mine;
On my inmost spirit shine,
Radiance of th' Eternal Trine!

Deepen, Lord, the life divine,
In this barren heart of mine;—
As the branch is to the vine,
Hangs my helpless soul on Thine.

Deepen, Lord, the love divine,
In this lonely heart of mine;
Surest seal and sweetest sign,—
There thy perfect peace enshrine.

Light, and life, and love, Thou art;—
With thy grace, Thyself impart;
Rest and Rapture of the heart,
Come, and nevermore depart.

THE MESSAGE.

Sweet message of the Holy Dove,
In mercy brought us from above,—
O haste, my soul, its peace to prove:—
“God, the Eternal God, is love!”

In Jesus, full of truth and grace,—
Dear brightness of the Father’s face,
Each radiant letter we can trace:—
“God, the Eternal God, is love!”

All other word is empty, vain;
Naught else can heal the heart’s sore pain,
And faith and hope revive again:—
“God, the Eternal God, is love!”

Through all life’s dangers, doubts and fears,—
In all our trials, toils and tears,
This promise spans the darkest years:—
“God, the Eternal God, is love!”

Blest tidings, borne by Holy Dove,
Of welcome waiting us above,—
Through endless ages there to prove—
“God, the Eternal God, is love!”

AS THOU WILT.

Give what Thou wilt,
And what Thou wilt, withhold;
Only, O Lord, bestow
Thy mercy manifold.

Give what Thou wilt,
And what Thou wilt, recall;
Thou still art ours, O God,
And Thou art all in all.

Rich in Thy gifts,
But richer in Thy grace,
What bliss, what glory, ours,
When we behold Thy face!

WE WOULD SING THE STORY!

We would sing the story
Of Thy wondrous love,
Jesus, King of glory,
On Thy throne above.

Once in a rude manger
Thou didst lowly lie,—
Sweetest little stranger
From the world on high.

Sister none, nor brother,
There to welcome Thee,—
Only Thy dear mother
Watching tenderly.

Yet, unseen, around Thee,
(Oh how kind and good!)
Glad that they had found Thee,—
Shining angels stood.

Angels who from heaven
Brought the wondrous word,
To the whole world given,—
First by shepherds heard.

For, while they were tending
Their lone flocks by night,
Over them were bending
Angels pure and bright.

And they heard them singing,
“Peace, good will to men!”
God’s sweet message bringing;—
Near was heaven, then!

Happy shepherds! speeding
Unto Bethlehem,
Eagerly all heading

CHRISTMAS.

O holy, happy morning,
That saw the Saviour's birth!
The star, thy brow adorning,
Beams mercy on the earth;—
For shepherds, and for sages,
Thy cheer, impartial, free,—
The travail of the Ages
Finds recompense in thee.

My soul, be thou believing,—
No more thy past deplore;
In Christ, all loss retrieving,
Rejoice forevermore.
By love unknown attended,
Thy weary watch and ward:—
Behold the vision splendid!
The angel of the Lord!

And hark! the herald angel!
The radiant, rapturous throng!
The ravishing evangel
Floods all the hills with song:—
“To God, in heaven, glory;
Good will to men, below;—”
Speed, speed the blessed story,
That all the world may know.

Repeat it softly, slowly;
For still, in hut and hall,
Are lonely hearts and lowly,
That hunger for it all.
Again, again the story,—
Till sin and sorrow cease:
“To God, the Father, glory,
And to His children, peace.”

“AS HE IS.”

God in man, and man in God!
Speed the glorious word abroad;
Heart's best hope, and Heaven's plan—
Man in God, and God in man!

Into human history
Blooms the blessed mystery;—
Dayspring darkest night doth span:—
Lo, the Christ! the Son of Man!

Brother, thine the call divine;
Thine the grace, the glory thine;
Life's ideal in Jesus see:—
As He is, so we may be.

O, how high, how deep, how broad—
Infinite the love of God!
Heaven shall crown the wondrous plan,—
Man in God, and God in man!

PASSION-TIDE.

The Way of Sorrows Thou hast trod,
Dear suffering Saviour, Lamb of God!
And now, O nameless agony!
They nail Thee to the cruel Tree.

With bleeding brow and breaking heart,
Thou bearest, Lord, Thy baleful part;—
And sorer far than we can see,
Thy Passion's painful mystery.

Yet here, triumphant o'er our sins,
Thy blessed reign on earth begins,—
And boundless empire waits for Thee,
O thorn-crowned King of Calvary!

Before Thy Cross the world shall bow;
Victor, because the Victim, Thou:—
Thy dying love, O Christ, shall be
The bond that draws all hearts to Thee.

IN BROTHERHOOD WITH ALL.

O Christ, the light of all that live,
In heaven above, in earth beneath,
To all Thou dost Thy blessing give,
In brotherhood with all that breathe.

In brotherhood with all that breathe!
Redeemer, Saviour, Thee we laud,
And thy dear cross with glory wreath,
O Son of Mary! Son of God!

Thy loving spirit, Jesus, give
To us who serve Thee here beneath,
That we, henceforth, like Thee may live
In brotherhood with all that breathe.

CODE AND CREED.

Christ's life our code,—His Cross our creed,
Our common glad confession be;—
Our deepest wants, our highest aims,
Find their fulfillment, Lord, in Thee.

Dear Son of God! Thy blessed will,
Our hearts would own with saints above;
All life is larger for Thy law,—
All service sweeter for Thy love.

Thy life our code! in letters clear
We read our duty, day by day,—
Thy footsteps tracing eagerly,
Who art the Truth, the Life, the Way.

Thy Cross our creed! Thy boundless love
A ransomed world at last shall laud,
And crown Thee their eternal King,
O Lord of Glory! Lamb of God!

Till then, to Thee our souls aspire,
In ardent prayer and earnest deed,—
With love like Thine, confessing, still,
Christ's life our code,—His Cross our creed!

EASTER-TIDE.

Easter bells are ringing,
Easter anthems rise,—
Age and Childhood singing
Strains that seek the skies;
Seek their source, ascending
Where, in rapture sweet,
Song and service blending,
Saint and seraph meet.

“Christ, the Lord, is risen!”
Wondering angels cry;
“Broken, Death’s dread prison!”
Sons of men reply.
Blessed song and story!
Doubt and fear depart,—
Resurrection glory
Floods the faithful heart.

Purest, purest pleasure
In each bosom wells;
Happy, happy measure—
How the choral swells!
By that song supplanted,
Wrath and wrong shall cease;
From this hour undaunted
Reigns the Prince of Peace!

Easter lilies, blowing,
Breathe His praise abroad,—
All their grace bestowing
On the Son of God.
Lo! His brow adorning,
Kings their homage pay;
Hark! the stars of morning
Hail His boundless sway.

EASTER LILIES.

In faith sincere we bear the sign
Of Thy dear cross, O Christ divine!
And in our hearts the lilies bloom
That blossom by Thy radiant tomb.

Thy dying love, Thy glorious power
Triumphant over sin and death,
Shall be our song till life's last hour,
And thrill with praise life's parting breath.

Then, then, O bliss beyond compare!
Thy face, Thy glory, we shall see,
And in the home immortal share
Eternal life and love with Thee.

In faith sincere we bear the sign
Of Thy dear cross, O Christ divine!
And in our hearts the lilies bloom
That blossom by Thy radiant tomb.

EASTER-TIDE ADORATION.

O Lamb of God, for sinners slain,
To loving hearts restored again!
Our Light, our Life, Redeemer, Lord,—
Forever be Thy name adored.

Victorious over death and hell,—
Incarnate Word, Immanuel!
Thou comest, Saviour, to Thine own:
Thy cross is now Thy glorious throne!

The Earth her richest gains shall bring,
To crown Thee Conqueror and King;
And the abundance of the sea
Shall be converted unto Thee.

Kings at Thy feet their scepters lay;
The Ages own Thy widening sway;
Thy rule shall over all extend,
And Thy dominion never end!

THE KING.

With all Thy saints, below, above,
Thy triumph over death we sing,
And crown Thy cross with wreaths of love,
O Christ, our Saviour, and our King!

Rejoicing in Thy widening sway,
We hail Thy coming, gracious Lord;
The dawn predicts the perfect day,—
The world redeemed, renewed, restored!

Her richest gains Earth brings to Thee:—
The East, her reverence and awe,—
The West, her boundless energy,
Her learning, liberty, and law.

Where'er stars shine or dews shall fall,
Thine is the power, the kingdom Thine;
Thou by Thy cross hast conquered all,
O Jesus, Saviour, Love divine!

AN EASTER-TIDE LYRIC.

Thine was the cross, O Christ,—
The brow thorn-crown'd and gory;
Thine, blessed Saviour, now,
The kingdom, power, and glory!

The ages own Thy sway;—
All kings shall bow before Thee,
And to Thy service bring
Their honor, power and glory,

All that Thy grace bestowed,
The world shall yet restore Thee,—
Enshrining in its heart
The bitter cross that bore Thee.

With saints and seraphim,
Let us, O Lord, adore Thee,—
Ascribing to Thy name
The kingdom, power, and glory!

And in the hour of death,
Receive us, we implore Thee,
To share, forevermore,
Thy kingdom, power, and glory!

AN EASTER IDYL.

Between two twilights folded in,—
Kiss'd by the day's sweet breath,
Frail as the flowers of fairest bloom,
We pass from birth to death.

Between two twilights,—dawn and dusk,—
Two twilights,—dusk and dawn!
We shall not know that we have slept,—
So soon the night has gone.

For dearer far, to God, are we,
Than fairest flowers of earth;—
Breaks on the soul eternal day,—
Death is another birth!

ASCENSION-TIDE.

Lamb of the riven side,—
Lord of lords, glorified!
Victim and Victor, Thee we adore;
Shepherd of Israel,
Saviour from death and hell,
Mighty Immanuel! reign evermore.

Lion of Judah,
From Brahm and from Buddha
Seize for Thy glory the sea and the land;
Where age-long error thralls,
Where blackest night appalls,
There, with her radiant walls, let Zion stand.

The gates of the morning,
Thy temple adorning,
Shall beacon the uttermost isles of the sea;
And nations, now unknown,
Shall bow before Thy throne,
And Thee their Sovereign own, with saintly jubilee.

Orient, and Occident,
Hail Him the Father sent!
Greet Him with shoutings, and joyfully sing;
On love's blest mission bent,
Through Death's wide realm He went
Conq'ror omnipotent;—crown Him your King!

Martyr with gory brow,
Monarch in glory, now,—
Victim and Victor, Thee we adore;
Shepherd of Israel,
Saviour from death and hell,
Mighty Immanuel! reign evermore.

HOMEWARD.

O Jesus, sole, sufficient source
Of hope that heals the sad heart's strife,
Direct us on our darkened course,—
Thyself the Way, the Truth, the Life.

Thou knowest the way we take, O Lord!
Didst Thou not prove its painful length?
Help of the helpless, still afford
Thy pitying love, Thy tender strength.

In every trial, every care,
Thy patient footsteps may we see;—
The sorrows of Thy cross to share
Shall then our joy and glory be.

Secure in Thy unchanging love,
No toil, no suffering will we flee,—
Assured that death itself shall prove
The path that leads to heaven and Thee.

CHRISTUS CONSOLATOR.

In the day of tribulation,
In the hour of sore temptation,
With the strength of Thy salvation,
Jesus, Saviour, comfort me!

When no more the heart may borrow
Hope and courage from the morrow,—
In the darkest depths of sorrow,
Jesus, Saviour, comfort me!

When all aid is unavailing,
Flesh and heart together failing,
Sin and death the soul assailing,—
Jesus, Saviour, comfort me!

On Thy word alone relying,— Never Thy dear name denying,—
Oh, forsake me not when dying!
Jesus, Saviour, comfort me!

Crowned, at last, in light supernal,
Victor over foes infernal,—
With Thy love, supreme, eternal,
Jesus, Saviour, comfort me!

COMPENSATION.

The mystery of sorrow,
The mystery of pain,
Shall sure, some happy morrow,
To every heart be plain.

Till then, O loving Master,
Thy footsteps may we see,
And only press the faster
Through darkest days to Thee.

Choose Thou each care, each trial,
As serves Thy will divine,
And be our self-denial,
And sacrifice, like Thine.

Strung on the string of duty,
Life's toils and tears shall be
Like pearls of priceless beauty,—
The soul's fair rosary!

And dearer yet, and dearer,
Thy cross, O Christ, shall be,
As nearer yet, and nearer,
We draw to heaven and Thee!

FROM MORNING TO MORNING!

Lovingly the morning glows
On the lily and the rose;
So the heart of God o'erflows!

Quietly the sky looks down
On the turmoil of the town,—
Face divine, without a frown.

Peacefully, when toil is o'er,
Twilight comes to sea and shore,—
Pledge of rest for evermore.

Tenderly the moonbeams fall
On the hovel and the hall;—
So God's pity shelters all.

Soft the light on lea and lawn,
Till the faithful stars are gone,—
Then—the rapture of the dawn!

Section 2. Information about the Mission of Project Gutenberg

Project Gutenberg is synonymous with the free distribution of electronic works in formats readable by the widest variety of computers including obsolete, old, middle-aged and new computers. It exists because of the efforts of hundreds of volunteers and donations from people in all walks of life.

Volunteers and financial support to provide volunteers with the assistance they need are critical to reaching Project Gutenberg's goals and ensuring that the Project Gutenberg collection will remain freely available for generations to come. In 2001, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation was created to provide a secure and permanent future for Project Gutenberg and future generations. To learn more about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation and how your efforts and donations can help, see Sections 3 and 4 and the Foundation information page at www.gutenberg.org.

Section 3. Information about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation is a non-profit 501(c)(3) educational corporation organized under the laws of the state of Mississippi and granted tax exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service. The Foundation's EIN or federal tax identification number is 64-6221541. Contributions to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation are tax deductible to the full extent permitted by U.S. federal laws and your state's laws.

The Foundation's business office is located at 41 Watchung Plaza #516, Montclair NJ 07042, USA, +1 (862) 621-9288. Email contact links and up to date contact information can be found at the Foundation's website and official page at www.gutenberg.org/contact

Section 4. Information about Donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

Project Gutenberg™ depends upon and cannot survive without widespread public support and donations to carry out its mission of increasing the number of public domain and licensed works that can be freely distributed in machine-readable form accessible by the widest array of equipment including outdated equipment. Many small donations ($1 to $5,000) are particularly important to maintaining tax exempt status with the IRS.

The Foundation is committed to complying with the laws regulating charities and charitable donations in all 50 states of the United States. Compliance requirements are not uniform and it takes a considerable effort, much paperwork and many fees to meet and keep up with these requirements. We do not solicit donations in locations where we have not received written confirmation of compliance. To SEND DONATIONS or determine the status of compliance for any particular state visit www.gutenberg.org/donate.

While we cannot and do not solicit contributions from states where we have not met the solicitation requirements, we know of no prohibition against accepting unsolicited donations from donors in such states who approach us with offers to donate.

International donations are gratefully accepted, but we cannot make any statements concerning tax treatment of donations received from outside the United States. U.S. laws alone swamp our small staff.

Please check the Project Gutenberg web pages for current donation methods and addresses. Donations are accepted in a number of other ways including checks, online payments and credit card donations. To donate, please visit: www.gutenberg.org/donate.

Section 5. General Information About Project Gutenberg electronic works

Professor Michael S. Hart was the originator of the Project Gutenberg concept of a library of electronic works that could be freely shared with anyone. For forty years, he produced and distributed Project Gutenberg eBooks with only a loose network of volunteer support.

Project Gutenberg eBooks are often created from several printed editions, all of which are confirmed as not protected by copyright in the U.S. unless a copyright notice is included. Thus, we do not necessarily keep eBooks in compliance with any particular paper edition.

Most people start at our website which has the main PG search facility: www.gutenberg.org.

This website includes information about Project Gutenberg, including how to make donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, how to help produce our new eBooks, and how to subscribe to our email newsletter to hear about new eBooks.
