Bird's Nest

SCENE.—A little low white cottage, approached by a gravel-path which winds up from gray, moss-grown steps at L., flanked by lilac-bushes. A sunken step leads across the tiny pillared porch, twined deep with honeysuckle which, together with the tall, recently-acquired French windows, stands open into the living-room, dark now except for its moonlit shadows.

At the rise of the curtain there is a moment in which the dark and stillness permeate one; then there is a slight noise overhead, an electric light flashes in the upper hall, and a tallish, youthfully old figure that is MARTIN DOAN, wearing valet's livery, can be made out, descending the little flight of stairs just inside. As he reaches the bottom, the heavy strokes of the clock in the church tower, faintly visible in the middle-distance, begin to boom out midnight. MARTIN pauses, listening. As the strokes proceed, he steps into the open doorway, and peers into the garden.

MARTIN.

[In soft unison with the bells.] Nine—ten—eleven—twelve——!

[Then, snapping the profound quiet which succeeds the ending of the chimes, there is an abrupt movement above stairs, and GEORGE SANFORD'S voice, thick but vibrant with unwonted excitement, calls.

SANFORD.

That you, Martin?

MARTIN.

[Turning toward the cottage.] Yes, sir.

SANFORD.

[Jovially descending the stairs.] Well, well, Martin, what have you got to keep you awake?

MARTIN.

[Measuring a conscious distance in his voice.] I hardly know, sir! It was such a night, sir! I was going to bring up the ear-trumpet——

SANFORD.

[Joining MARTIN on the doorstep, his too-well-fitting clothes making an open secret of his stoutness.] Well, well, did you think you'd find it here, listening to those everlasting chimes? But I'm glad you reminded me, Martin! I shouldn't have slept a wink if I hadn't known it was all right, every way!

MARTIN.

[Again turning to go in.] Yes, sir, I put it on the table with the other packages——

SANFORD.

Thanks. [Laying a protesting hand on MARTIN's arm.] But don't go in yet, Martin! I—I want to talk.

MARTIN.

Yes, sir.

SANFORD.

[Sentimentally looking up at the moon.] Just look at her! Isn't she splendid? Doesn't she—— [He breaks into a fat chuckle.] Now just listen to that, will you? Don't that show the state I'm in—callin' the moon "her" and "she"! Why, that's what they say in the magazines. I was readin' one last night—[With fatuous explicitness.] one of those love-stories! Why, Martin, I haven't said "her" and "she" for forty years!

MARTIN.

[Dutifully.] Yes, sir.

SANFORD.

[Testily.] Well, don't that show——?

MARTIN.

[Dreamy eyes on the cedar over the cottage.] The moon's beautiful, sir!

SANFORD.

[With a pitying snort.] Beautiful! Why, Martin, beautiful's no word for it! She—she's elegant! Magnificent—er—“magnifique,” I think the French would call it! Such a romantic language, French! Mrs. McCormorant's kept a French maid for years! But of course you couldn't be expected to know, or—[A sentimental hand on his heart.] or feel——!

MARTIN.

[Suddenly attentive.] Not a pain, sir, in your heart?

SANFORD.

[Starting irritably.] Pain?—in my heart? What are you talking about?

MARTIN.

Beg pardon, sir, but I understood the doctor said——

SANFORD.

Damn the doctor! Don't you know I only went to satisfy Evelina—Mrs. McCormorant? Why, I never was fitter in my life! But she does love me so—[Sighing.] and I her! I her! Ah, Martin, again that is something you cannot understand—when two hearts beat as one! [Scornfully, as MARTIN says nothing.] I suppose you'd think it was a disease!

MARTIN.

Sir——?

SANFORD.

[Holding him as both look into the garden.] Ah, no matter! Just think, Martin, this time to-morrow night we shall be here—she and I—here in the Bird's Nest—— [Chuckling.] Ha-ha—not bad, that, considering the nest-egg! I whispering sweet nothings into her little sea-shell ear!

MARTIN.

[Edging away.] Beg pardon, sir, but shall I fetch the ear-trumpet up to your room?

SANFORD.

[Seizing him suspiciously.] Eh? Now what did you mean by that, I'd like to know?

MARTIN.

[Impeccably.] Why, I thought you wanted it, sir!

SANFORD.

Yes, yes, I wanted it, but you see—I'd just been saying—er—I'd just been alluding—[As MARTIN regards him.] oh, damn it, no matter! No matter!

MARTIN.

Shall I fetch it, sir?

SANFORD.

[Reluctantly turning indoors with him.] I suppose so! But mind, if ever I find you insinuating things about Mrs. McCormorant's deafness—oh, well, you may take your month's pay and clear out! Why, it might gum the whole game!

MARTIN.

Yes, sir. In fact, sir, as you mentioned it, and a similar thought being in my own mind——

SANFORD.

[Hastily.] I'm not mentioning anything, Martin—and neither are you!—Assuredly not the night before my wedding!—when you know perfectly well, or would, if you had the least touch of romance—that I'm all of a flutter inside! [As they step, fumbling a little, into the living-room.] Now where's that confounded button? This jumpy moonlight makes everything disappear!

[MARTIN switches on the light, which illumines the old spinnet, L., and the portrait of an elderly woman in crude, modern evening dress, which hangs upon the wall.]

MARTIN.

Here, sir——! [Going to the table, c., on which are several ear-trumpets.] Now you'll be able to see which ear-trumpet's the best, sir!

SANFORD.

[With a grunt, surveying the instruments before him.] Oh, you unwrapped them!

MARTIN.

Why, yes, seeing how important it was for to-morrow! I was very careful, sir——

SANFORD.

Yes, yes, it would never do to let her go to church with her trumpet broken. Dear, dear, such an unfortunate accident—and the day before the wedding! Here, let's bring it all into the garden—— [As MARTIN obeys him, and as they carry the little table just outside.] Not to hear the vows—— [Sentimentally.] “Till death do us part!” [Then, practically, to MARTIN.] Look here—before I go upstairs, let's try them out—— [Giving MARTIN the rope end of one of the trumpets.] You go over there—[With a gesture, right foreground.] and say something!

MARTIN.

[Dubiously preparing to obey.] But you're not deaf, sir!

SANFORD.

[Slightly dashed.] No, I'm not deaf—but it might give us an idea—— [He backs away from MARTIN.] There! Now try it!

MARTIN.

[On a low note.] You'd best go to bed, sir!

SANFORD.

[With an irritability that shows he has heard.] I can't hear a word!

MARTIN.

[As before.] You wouldn't want rheumatism on your wedding day! You know what the doctor——

[SANFORD puts down the trumpet crossly, jerks the other end from MARTIN, lays the instrument on the table, and hastily selects another.

SANFORD.

Here—let's try this one—and change places with me—and you hold the thing-um-a-bob to your ear! [MARTIN, with a faint shrug, complies, so that he stands where SANFORD has been standing, therefore facing the garden. As the arrangement is completed, SANFORD begins, speaking sentimentally into the tube.] Do you know, they say the Bird's Nest was built for lovers! Can you hear?

MARTIN.

[His eyes on the garden.] So I have heard, sir!

SANFORD.

[Practically.] That's good! [Suppressing a yawn.] Then I guess I'll give her this one—it's too late to try 'em all!

MARTIN.

[Suggestively.] Best try if I can hear the story, sir!

SANFORD.

The story? Oh, yes! [At first he speaks into the tube, but as he continues, he seems to forget his original purpose, becoming engrossed in his subject.] Well, I had it from the man I bought Bird's Nest of, a year ago, before I put in the improvements. Queer! I don't believe I've thought of it since that day! And I asked him why he didn't put it in order himself, and he—he said that years ago his father was planning to bring his bride here when——

MARTIN.

[As SANFORD breaks off.] Yes, sir?

SANFORD.

[Beginning to laugh softly, as at a delicate joke he does not himself understand.] Why, he could! He simply couldn't! You see—Bird's Nest was built for lovers——! [As MARTIN says nothing.] Lovers, Martin! Why don't you laugh? Don't you see the joke?

MARTIN.

[Gravely.] No, sir. Is the story a joke, sir?

SANFORD.

The story? Dear, no! A ghost-story, Martin—think of that! Brrr-rrr! [With a mock shiver, lowering his voice in coarse joviality.] Spooks—haunted! Nobody but me's had the nerve to think of living here for fifty years and more! Afraid the visitors mightn't approve. Visitors—ha-ha! Bear in mind, Martin—Bird's Nest was built for lovers. [As SANFORD begins to laugh again, MARTIN regards him with a curious look. He is still laughing when the grandfather clock in the parlor begins to strike midnight. SANFORD, himself again, starts violently, takes a step toward MARTIN, then, as if rooted to the spot, stands listening. The face of MARTIN, too, has changed. Pallor, first, then, as the clock strikes on, light, reflected as from some deep centre within, covers his face. He casts one anxious glance at his master; then, as if surrendering himself to his profound absorption, he softly crosses to the porch and peers out. SANFORD, as the strokes go on.] Whatever made you wind up that damned old clock, Martin?

MARTIN.

[At the door.] I didn't wind it!

SANFORD.

You must have! It hasn't struck since I took the cottage!

MARTIN.

[Turning and regarding him significantly.] But it is striking, sir, isn't it? Striking midnight?

SANFORD.

[Abruptly.] So you have heard the story?

[Without looking at him, MARTIN steps further into the garden where white moonlight now floods gravel-path and steps. Then, a note of repressed triumph in his voice.]

MARTIN.

Yes, sir——! Ten—eleven—twelve——! [Then to himself, on a low note of joy.] Ah——!

SANFORD.

Built for lovers——! Well, why not? Why not? Ain't love the strongest thing in the world?—Stronger than death?

[As MARTIN, incapable of answer, stares into the garden, SANFORD, with a grunt, turns inside, and laboriously begins the ascent of the little staircase. Once he pauses and throws back a condescending glance. Perceiving it lost on his abstracted servant, he resumes his journey, and presently passes out of sight into the rooms above. There is a moment of pregnant silence. Then, with a smothered cry, MARTIN steps swiftly forward, and, arms extended in a poignant, yearning gesture, seems to greet the two persons who, unaware of him, are rounding the path to the garden. As, very close to one another, they come onward to the cottage, his arms drop, and as they mount the little steps, he withdraws into the shadows of the hedge. At this, the small feminine figure in the colonial flowered lavender and quilted poke-bonnet, slips her little black-mitted hand even more closely into the arm of her grave young escort. He wears a coat of deep bright blue and snuff-colored trousers; a high white stock is about his throat; on his head, a square hat.]

LYDIA.

[With clear approval, as MARTIN vanishes.] That was very polite of him, dear Richard! Quite as if he understood the circumstances.

RICHARD.

[Ardently.] Yes, yes, but pray do not let us think of that now, my darling! We are home—at last!

LYDIA.

[Caressing the lace ruffle on his sleeve.] Yes, of course, dear Richard! But [With vague unrest.] we must be particular about the people—I fear he is not the only one about!

RICHARD.

Must we think of them at once? Couldn't we just settle down?

LYDIA.

[Rapping him playfully with her little prayer-book.] Settle down? Without knowing who's about? The idea! Do you think my mamma brought me up to be that kind of a housekeeper?

RICHARD.

[With a courtly bend.] I'm sure you're the best housekeeper a man ever had!

LYDIA.

[Sweeping him a courtesy.] Thank you, thank you, dear Richard! [Then, suddenly picking up her long flowered skirts so that the lavender clocks twinkle above the little slippered feet.] And I'll prove it to you! [Puzzled, half to herself.] Though I don't know why I said that about the people a minute ago. Things puzzle me so sometimes. I'll race you to the kitchen—though it's unladylike, I suppose, to run—but I do want to make you a pasty. Mamma always made them for my papa, and my marriage being so near, she taught me last week. I made them perfectly yesterday!

[LYDIA breaks into a run; RICHARD catches her wrist, and together they are running into the cottage, when the ear-trumpets on the table meet their astonished eyes.]

RICHARD.

[Pausing and examining them.] Lydia! What are they? What on earth can they all be?

LYDIA.

[Laying down her prayer-book and just touching them.] I haven't the—the ghost of an idea! What do you think they are, Richard? You've studied so much,—wouldn't the Rev. Mr. Heathcote have prepared you for them?

RICHARD.

[Fingering them cautiously.] He might have, I suppose, but I don't believe I ever got that far advanced!

LYDIA.

[Penitently.] That's because I interfered with the pursuit of your studies, dear Richard! If you hadn't stopped to marry me——

RICHARD.

Ah, Lydia, that's the best thing my poor old tutor ever did,—marrying us to-day!

LYDIA.

[Suddenly drawing very close and laying her little hands on his breast in a sort of piteous daring.] To-day? Oh, Richard,—there's the queer feeling again—it comes and goes! But if it was to-day,—[Very poignantly.] Oh, Richard, why were we so long getting home?

RICHARD.

[Caressing her gently.] It was that little spill we had, my darling! That's why you're still a little shaken. I feel much the same way myself! Ajax was trotting along nicely and, after all, it was hardly strange how frightened he became at that steam-car!

LYDIA.

[Ruefully.] Poor little pony! I should think they might have waited for their old experiment till after our wedding! One thing, I am sure that when Papa informs Mr. Van Beuren about the accident, he will put a stop to any such ridiculous practises! [Tossing her curls.] Steam-cars, indeed!

RICHARD.

[Thoughtfully.] I suppose so. And yet, of course it isn't as if it had been a serious accident! Ajax stopped as soon as we upset! [He bends over her with sudden anxiety.] You—you're quite sure it didn't hurt you, my darling?

LYDIA.

[With a little laugh.] Why, Richard, you've asked me that a hundred times! Of course it didn't hurt! I was just a bit frightened—more for poor little Jaxy than myself. How he did run! That steam-car made such a queer noise—and moving that way without a thing to make it go. Positively creepy, I call it! [Rousing herself.] But my frock's all right! There's only this——

[She pushes back her bonnet and clustering curls to show his concerned eyes a tiny mark over her left temple.]

RICHARD.

[Bending and kissing it.] Kiss it and make it well! [He plays a moment with her curls; then, gravely.] Dearest Lydia, how thankful I am it was nothing serious!

LYDIA.

[Nestling close.] And how thankful I am for you! Just what you showed me? No more?

RICHARD.

[Pointing to an imperceptible stain on his plum-colored waistcoat.] A mere scratch!

LYDIA.

[Softly.] Dear Richard—will you not think me foolish if——

RICHARD.

[Taking her face between his hands.] If what, Pet? Is it being my wife makes you so afraid of me? Indeed I've never noticed such behavior before!

LYDIA.

Don't laugh, dear Richard! I know I was never very religious! It is so good to be alive! [With a little shiver.] Alive——! Alive——! Religion is just for poor sick dead people, but——

RICHARD.

What, Lydia?

LYDIA.

Well, on Sunday, would you send a messenger to the Rev. Mr. Heathcote and have him offer that—that thanksgiving in the prayer-book about a safe return? [With a desperate little sob.] Oh, Richard, I—I couldn't bear to have been hurt in the runaway—Not to be here, alive and happy, in Bird's Nest——

[She stops, panting, and he gathers her into safe, protecting arms.]

RICHARD.

But we are in Bird's Nest, my dearest! We are! We are!

LYDIA.

[Looking up from his breast in frightened appeal.] Of course we are! But I'm glad to have you tell me so! You see, Richard, long before I was a married woman—one afternoon last spring it was—an old gipsy woman came to our house one day, and she read my palm—Mamma was out—or she never would have permitted it!—And she told me——

RICHARD.

What did she tell you?

LYDIA.

She said—"It will end where it began!"

RICHARD.

[With a laugh, though his eyes are troubled.] Was she referring to my Greek? That ended where it began!

LYDIA.

[Seriously, as they pass through the open door into the little parlor.] Mamma thought it meant my marriage! She consulted the Vicar, but he was too highly educated to believe in such "nonsense," he called it! And I was always so happy—in spite of sister Eliza's being so much prettier than me—don't you think so, Richard?

RICHARD.

[Indignantly.] Eliza! Flibbertigibbets! Why, you're the prettiest girl in the world! [Turning her to the tall mirror at the side of the room.] There! See for yourself——!

LYDIA.

[Smiling.] How on earth can you think so? [Then she goes close and examines the cut for herself.] Lucky my hair curls, isn't it? This horrid little mark will never show. Now poor sister Eliza—of course she is much prettier than me, Richard—but her hair's straight as a poker, and do you know, whenever she tries to have curls, she invariably burns it!

[RICHARD, taking a turn about the room, during the last speech, has now brought up before the full-length portrait of MRS. McCORMORANT that hangs upon the wall. Her pink satin and the diamond pendant about her substantial neck shine bright in the electric lamp beneath the portrait.

RICHARD.

Well, speaking of beauty—— [Confronted by the sight of the lamp, he touches the bulb gingerly.] Good gracious! Glass all round the lamp! How on earth would the smoke get out? And a string—oh, heavens——! [As he puts out the light.] What have I done?

LYDIA.

[Helplessly, at his side.] Oh, Richard——!

RICHARD.

[Accidentally pulling the light on again.] How very strange!

LYDIA.

[Breaking into a peal of delicious laughter, as the picture flashes again into view.] Richard! My heavens! Did you ever see such clothes? She must have got them out of the Ark!

[RICHARD surveys the portrait with frank disgust, and then lets his eyes rest on his little bride with patent satisfaction.

RICHARD.

Poor thing! I shall never complain again about women changing the fashions! What else was there for her grandchildren to do?

LYDIA.

[Scornfully.] Grandchildren! Why, Richard, I'm sure Grandmamma never wore such a frock! [Pointing to the portrait.] She must have been a great-great, at least!

RICHARD.

[With decision.] And not on my side! Possibly yours, Lydia?

LYDIA.

Not at all! [Puzzled.] But if she isn't on yours, Richard——? [A fear which she vainly tries to repress suddenly thrilling her voice.] But she must be on yours! Else why is she here?

RICHARD.

I tell you she isn't, Lydia! [Then, as MARTIN softly emerges from the shadows where he has been watching them.] Look! There he is again! Who can it be?

LYDIA.

[Tugging at his arm, fascinated by the portrait.] Oh, Richard, dear Richard, I—I don't like to look at her! It frightens me!

MARTIN.

[Approaching the door, and looking within.] I beg pardon, sir, but did you call?

RICHARD.

[Looking from MARTIN to LYDIA.] Call? No!

MARTIN.

[Regarding LYDIA fixedly.] Nor you, Madam?

LYDIA.

[Beckoning MARTIN to her with sudden decision.] Yes! Do you know who that lady was?

MARTIN.

Why, that, Madam, that is Mrs. McCormorant!

RICHARD.

“Is”! And what a name! “Mc” what? We never had such a name in our family!

LYDIA.

[Impatiently.] You've already said she wasn't in your family! And she certainly wasn't in mine! [She turns peremptorily to MARTIN.] Will you please tell us who she was? And why her portrait is here?

MARTIN.

[Watching LYDIA.] Why, Madam, Mr. Sanford had it put here to surprise her, her becoming his bride in the little church here to-morrow!

LYDIA.

[With a great effort.] His bride—to-morrow?

RICHARD.

[Gravely.] Then she's alive?

MARTIN.

[Looking from one to the other.] Why, yes, sir, to be sure she's alive!

RICHARD.

[Puzzled.] But her frock? My wife was quite certain, and so was I, that her frock was—er—well, I don't like to say anything against the lady, but, well, you know, rather old-fashioned, to say the least! [With an admiring glance at LYDIA's panniers.] You can see—there's rather a difference——!

MARTIN.

[With the ghost of a smile.] There is, indeed, sir! [Resuming, practically.] But I have often heard Mr. Sanford say, sir, that all Mrs. McCormorant's gowns are in the height of fashion!

LYDIA.

[Prettily nettled.] I trust you don't mean to imply——

MARTIN.

[Courteously.] I imply nothing to your disfavor, Madam——!

LYDIA.

[Restlessly.] Of course her frock is of no consequence—nor her being married—but—why should her portrait be here—[A sudden break in her voice.] here in Bird's Nest?

RICHARD.

[With a note of authority.] Yes, that's what we don't care for! Why should her portrait be here, in our parlor?

MARTIN.

[Simply.] Why, so they can both admire it, I suppose, sir, after she comes to live here to-morrow!

LYDIA.

[Falling with a cry into RICHARD's arms.] Oh, Richard! I—I feel faint!

RICHARD.

[Tenderly carrying her to the garden bench, MARTIN following them.] There, there, my darling! [On his knees, to her.] Shall I fetch your salts?

LYDIA.

[As she clings to him, MARTIN, regarding both, a faint, quizzical sadness in his eyes.] No, no, it's not my salts I need! Oh, what did he say, Richard? What did he say?

RICHARD.

[Caressing her gently.] It was nothing, my darling! We—[Vainly trying to repress a quiver in his voice.] we must have misunderstood him!

LYDIA.

[Softly repulsing him, sitting bolt upright.] No, I don't think so! I——[Suddenly she hides her face in her hands, in an agony of remembrance.] Oh, Richard, don't you know? We've been mistaken before about—about Bird's Nest?

RICHARD.

[Helplessly, as he rises.] My dearest Lydia——!

LYDIA.

[Jumping up and confronting MARTIN with the piteous dignity of her little clasped hands.] You said just now that—that [With a gesture toward the portrait.] lady was alive—and going to be married, and that she—that they—plan to live here, in Bird's Nest?

MARTIN.

[Very low.] Yes, Madam!

LYDIA.

[Drawing herself up.] But doesn't she know that Richard and I are to live in Bird's Nest?

MARTIN.

[Very gently.] Are you sure, Madam?

LYDIA.

[She looks long into his troubled, wistful eyes; then pitifully.] We were to live here! [Impetuously.] Oh, don't you know? We were to live here—and then—then Ajax was frightened by the steam-car, coming home from church this afternoon, and ever since——

MARTIN.

[Softly, as LYDIA stops, unable to proceed.] The folks about here always say Bird's Nest was built for lovers!

LYDIA.

[In a low voice.] The folks? Since when have they said that? I never heard it!

MARTIN.

[With a long look.] No, Madam,—it was not—in your day! [Then, softly to himself, looking from LYDIA to RICHARD.] Built for lovers——!

LYDIA.

[As before.] And are they—lovers?

MARTIN.

Mrs. McCormorant is very rich.

RICHARD.

[Shocked.] You keep saying, "Mrs.!" She has been married before?

MARTIN.

Just so! An attractive woman some think, sir, in spite of her deafness.

RICHARD.

But why should she be deaf?

LYDIA.

[With sudden petulance.] What does it matter whether she's deaf or not when——

MARTIN.

[Imperturbably to RICHARD.] It's merely her age, sir——! Sixty-three she is, but——

RICHARD.

Good God! It's impossible! It's unnatural!

MARTIN.

[Watching LYDIA narrowly.] She took a great fancy to Bird's Nest the day Mr. Sanford brought her over! It makes them both feel quite young again, so they say!

LYDIA.

[Under her breath.] Young! Sixty-three——! I'm not eighteen——!

MARTIN.

[Watching her as before.] Haven't old people a right to happiness, Madam?

LYDIA.

[Irrelevantly, a passionate ring in her voice.] The folks about here say Bird's Nest was built for lovers!

MARTIN.

[Gravely.] Quite so, Madam! [With an old-fashioned bow.] I am glad to have seen you, Madam—I had heard—so much. But I must go now. I have to make sure Mr. Sanford has taken his medicine before retiring—his heart's not just right.

RICHARD.

[In a level voice.] Mr. Sanford, I presume, is the bridegroom?

MARTIN.

[Withdrawing with grave courtesy.] Er—yes, sir! And somewhat excited over to-morrow.

[MARTIN steps into the cottage, putting out the electric lights and goes upstairs.

LYDIA.

[Regarding his retreating figure.] A nice-appearing old man, Richard! [She comes quite close to him; then, softly.] I'm glad he's not being married to-morrow!

RICHARD.

[Starting.] What do you mean?

LYDIA.

[Practically.] Well, I prefer their being horrid—like that man and that dreadful woman in the house! [Reminiscently.] I couldn't help being sorry for the gentle lady that was here,—oh, you know, quite a while ago!

RICHARD.

You mean the one they called “Virginia”? That was visiting Bird's Nest before he brought her here to live?

LYDIA.

Yes, Virginia! But he didn't really love her! We couldn't have had them about! What a cold she took that night! [Placidly.] I guess it settled on her lungs right away! [With a little smile.] They weren't here when we came back.

RICHARD.

[A trifle uncomfortably.] I know——!

LYDIA.

And another year—that dark beauty. He was speaking a foreign tongue to her when we came. “Celeste,” I think her name was. I think it is a French name. With what I had picked up at the Academy for Young Ladies, I could easily see they were planning to settle right here in a few weeks. She didn't love him at all! [With a mischievous laugh.] Do you remember how frightened she was, Richard? [Smoothing her little panniers.] Big women are always such cowards!

RICHARD.

[As before.] Yes, of course,—but——

LYDIA.

[With a touch of asperity.] What is it, Richard?

RICHARD.

You—we've upset the plans of a good many people, haven't we? Need we bother any more about them? [Gently.] We have each other—to-night——!

LYDIA.

[With infinite wistfulness.] Ah, Richard! Richard! You are only a man——! [Very low.] No one must live here! Don't you understand?

RICHARD.

[Started.] You mean—else we couldn't come back?

LYDIA.

We couldn't come back! Just think, Richard—[Caressing him gently.] we couldn't come back——! We'd wait all the long, long year, and then—when to-night came—we couldn't come back——!

RICHARD.

[Drawing her passionately into his arms.] Oh, my darling! But we must come back! It is what we live for! It——

LYDIA.

[Gravely.] Just so, Richard! I know you always agree when you—remember——!

RICHARD.

[Regarding her with sudden anxiety.] Do you think you can manage it? The lady isn't here—this time.

LYDIA.

But he's here! And do you know, Richard, in spite of what Mamma has always taught me, I hardly think men are a bit braver than women!

RICHARD.

Oh, Lydia, you really think not!

LYDIA.

[Teasing him.] Really, really, dear Richard! But, oh, look at that moon! Isn't it a shame to worry about anything with that over our heads? Oh, Richard, I want to dance. If there were only music!

RICHARD.

[Falling into her mood.] Why not make it yourself? The spinnet is there—[Pointing within.] your papa's wedding present—he thought you would like it the first night! Look, Lydia, how clear it stands in the moonlight!

LYDIA.

[Running into the house.] I could play the minuet! [Seating herself at the spinnet, she plays a few bars of a minuet with delicate, old-fashioned precision, RICHARD, who has followed her, leaning over her. Presently, she stops, and wheels abruptly about.] But, oh, that isn't enough! [Jumping up, she drags him after her to the garden.] Come, Richard! Back to the garden! I want to dance!

RICHARD.

[As they pass outdoors.] But the music, dearest Lydia! I can never do the steps without the music! Don't you remember how you laughed at me that time last week?

[Without answering, LYDIA places both herself and him in position for the minuet. Then, with low conviction.

LYDIA.

There will be music, dear Richard! Don't you remember—it used to go ——— [Humming the minuet under her breath.] this way——? [And presently, as if encouraged by her voice, the garden becomes full of throbbing fiddles and horns, as, with stately courtesy, she and RICHARD dance in and out among the flower-beds. A few moments pass; then, at a sound within the cottage, they stop dancing, and as GEORGE SANFORD, this time in dressing-gown and slippers, slowly descends the staircase, the music quivers away, though still heard now and again, as at greater distance. LYDIA softly draws RICHARD aside.] Sh—this must be he!

RICHARD.

[In a slightly nervous whisper.] After all, Lydia, this is my house! Had I not better call him out and have done with it?

LYDIA.

[Watching Sanford.] Sh——!

[For a moment SANFORD pauses at the table, outside, bright in the moonlight; picks up the ear-trumpet; with it, he heavily proceeds into the garden; then looking at the moon.

SANFORD.

[With his fat chuckle.] Ah, romance! All very well for young folks. But [Tapping the ear-trumpet.] she'll hear my vows all right with this! And romance comes easy at $100,000!

RICHARD.

[Indignantly.] Lydia! It's desecration. Let me challenge him and end it!

LYDIA.

[A restraining hand on his arm.] Hush! Leave it to me—— And that ——— [Pointing to the ear-trumpet.] He said that was to hear his vows with. How very strange!

SANFORD.

[Plumping down on the bench near him.] 'Might as well stay here. 'Can't sleep a wink.

RICHARD.

[Tears in his voice, as he feels the hour going.] Lydia! It's our one night! Make him go away!

LYDIA.

[Softly.] Ah, if he'd go away! [Louder.] If he'd burn that picture, and pack right up, and go away from Bird's Nest, and never come back!

SANFORD.

Damned pretty little house for Evelina and me! Damned lucky to get it, and so cheap, too! [With another chuckle.] Some clever Johnny must've made up that yarn about the ghosts to pull the prices down! Ghosts! Ha-ha-ha! When I sell, I'll sell high! I can swear I've never seen 'em!

LYDIA.

[Distinctly, as she emerges from the shadows, and sweeping him a mocking courtesy.] I suppose you don't see me, sir?

RICHARD.

[In a frightened whisper.] Dearest Lydia, pray be careful!

[LYDIA steals behind SANFORD, jerks up the trumpet, and, holding it to his ear.

LYDIA.

[Mischievously.] There, sir! Is it only your bride who can't hear?

[With a sleepy gesture, SANFORD brushes away the trumpet, which falls to the ground.

SANFORD.

[With a yawn.] Ah, never mind. Too much work—pick it up.

LYDIA.

[Slipping around in front of him.] Come, Richard!

RICHARD.

[Joining her somewhat hesitantly and taking her outstretched hands.] Is it quite safe, do you think?

LYDIA.

[To SANFORD, dosing on the bench.] We don't want to hurt you, sir. Say it with me, Richard——

LYDIA and RICHARD.

[Repeating together.] But Bird's Nest is our very own! Will you go away? You don't love your bride! And you know—— [With low intensity.] Bird's Nest was built for lovers!

SANFORD.

[Sleepily.] $100,000, by George! That's enough to make up for a whole lot! And Bird's Nest——

[His head drops forward with a jerk. For an instant, LYDIA bends and peers close into his face. Then, with a quick sigh of relief.

LYDIA.

Come, Richard! Let us finish our dance.

[Again, invisible violins take up the tune for the minuetting lovers, and it is perhaps guided by this that MARTIN, a moment later, wistfully reënters the garden. But once there, he goes swiftly to SANFORD and bends over him.

MARTIN.

[After a quick glance.] Dead! Oh, my God! [For a moment, with incredulous eyes, he watches the delicate, rhythmic bending and swaying of the young forms; then, with a smothered cry, he rushes forward and raises indignant hands to stop them. And as, in their grave and gay abandon they dance on, MARTIN, seeming to derive fresh support from the backward glance he flings the body, tries to catch LYDIA by her curls. MARTIN indignantly.] How dare you, you little—little——

[But, untouched, LYDIA glides past him, her light laughter mingling with the wind. Then, as MARTIN slinks back, beaten, his eyes full of wonder, an impalpable tremor passes over the garden. The violins fade; the moonlight shivers blue and chill, and LYDIA runs with a cry to RICHARD.

LYDIA.

Oh, my dearest—not yet! Not yet!

RICHARD.

[Tremulously, holding her fast.] We had just begun! We had waited a whole year!

LYDIA.

[In a panic of longing.] Oh, Richard! Richard! The church clock has struck! In a moment—— [Pointing a trembling finger within.] our clock!

RICHARD.

[As the whirring noise begins that precedes the stroke.] My darling—next year——

LYDIA.

[As before.] Oh, stop it! Stop it! [Her head against his breast.] Oh, Richard, I—I haven't seen the nursery yet!

[Then, as the clock strikes ONE, her features change. She gathers up her little prayer-book, slips a decorous, mitted hand within the arm he gravely offers her, and together, passing SANFORD'S body without a glance, they turn away down the little path.]

MARTIN.

[Stepping forward and leaning over the body.] Too bad! [Then, his eyes young and wistful as they follow the retreating figures.] But Bird's Nest was built for lovers!

 END OF THE PROJECT GUTENBERG EBOOK BIRD'S NEST, A FANTASY IN ONE ACT ***

Updated editions will replace the previous one—the old editions will be renamed.

Creating the works from print editions not protected by U.S. copyright law means that no one owns a United States copyright in these works, so the Foundation (and you!) can copy and distribute it in the United States without permission and without paying copyright royalties. Special rules, set forth in the General Terms of Use part of this license, apply to copying and distributing Project Gutenberg™ electronic works to protect the PROJECT GUTENBERG™ concept and trademark. Project Gutenberg is a registered trademark, and may not be used if you charge for an eBook, except by following the terms of the trademark license, including paying royalties for use of the Project Gutenberg trademark. If you do not charge anything for copies of this eBook, complying with the trademark license is very easy. You may use this eBook for nearly any purpose such as creation of derivative works, reports, performances and research. Project Gutenberg eBooks may be modified and printed and given away—you may do practically ANYTHING in the United States with eBooks not protected by U.S. copyright law. Redistribution is subject to the trademark license, especially commercial redistribution.

START: FULL LICENSE

THE FULL PROJECT GUTENBERG™ LICENSE

PLEASE READ THIS BEFORE YOU DISTRIBUTE OR USE THIS WORK

To protect the Project Gutenberg™ mission of promoting the free distribution of electronic works, by using or distributing this work (or any other work associated in any way with the phrase “Project Gutenberg”), you agree to comply with all the terms of the Full Project Gutenberg License available with this file or online at www.gutenberg.org/license.

Section 1. General Terms of Use and Redistributing Project Gutenberg electronic works

1.A. By reading or using any part of this Project Gutenberg electronic work, you indicate that you have read, understand, agree to and accept all the terms of this license and intellectual property (trademark/copyright) agreement. If you do not agree to abide by all the terms of this agreement, you must cease using and return or destroy all copies of Project Gutenberg electronic works in your possession. If you paid a fee for obtaining a copy of or access to a Project Gutenberg electronic work and you do not agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement, you may obtain a refund from the person or entity to whom you paid the fee as set forth in paragraph 1.E.8.

1.B. “Project Gutenberg” is a registered trademark. It may only be used on or associated in any way with an electronic work by people who agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement. There are a few things that you can do with most Project Gutenberg electronic works even without complying with the full terms of this agreement. See paragraph 1.C below. There are a lot of things you can do with Project Gutenberg electronic works if you follow the terms of this agreement and help preserve free future access to Project Gutenberg electronic works. See paragraph 1.E below.

1.C. The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation (“the Foundation” or PGLAF), owns a compilation copyright in the collection of Project Gutenberg electronic works. Nearly all the individual works in the collection are in the public domain in the United States. If an individual work is unprotected by copyright law in the United States and you are located in the United States, we do not claim a right to prevent you from copying, distributing, performing, displaying or creating derivative works based on the work as long as all references to Project Gutenberg are removed. Of course, we hope that you will support the Project Gutenberg mission of promoting free access to electronic works by freely sharing Project Gutenberg works in compliance with the terms of this agreement for keeping the Project Gutenberg name associated with the work. You can easily comply with the terms of this agreement by keeping this work in the same format with its attached full Project Gutenberg License when you share it without charge with others.

1.D. The copyright laws of the place where you are located also govern what you can do with this work. Copyright laws in most countries are in a constant state of change. If you are outside the United States, check the laws of your country in addition to the terms of this agreement before downloading, copying, displaying, performing, distributing or creating derivative works based on this work or any other Project Gutenberg work. The Foundation makes no representations concerning the copyright status of any work in any country other than the United States.

1.E. Unless you have removed all references to Project Gutenberg:

1.E.1. The following sentence, with active links to, or other immediate access to, the full Project Gutenberg License must appear prominently whenever any copy of a Project Gutenberg work (any work on which the phrase “Project Gutenberg” appears, or with which the phrase “Project Gutenberg” is associated) is accessed, displayed, performed, viewed, copied or distributed:

This eBook is for the use of anyone anywhere in the United States and most other parts of the world at no cost and with almost no restrictions whatsoever. You may copy it, give it away or re-use it under the terms of the Project GutenbergTM License included with this eBook or online at www.gutenberg.org. If you are not located in the United States, you will have to check the laws of the country where you are located before using this eBook.

1.E.2. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is derived from texts not protected by U.S. copyright law (does not contain a notice indicating that it is posted with permission of the copyright holder), the work can be copied and distributed to anyone in the United States without paying any fees or charges. If you are redistributing or providing access to a work with the phrase “Project Gutenberg” associated with or appearing on the work, you must comply either with the requirements of paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 or obtain permission for the use of the work and the Project Gutenberg trademark as set forth in paragraphs 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.3. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is posted with the permission of the copyright holder, your use and distribution must comply with both paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 and any additional terms imposed by the copyright holder. Additional terms will be linked to the Project Gutenberg License for all works posted with the permission of the copyright holder found at the beginning of this work.

1.E.4. Do not unlink or detach or remove the full Project Gutenberg License terms from this work, or any files containing a part of this work or any other work associated with Project Gutenberg.

1.E.5. Do not copy, display, perform, distribute or redistribute this electronic work, or any part of this electronic work, without prominently displaying the sentence set forth in paragraph 1.E.1 with active links or immediate access to the full terms of the Project Gutenberg License.

1.E.6. You may convert to and distribute this work in any binary, compressed, marked up, nonproprietary or proprietary form, including any word processing or hypertext form. However, if you provide access to or distribute copies of a Project Gutenberg work in a format other than “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other format used in the official version posted on the official Project Gutenberg website (www.gutenberg.org), you must, at no additional cost, fee or expense to the user, provide a copy, a means of exporting a copy, or a means of obtaining a copy upon request, of the work in its original “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other form. Any alternate format must include the full Project Gutenberg License as specified in paragraph 1.E.1.

1.E.7. Do not charge a fee for access to, viewing, displaying, performing, copying or distributing any Project Gutenberg works unless you comply with paragraph 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.8. You may charge a reasonable fee for copies of or providing access to or distributing Project Gutenberg electronic works provided that:

- You pay a royalty fee of 20% of the gross profits you derive from the use of Project Gutenberg works calculated using the method you already use to calculate your applicable taxes. The fee is owed to the owner of the Project Gutenberg trademark, but he has agreed to donate royalties under this paragraph to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation. Royalty payments must be paid within 60 days following each date on which you prepare (or are legally required to prepare) your periodic tax returns. Royalty payments should be clearly marked as such and sent to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation at the address specified in Section 4, "Information about donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation."
- You provide a full refund of any money paid by a user who notifies you in writing (or by e-mail) within 30 days of receipt that s/he does not agree to the terms of the full Project Gutenberg™ License. You must require such a user to return or destroy all copies of the works possessed in a physical medium and discontinue all use of and all access to other copies of Project Gutenberg™ works.
- You provide, in accordance with paragraph 1.F.3, a full refund of any money paid for a work or a replacement copy, if a defect in the electronic work is discovered and reported to you within 90 days of receipt of the work.
- You comply with all other terms of this agreement for free distribution of Project Gutenberg™ works.

1.E.9. If you wish to charge a fee or distribute a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work or group of works on different terms than are set forth in this agreement, you must obtain permission in writing from the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the manager of the Project

Gutenberg™ trademark. Contact the Foundation as set forth in Section 3 below.

1.F.

1.F.1. Project Gutenberg volunteers and employees expend considerable effort to identify, do copyright research on, transcribe and proofread works not protected by U.S. copyright law in creating the Project Gutenberg™ collection. Despite these efforts, Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, and the medium on which they may be stored, may contain “Defects,” such as, but not limited to, incomplete, inaccurate or corrupt data, transcription errors, a copyright or other intellectual property infringement, a defective or damaged disk or other medium, a computer virus, or computer codes that damage or cannot be read by your equipment.

1.F.2. LIMITED WARRANTY, DISCLAIMER OF DAMAGES - Except for the “Right of Replacement or Refund” described in paragraph 1.F.3, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the owner of the Project Gutenberg™ trademark, and any other party distributing a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work under this agreement, disclaim all liability to you for damages, costs and expenses, including legal fees. YOU AGREE THAT YOU HAVE NO REMEDIES FOR NEGLIGENCE, STRICT LIABILITY, BREACH OF WARRANTY OR BREACH OF CONTRACT EXCEPT THOSE PROVIDED IN PARAGRAPH 1.F.3. YOU AGREE THAT THE FOUNDATION, THE TRADEMARK OWNER, AND ANY DISTRIBUTOR UNDER THIS AGREEMENT WILL NOT BE LIABLE TO YOU FOR ACTUAL, DIRECT, INDIRECT, CONSEQUENTIAL, PUNITIVE OR INCIDENTAL DAMAGES EVEN IF YOU GIVE NOTICE OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGE.

1.F.3. LIMITED RIGHT OF REPLACEMENT OR REFUND - If you discover a defect in this electronic work within 90 days of receiving it, you can receive a refund of the money (if any) you paid for it by sending a written explanation to the person you received the work from. If you received the work on a physical medium, you must return the medium with your written explanation. The person or entity that provided you with the defective work may elect to provide a replacement copy in lieu of a refund. If you received the work electronically, the person or entity providing it to you may choose to give you a second opportunity to receive the work electronically in lieu of a refund. If the second copy is also defective, you may demand a refund in writing without further opportunities to fix the problem.

1.F.4. Except for the limited right of replacement or refund set forth in paragraph 1.F.3, this work is provided to you 'AS-IS', WITH NO OTHER WARRANTIES OF ANY KIND, EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY OR FITNESS FOR ANY PURPOSE.

1.F.5. Some states do not allow disclaimers of certain implied warranties or the exclusion or limitation of certain types of damages. If any disclaimer or limitation set forth in this agreement violates the law of the state applicable to this agreement, the agreement shall be interpreted to make the maximum disclaimer or limitation permitted by the applicable state law. The invalidity or unenforceability of any provision of this agreement shall not void the remaining provisions.

1.F.6. INDEMNITY - You agree to indemnify and hold the Foundation, the trademark owner, any agent or employee of the Foundation, anyone providing copies of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works in accordance with this agreement, and any volunteers associated with the production, promotion and distribution of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, harmless from all liability, costs and expenses, including legal fees, that arise directly or indirectly from any of the following which you do or cause to occur: (a) distribution of this or any Project Gutenberg work, (b) alteration, modification, or additions or deletions to any Project Gutenberg work, and (c) any Defect you cause.

Section 2. Information about the Mission of Project Gutenberg

Project Gutenberg is synonymous with the free distribution of electronic works in formats readable by the widest variety of computers including obsolete, old, middle-aged and new computers. It exists because of the efforts of hundreds of volunteers and donations from people in all walks of life.

Volunteers and financial support to provide volunteers with the assistance they need are critical to reaching Project Gutenberg's goals and ensuring that the Project Gutenberg collection will remain freely available for generations to come. In 2001, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation was created to provide a secure and permanent future for Project Gutenberg and future generations. To learn more about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation and how your efforts and donations can help, see Sections 3 and 4 and the Foundation information page at www.gutenberg.org.

Section 3. Information about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation is a non-profit 501(c)(3) educational corporation organized under the laws of the state of Mississippi and granted tax exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service. The Foundation's EIN or federal tax identification number is 64-6221541. Contributions to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation are tax deductible to the full extent permitted by U.S. federal laws and your state's laws.

The Foundation's business office is located at 41 Watchung Plaza #516, Montclair NJ 07042, USA, +1 (862) 621-9288. Email contact links and up to date contact information can be found at the Foundation's website and official page at www.gutenberg.org/contact

Section 4. Information about Donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

Project Gutenberg™ depends upon and cannot survive without widespread public support and donations to carry out its mission of increasing the number of public domain and licensed works that can be freely distributed in machine-readable form accessible by the widest array of equipment including outdated equipment. Many small donations ($1 to $5,000) are particularly important to maintaining tax exempt status with the IRS.

The Foundation is committed to complying with the laws regulating charities and charitable donations in all 50 states of the United States. Compliance requirements are not uniform and it takes a considerable effort, much paperwork and many fees to meet and keep up with these requirements. We do not solicit donations in locations where we have not received written confirmation of compliance. To SEND DONATIONS or determine the status of compliance for any particular state visit www.gutenberg.org/donate.

While we cannot and do not solicit contributions from states where we have not met the solicitation requirements, we know of no prohibition against accepting unsolicited donations from donors in such states who approach us with offers to donate.

International donations are gratefully accepted, but we cannot make any statements concerning tax treatment of donations received from outside the United States. U.S. laws alone swamp our small staff.

Please check the Project Gutenberg web pages for current donation methods and addresses. Donations are accepted in a number of other ways including checks, online payments and credit card donations. To donate, please visit: www.gutenberg.org/donate.

Section 5. General Information About Project Gutenberg electronic works

Professor Michael S. Hart was the originator of the Project Gutenberg concept of a library of electronic works that could be freely shared with anyone. For forty years, he produced and distributed Project Gutenberg eBooks with only a loose network of volunteer support.

Project Gutenberg eBooks are often created from several printed editions, all of which are confirmed as not protected by copyright in the U.S. unless a copyright notice is included. Thus, we do not necessarily keep eBooks in compliance with any particular paper edition.

Most people start at our website which has the main PG search facility:
www.gutenberg.org.

This website includes information about Project Gutenberg, including how to make donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, how to help produce our new eBooks, and how to subscribe to our email newsletter to hear about new eBooks.
