PREFACE

One cannot have moved much in the world without hearing complaints, both from parents and young persons, about the amount of time and brain spent in the learning of languages, and the little profit derived from this outlay. These complaints, no doubt, arise partly from the want of judgment on the part of the parents, and the want of capacity and inclination on the part of their young hopefuls: parents often acting thoughtlessly on the vulgar notion that far birds have fair feathers, and preferring what is foreign to what is native, and what lies at a great distance in time or space to what is near; and young persons being forced to submit themselves to a grammatical indoctrination in which they feel no interest, and from which they derive no benefit. But it is no less true that these complaints are due in no small measure to false methods of linguistic training generally, or to some cherished prejudices in favour of certain languages on the part of the teachers; and it becomes therefore, at the present day, a matter of great practical importance to inquire how far our traditional methods of teaching languages are in conformity with the method of Nature in her great art of thought-utterance, and how far they may justly be called on to submit themselves to a revision and a reconstitution. We say at the present day emphatically, because it is quite evident that education, following in the train of democratic reform, is one of the watchwords of the hour, to which every good citizen must lend an obedient ear; and not only so, but circumstances have so changed since our schooling received its traditional form, that the wants which were satisfied by our school curriculum and school practice in the days of Milton and Locke now demand an altogether different treatment. In particular, the so-called learned languages, two hundred years ago the only medium of culture to an accomplished English gentleman, have now become the luxury of the leisurely, or the arsenal of the professional few, while other languages, such as German, not named in those days, are now sought after as the keys to the most valuable storehouses of all sorts of knowledge. Add to this that Great Britain, which was then a secondary naval power, and following the French and the Spaniards slowly in the great world-transforming process of colonisation, is now mistress of a world-wide empire from the Ganges to Vancouver Isle, through which stretch she exercises a dominant influence, combining the political virtue of ancient Rome with the commercial activity of Carthage. In these circumstances it becomes the special duty of every British man to acquire a familiar knowledge of the languages of the various races with which he may be brought into political or commercial relations; and, as languages after all are not valuable in themselves, but only as tools by which effective work in certain fields falls to be performed, we ought to see to it, both that we get the proper tools for doing the work, and that we learn to use them in such fashion as to work pleasantly and profitably; and in this view it may be truly said that, while the wrong language in the wrong place is of no use at all, even the right language in the right place, when imperfectly learned, is a tool with which the best workman can do only bad work, and perhaps cut his own fingers in the process.

As language is a function which belongs as much to every normal human creature as seeing or hearing, there can be no difficulty in finding out the method of Nature in its acquisition. We have to answer only two questions: first, What are the factors of the process by which the human babe, from being capable merely of inarticulate cries, like any of the lower animals, is developed into an easy and graceful manipulator of articulate speech? and again, How far, and in what respects, does this model require to be modified in order to enable the expert handlers of the mother tongue to use any second or third language with like expertness? That this cannot be a very difficult matter demands no far-sought induction to prove, as the fact lies before us; for from the Greeks in the South-East to the Highlanders in the North-West we find bilingual and trilingual peoples largely scattered over Europe. It is in fact as easy to learn two or three languages as to learn one, if only the learner be habitually submitted to the natural influences, and guided by the steps of a natural process.

What then, in the first place, are the steps of the process which analysis presents as elevating the inarticulate babe to the significant-speaking boy or girl? There is (1) the direct connection of certain objects with certain sounds and gestures; (2) these objects are such as stand in the nearest relation to the learner, and are presented to him in an atmosphere of the most natural and most pleasant surroundings; (3) the imitative faculty, by which he appropriates the proper sounds, is encouraged and cherished by frequent repetition, till the original impression becomes permanently stamped into his soul, and, so to speak, jumps up spontaneously with the object. Let us, in the next place, ask how far this child's linguistic ladder is affected by the performer being an adult. Manifestly the difference lies only in one point, and that altogether in favour of the adult, viz. the application of a regulated system to the accidental sequences by which the child learns its mother tongue, easily indeed and pleasantly, but slowly; for he learns not architecturally as a mason builds a house, but by the way, as one picks up a pebble on the shore or a daisy from the meadow; whereas the adult, with his firm will and his reasonable purpose, wishing to learn a language can submit himself to a reasonable and a calculated treatment; and in so doing experience has shown that in favourable circumstances, and under wise training, he can learn a foreign language more perfectly in six months than a child can do in as many years. Why then, you ask, is this not always done? Why does it seem such a difficult business to acquire a familiar knowledge of any foreign language, and why is so much brain and so much time spent so frequently on their acquisition with such scanty results? The answer can be only one: because your teacher has ignored the method of Nature, and given you a bad substitute for it in his own devices; instead of speaking to you and making you respond, in direct connection of the old object with the new sound, and thus forming a living bond between the thinking soul, the perceptive sense, and the significant utterance, he sends you to a book, there to cram yourself with dead rules and lifeless formulas about the language, in the middle of which he ought to have planted you at the start. The evil results of this neglect of the living model of Nature are only too manifest. Books are useful, but they are only secondary; in all matters of observation and practical exercise they may form an apt accompaniment or a supplement, but they never can supplant the vital function of which they are only the dead record. No one learns dancing, or fencing, or golf, or lawn-tennis from a book. The evils caused by this unnatural delegation of the work of a living teacher to the formulas of a dead book are three: (1) The direct connection between the reasonable soul and the new articulate sign of the object is lost; the learner does not shake hands, so to speak, with the object, but he cumbers himself with the phraseology of his mother tongue, and instead of saying at once δός μοι ἄρτον, give me bread, he must first ask what is the Greek for bread. In this way the new term remains a stranger to his thought, and he uses it uncomfortably, as when a man puts on a pair of shoes which have only an occasional acquaintance with his feet. (2) Then again, when, after being sufficiently tortured with mere grammatical forms, he acquires a certain vocabulary from the elementary reading books, the objects for which this vocabulary supplies the new names are seldom the objects with which he is familiarly surrounded and in which he has a living interest, but they relate to something Julius Cæsar did in Gaul or Cicero said in Rome some 2000 years ago, a region of strange sounds, in which the linguistic neophyte of this nineteenth century has no particular inclination to move, and to which his memory cannot ally itself with any feeling of kinship; and he easily forgets the word, because he does not care for the thing. But (3) even when he does care for the thing, the mere reading of a lesson every day does not in the least ensure that frequent repetition of a new vocable in connection with an object, on which the familiar knowledge of a language depends; whereas, if the teacher had commenced by making his schoolroom an echo-chamber of daily repeated sounds in connection with interesting and familiar objects directly in the view of the learner or near to his daily life, familiarity with a new language, be it Greek or be it German, would come as naturally and as pleasantly to a clever lad of seventeen as the use of the mother tongue to a dainty girl or a rattling boy of seven.

These things being so, and the method of Nature being so plain in the matter, we now ask what are the causes that have led so many of our teachers, even the most accomplished of their class, to neglect so infallible a guide, and to follow methods of linguistic inculcation equally unpleasant in the process and unprofitable in the result? These causes, fortunately, are as patent as the consequences to which they have led. The first cause is ignorance. In not a few of our educational institutions it is to be feared there are teachers—an over-worked and under-paid class—who are employed to teach languages of which they have only a very superficial knowledge and no firm hold. With persons of this class the whole process of linguistic training amounts to this, Read your book, Get your lesson, and I will hear you. Of a living appeal from the tongue of the teacher and a living response from the tongue of the learner these gentlemen have no conception. They must do the most they can, confine themselves within page and chapter of a printed book, where they require no knowledge beyond the marked limits of the lesson, and where the scantiness of their linguistic furniture and the feebleness of their linguistic vitality cannot be exposed. Let them pass. But what of the men of high accomplishment, exact scholarship, and fine taste: why should they scorn the practice which is the foundation of the rules, and the conversation which made great speeches and great poems before rules or schools were heard of? Simply because they have forgotten the lesson taught in a well-known dialogue of Plato,^[1] that the printed papers which we call books, useful for record, are rather prejudicial than profitable to the culture of memory; they have become the slaves of their tools, and defrauded the ear and the tongue of their natural rights in the field of significant speech by a wholesale transference of their functions to the eyes. The scholar, in their conception, is a reading animal, and without books he is nowhere. Why then, they will argue, when our object is to read and to understand books, should we trouble ourselves with conversation? We do not learn Latin in order to talk with Cæsar and Cicero, but to read their books; and in like manner we do not study German to drink beer and smoke pipes and sing songs with rollicking students in a kneipe, but to ponder with many-sided thought over the poems of Goethe or the speculations of Hegel. So be it. Let books and not living converse be the final end of the study of languages; so they certainly are with the dead languages; but even with regard to them it is quite certain that the familiarity and frequent repetition which are the special virtues of the conversational method both render the mastery of books, as in the case of the mother tongue, more complete, and the hold of the printed signature at once more firm in the grasp and more easy in the approach. But some one will say, Does not speaking in a language imply thinking in it, and is not thinking in a foreign tongue one of the most difficult and rare attainments even with the most accomplished linguists? Not at all. The difficulty lies merely in starting from the wrong end and following the false direction thus given till it culminates in the persistency of a bad habit and the imagination of an impossibility. It is as easy to look the Sun in the face and say שֶׁמֶשׁ, SHEMISH, as to say SUN, and there is no more difficulty in saying λαβὼν τὸ σκάλευθρον κίνει τὸ πῦρ, than in saying, take the poker and stir the fire. In both cases the direct connection of thought, thing, and word is equally obvious, equally easy, and equally natural; only at the start the habit of thinking exclusively in the mother tongue must be broken.

There is one other objection to the conversational method in the teaching of languages, viz. that it makes a man a parrot. Well, a parrot is an imitative animal, and so is a man, and so far must not be ashamed to own his kinship with the plummy prattler. But he is a parrot and something more; and this something more every sensible teacher will take into account. For myself, I have no preference for random talk: my contention is for regulated talk; the talk first and the regulation afterwards, in the order of gradation so succinctly stated by Lord Bacon—speaking makes a ready man, reading makes a full man, writing makes an accurate man;—all the three. But have your nails first before you pare them; this is the common sense of the matter.

In conclusion, I have a word or two to say with regard to the occasion and the plan of this little book. In the first place, whatever may be said of Hebrew or Latin, Greek is a living language, and must be treated as such even by those who persist in the notion that, while the method of living vocal appeal applies in its full extent to modern languages, it is certainly out of place in the treatment of the two ancient languages which justly claim the first place in the linguistic culture of our highest schools. The delusion that Greek is a dead language, springing as it does mainly out of our “insular ignorance,” as Professor Seeley calls it, and partly, I fear, our national insolence, will be dispelled in a moment by a glance at any current Greek newspaper; as for instance the following paragraph, the first that met my eye, from the 2d November number of the Athenian “Ἀκρόπολις,” giving a short notice of the application of Koch’s remedy for consumption.

ΝΕΑ ΚΑΙ ΠΕΡΙΕΡΓΑ.

Ἡ φθίσις ἐν Ρωσσίᾳ.

Ἡ ἀνακάλυψις τοῦ μεγάλου Κῶχ δίδει ἀφορμὴν εἰς τὰς ρωσσικὰς ἐφημερίδας νὰ ἐξετάσωσι πόσοι εἰσὶν οἱ πάσχοντες ἐκ τῆς νόσου ταύτης. Ἐκ τῶν 120,000,000 τῶν κατοίκων τῆς Ρωσσίας, ἂν ὑπολογίσῃ τις μόνον 5 ἐπὶ τοῖς (0)0 πάσχοντας ἐκ φθίσεως, 6,000,000 μόνον Ρῶσσοι ἔχουσι τὴν ἀνάγκην τῆς θεραπείας τοῦ περικλεοῦς καθηγητοῦ. Ὁ ἀριθμὸς εἶνε μάλιστα ἐν τούτοις ἀκριβής. Ἐν Ρωσσίᾳ

καὶ ἰδίως εἰς τὰ βορειότερα αὐτῆς μέρη ἢ φθίσις κάμνει μεγίστην θραῦσιν. Ἐν Περουπόλει ὡς ἐκ τῆς ἀθλιότητος τοῦ κλίματος καὶ τῆς κακῆς διαίτης τάξεών τινων τῆς κοινωνίας ἢ φθίσις καταστρέφει φρικωδῶς. Ἐν ταῖς οἰκίαις ἀπομεμακρυσμένων τινῶν συνοικιῶν, εἰς οἰκίας εἰς ἃ σπανίως διεισδύει ἄκτις ἡλίου βλέπει τις νέας καὶ νέους ὠχροὺς αἰμοπτύοντας καὶ ἐκεῖ εἰς ἀνήλια δωμάτια ἀναμένοντας τὸν θάνατον. Μειδιάσατε δυστυχεῖς· ὁ Κῶχ ἐργάζεται ὅπως ἀρπάσῃ ἀπὸ τὰς χεῖρας τοῦ θανάτου ὅλα αὐτὰ τὰ ἑκατομμύρια τῶν ὑπάρξεων.

Any person who can read classical Greek without a dictionary will have no difficulty in understanding this passage; and, if he is familiar with the New Testament in the original, he will find that some of the principal peculiarities which distinguish the Greek used by the living political and public men of Athens, so far from being corruptions, are no less distinctive features of the κοινὴ διάλεκτος of the Greeks now than they were in the days of the Apostle Paul and the Evangelist John. But this is not all. It requires only a superficial acquaintance with the most patent facts of Greek literature to know that some of the most popular and the most profound teachers of Greek wisdom—Plato, Aristophanes and Xenophon—use the conversational style. The Greeks, in fact, were, as they are still, a lively and a talking people, and Socrates, their greatest name, cannot be better described than as a talking street preacher of reason and common sense. Well, then, on this double basis that Greek is a living language, and that the colloquial style is that in which its highest and best thoughts are expressed; and knowing, moreover, by large experience, that the most effective way to get a firm grasp of any language is to begin by speaking it, some twenty years ago I published a small volume of Greek and English dialogues,^[2] which I used in my class in as far as it was possible to do so in such a multitudinous huddlement of untrained lads as the Scottish Universities, contrary to the practice of all educated nations, admit into the junior classes of the Faculty of Arts. The little book came to a second edition; but that it was in anywise generally used by classical teachers I have no reason to believe, partly because, of all classes of men, teachers are the most closely wedded to old bookish habits, and partly because Scotland is not a country to which the world, governed as it is by authority and by names, would look for anything worthy of imitation in the Greek line: "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" This, as the world goes, was quite legitimate, and gave me no concern. But since that time, as a natural consequence of the great educational movement of the age, some very distinct voices have come to my ear, to the effect that there is something radically wrong in our way of dealing with languages, and that the method of teaching by rules and grammar mainly can no longer be tolerated. I therefore felt it my duty to appeal a second time to the public and to teachers on this important matter, the more so that my little book stood too far apart from the educational attitude of the teachers, and, if it was to find its way into general school use, required a more elementary book as an introduction. This elementary book I now send forth under the title of a Greek Primer, Colloquial and Constructive, indicating by this title that the lessons in talking go hand in hand with the grammatical forms naturally educed from them, each lesson being regulated talk, according to a natural progression from the more simple to the more complex forms in ordinary use. This progressive incorporation of the grammar is the feature which distinguishes the lessons of this introductory book from the dialogues in its predecessor; and the necessity of having constant reference to grammatical forms prevented me from giving that unity of subject to the dialogue as dialogue which belonged to the previous volume.

I have only further to state, with regard to the use of this little primer in the hands of a teacher, that I have no desire that he should bind himself slavishly to the text. The scraps of talk that are given under each lesson are meant to lend him a helping hand in the use of a new organ; and, to enable both teacher and learner to furnish themselves with a living vocabulary of Greek words in direct connection with their daily surroundings, I have added an alphabetical list of the names of the most familiar objects that belong to the field of life in town or country where the learner may happen to be. When the young Hellenist has stamped its Greek designation directly on every object that meets his eyes, and connected it with some single verb that belongs to its significance in familiar life, I would then suggest that the teacher, besides the daily repetition of certain forms of common conversation, should give a vivâ voce description of pictures hung on the wall two or three times a week, which the learner shall be called on to repeat without any written notes; the principle of the method being always to maintain the direct action of the mind on the object, through the instrumentality of the new sound, without the intervention of the mother tongue. As to when, and how far, and in what kind the usual furniture of elementary books of grammar, reading, and exercises should go parallel with colloquial practice, this I leave altogether in the hands of the practised teacher, being well assured that easy reading and accurate writing, so far from being inconsistent with, are the natural blossom and the ripe fruit of the root of living utterance from which I start.

One other matter requires special notice—a matter not necessarily connected with the colloquial method, but which may be wisely used as a help. To each lesson I have appended a short list of English words, either by family affinity, or by direct borrowing, or by indirect borrowing through the Latin, radically identical with the Greek. The habit of identifying such words under an English disguise will perform the double function of facilitating memory and giving a lesson on the transmutation of sounds and meaning, the tracing of which gives so peculiar a charm to comparative philology. In Appendix I. I have added some of the principles on which these transmutations depend, so far as they are suggested by the words used in the text.

But what of the pronunciation? After what has been shown of the living continuity of the Greek tongue, from Byzantium downwards to the present day, there cannot be the slightest doubt that Greek orthoepy should be treated in the same fashion that the orthoepy of French, German, or any other living tongue is treated. The pronunciation is ruled by the practice of the present, not by philological facts or fancies as to the pronunciation of the past. No doubt, as Heraclitus says, πάντα ῥεῖ, all things flow, as in the universe, so in language, there is no fixation—there is always change. But the changes which take place in living languages, like English or Greek, are of a very different kind from those which take place when a language like Latin becomes dead, and rises to a new life in the form of such specific varieties as Spanish, Italian, and Portuguese. They are of the nature of a normal growth, and are at all events only exaggerations or expansions of a native tendency. To such exaggerations every spoken language is subject, and few more than our insular English, as any one may see who will compare the accentuation of English in the time of Chaucer with the

orthoepy of the present hour. But in respect of accents at least Greek has been far more conservative than English, so much so indeed that the accentual marks placed on Greek words by the Alexandrian grammarians two hundred and fifty years before Christ, in the practice of the Greek Church and the Greek people still indicate the same dominance of voice on the accented syllable that the Athenian ear recognised as classic in the orations of Demosthenes and the apostolic eloquence of St. Paul. There can therefore be no greater barbarism than to disown this legitimate music of Greek speech, as is done both in England and Scotland, when we pronounce ἀγαθὸς ὁ θεός, like Latin or English, ἄγαθος ὁ θεός; not to mention the staring absurdity and loss of brain implied in the practice of the great English schools of first pronouncing the word with a false accentuation, and then stultifying the daily practice of the ear by learning a rule to say where the accent ought to have been placed! Nothing could more distinctly show the falseness of our habit of flinging the burden of learning languages on formulas of the understanding and leaving the living organ of linguistic practice altogether out of account. Therefore, by all means, either drop the accents out of the grammar, or use them whenever you give the written word voice in the air. As to the quantity of the vowels, which is the stumbling block with most English scholars, we have no lack of words, even in our own unmusical English, such as lándholder, in which, as in the Greek ἄνθρωπος, the antepenultimate has the rising inflexion, while the penult is long; and if the modern Greeks pronounce ἄνθρωπος as if written ἄνθρωπος, that is only a natural curtailment of the unaccented syllable which lies in the nature of human speech, and will be found exemplified more or less in all languages. As to the vocal value of the separate vowels and consonants, this, no doubt, is a point in some cases of considerable difficulty; but it is quite certain that a, both in Latin and Greek, has the broad sound as in Italian and Scotch, not the sound of the English in pātent, that ι is the most slender of the vowel sounds, not the broad semi-diphthongal sound of the English in prime or sigh, that ou has the soft sound of oo in boom, not the bow-wow sound of ou as in howl; also that αι in all probability was pronounced as in the English vain, not as in the German Kaiser. On the whole matter of pronunciation, however, the English scholar should bear in mind that the poetry of the ancients was composed on musical principles, with a strict regard to the quantitative value of the vowel on which the rhythmical accent fell, a practice which necessarily caused the spoken accent to be dropped in verse, or very much subordinated; and again, if his ear should happen to be very much offended by the predominance of the slender sound of ι in the familiar πολυφλοίσβοιο θαλάσσης of Homer, there is no reason why he should not adopt a special vocalisation for the reading of the Greek poets, just as we in our reading of Chaucer must constantly put a final accent on words that, if applied to the spoken tongue, would render the speaker either ridiculous or unintelligible. But in whatever fashion the teacher of Greek in this country may choose to settle this delicate point, the matter of pronunciation has nothing radically to do with the great principle of linguistic practice which this little book inculcates. To start with the practice of speaking will facilitate the acquisition of a new language under any system of pronunciation; only this must distinctly be said, that the scholar who has learned to read Greek with a vocalisation and an accentuation invented by himself for himself has deliberately cut himself off from all intelligible communion with the people whose literary tradition he values so highly, and with whom to maintain a familiar intercourse, both in a political and a literary point of view, should be no secondary consideration with the wise.

In conclusion, I have great pleasure in returning thanks to the learned Hellenists who kindly undertook the task of revising the proofs of this little work as they came from the press, viz. Mr. Hardie, Balliol College, Oxford; Principal Geddes, Aberdeen; Principal Donaldson, St. Andrews; and Mr. Gardiner, Edinburgh Academy; and if I have not in every instance taken advantage of their suggestions, it is because on principle I have no sympathy with the nice sensibility which refuses the stamp of classicality to all forms and idioms unsanctioned by the usage of Attic writers, preferring to float my skiff freely on the great Catholic Greek of all ages, from Plato to Polybius, from Polybius to Chrysostom, and from Chrysostom to Thereianos and Paspatis.

ACCENT AND QUANTITY

THE GREEK LETTERS

The Greek letters, borrowed as they were from the East and adopted by the Romans, are substantially the same as the Roman letters of our common English usage, and in fact differ from them both in figure and power scarcely more than our present English type differs from the old English black letter or the common German type. A few remarks will suffice to show where or how far the pronunciation varies from our English use of the same letters.

Greek Figures.	Names		English Figures.
A, α	ἄλφα	alpha	a
B, β, β	βῆτα	bêta	b
Γ, γ,	γάμμα	gamma	g
Δ, δ	δέλτα	delta	d
E, ε	ψῖλόν	epsilon	e
Z, ζ,	ζῆτα	zêta	z
H, η	ῆτα	êta	ee
Θ, θ, ϑ	θῆτα	thêta	th

NOTES

A is always the broad a (=ah) of all European languages, and never softened down to the English ā, as heard in pātent, nátion.

B in the spoken Greek of the present day is softened down to the cognate v, exactly as in Gaelic b with the h appended becomes v, as ban, fair, with h, bhan = van.

Γ, when followed by the broad vowels a and o, is pronounced hard as in English and Gaelic; but when followed by soft vowels the Greeks now give it the sound of the English y in yes, yellow—γέλως, γέρων,—just as in German the g in the third syllable of Göttingen is so softened down as almost to disappear.^[3] This euphonic action of a weak vowel upon a strong consonant preceding is natural and found in most languages; exactly as the Italians in their soft dialect of Latin have changed Κικέρων into Chichero, ch being pronounced as in the English church.

Before κ, γ, χ and ξ, the letter γ has the sound of n, as in ἄγγελος, in Latin angelus, English angel.

Δ, or D, is in like manner softened into th as in the English mother; thus δέν not, from οὐδέν, pronounced οὐθέν.

E is our short e, as in get; never long ē.

H, or ἦτα, was in ancient times always a long ē, English ā as in gate; now it is always ee as in seem or theme.

Θ is the English th, as in mouth, south.

I is always the slender English ee, either short as in peep or long as in scēne.

Ξ is ks, gs, contracted into x.

Υ, from which our y came, was in ancient times identical with the delicate ü, ue, of the Germans, halfway between ou = oo and ee, into which in the living language it is always softened, exactly as in some parts of Germany Brüder is pronounced Brēēder.

Χ is an aspirated k, but pronounced like milch in German or loch in Scotch, which the English, who do not possess this beautiful soft guttural, generally sharpen into a k, as in lake.

Ω, omega, as the name indicates, is simply a long o, as in πῶλος, a foal.

For the English h the Greeks used a simple mark of aspiration turned to the right thus, ἱερός sacred, pronounced hee-er-ōs, while the same mark turned to the left, as in ἔρως, simply signifies the absence of the h. Whether this spiritus lenis, as it is called, was put on the initial vowel to indicate the presence of an original h which had vanished, I cannot say; but one can readily fancy that if the Cockney fashion of calling Highgate Igate were to become general, every such curtailed word might receive a mark thus, 'igate, as the survival of a lost breathing.

Besides the vowels in the alphabet we find in Greek, as in other languages, compound vowel sounds called diphthongs. They are seven—αι, ει, οι, αυ, υι, ευ and ου. Their ancient pronunciation is very difficult to expiscate, and in them we note the partiality of the Greeks for the slender sound of ee, called by a Latin writer gracilitas, and by modern scholars itacism. This tendency has wiped off the diphthongal character altogether from οι, υι, and ει, which are all pronounced like a single ι, English ee. To balance this, αἰ becomes the English ai, as in vain; ου retains its full soft roundness as in gloom; while in αυ and ευ in the living Greek the υ has assumed a consonantal value and become v, from which usage the εὐαγγέλιον of the Gospels has become the evangelium of the Latin Church, and the evangel of English; so αὐλός, a flute, is pronounced avlóss, and this v is aspirated into the kindred f, when the following consonant is κ, π, τ, θ, χ, ξ, σ, or ψ, as in αὐτός, aftos, εὔξεινος, efxeinos. That the ancients, at least in poetry, did not do this is evident from the full diphthongal value of a long sound given to the εὖ in εὐαγής and such-like words by the dramatic writers.

ACCENTUATION AND QUANTITY

In respect of accentuation the Greek language has the advantage above most others that, while in Latin, English, or German the proper intonation of a word in doubtful cases can only be known by an appeal to a dictionary or to an authoritative speaker, in Greek every word in a book, as it stands before the eye, exhibits and perpetuates the tonic relation of the syllables to one another. The student has but to observe the rise or fall of the syllables on his page as he would do the notes in a piece of music, and he cannot go wrong. Only a few characteristic points require to be laid down to make the principle on which the practice depends intelligible.

The word accent, taken from the Latin grammarians, evidently signifies a certain music of speech, a singing to or with (ad and cano) an articulate word; while the expression used by the Greek grammarians, τόνος from τείνω, indicates a stretch, stress, or intension of the voice on the syllable so affected. Taking these two elements together we see that a Greek word, say καλός, beautiful, with the mark of the acute accent on the last syllable—hence called oxytone, from ὀξύς, sharp—is pronounced with an elevation of the voice, which brings along with it a dominance of the syllable on which it stands above the other syllables with which it is connected. It stands to reason that after such a dominance given to one syllable the voice, if there be a subsequent syllable, will fall; and so, as in πραγμάτων, the final syllable will be pronounced in a lower tone which is called grave. In the general use this lower-toned syllable requires no special mark, being sufficiently indicated by its necessary subservience to the accented syllable; with the Greeks, however, it seems to have been the practice to pronounce an oxytone word, when it occurs in the middle of a sentence, in a lower tone than at the end, and so the word καλός in the middle of a sentence, as in καλὴ παρθένος, is marked with a grave accent from left to right instead of from right to left; but this, though it lowers the tone, does not affect the dominance of the syllable. It is just as if in music the same note, with the same rhythmical dominance, were sung an octave lower. Practically, the learner need not concern himself curiously about the matter.

It is a rule, both in Greek and Latin, that no word can be accented farther back than the third syllable from the end, the antepenultimate, the favourite accent of the English language. But, while this rule, in a musical point of view, preserves the language from such a rattle of insignificant sounds as in láméntable, mílitary, and not a few other quadrisyllables in our unmusical English tongue, it manifestly requires a correction from the side of penultimate and oxytone accentuation to achieve the just balance of the music of speech. In this respect Greek is decidedly superior to both Latin and English; for, while Latin rejects the sonorous cadence of the accent on the last syllable altogether, English uses it only in some verbs, remnants of the past participle of Latin verbs, as in rejéct, suppóse, accépt, and such-like; and in the case of the penult the fine swelling cadence of the Greek words, in which the acute accent of the penult is followed by a final long syllable, altogether fails, as in πραγμάτων, which an Englishman, following his English ear, will pronounce not only πράγματων but πράγματον, as if ω were o. The student, therefore, will carefully train his ear to give all oxytone words their full value, and never to say ἄγαθος ὁ θεός instead of ἀγαθὸς ὁ θεός, or κάλος ὁ ἄνηρ for καλὸς ὁ ἀνὴρ.

By the quantity of a word we mean the comparative duration of the sound, exactly as in music a is related to a  ;

and in Greek the accentuation stands in a very marked relation to the quantity of the syllables, which in practice asserts itself prominently as follows:—

(1) It is an invariable condition of the antepenultimate accent that the last syllable be short, as in ἄνθρωπος, a man; and in consequence,

(2) If in the course of flexion a word with an antepenultimate accent takes a long final vowel, as in the genitive and dative singular of the second declension, the accent of the first syllable is advanced to the penult, as in ἀνθρώπου.

(3) The converse takes place in verbs, where the accent is naturally on the root, as in λέγω, of which the imperfect is ἔλεγον; but in the aor. mid. indic., while the third person is ἐλέξατο, the first person is not ἐλέξαμην, but ἐλεξάμην.

A long syllable of course, as in προφήτης, may have an acute accent on a long vowel with the same right as a short syllable; but there are many long syllables in Greek which are marked neither with an acute nor a grave but with a circumflex, which is a prolonged accent compounded of a rise and a fall marked thus $\wedge$, or for greater ease, $\sim$. These words are generally compounds of which the elements are quite plain, as in φιλοῦσι for φιλέουσι, τιμῶσι for τιμάουσι; in other words, as in σῶμα, a body, or the genitive plural of the first declension, as πολιτῶν, and some others, the single elements from which the complex tone arose were either historically known to the grammarians or legitimately assumed. At all events, every syllable in Greek with a circumflex accent is practically treated as if it had two accents; σῶμα as if it were σάομα, χρῶμα as χρώαμα, πρᾶγμα as if it were πράαγμα, and so on. It follows from this, and the principle that no word can be accented farther back than the antepenultimate, that, if in the course of flexion a word with a circumflex on the penult receives an additional syllable so as to become, in accentual value, a quadrisyllable, the accent must be advanced; thus from τιμῶμαι,^[4] I am honoured, we can say τιμᾶσθε in the second person plural, but we cannot say τιμῶμεθα, so must say τιμώμεθα. The change of accentual marking in this instance is of no practical value to the student, but in the case of enclitics, of which we shall now speak, it affects the ear most decidedly.

Enclitics are small words, which, so to speak, have not force enough to stand on their own legs, but lean (ἐγκλίνω) on the weightier word that precedes them for support, and become absorbed in it; just as in English we say don't for do not, and in Italian dimmi for the Latin dic mihi. These enclitics are πού, ποτέ, γε, and a few others, the oblique cases of the personal pronouns, the indefinite pronoun τις, and the verbs εἰμί, I am, φημί, I say, except in the second person singular. The effect of their being thus taken up by the previous word and forming a new whole must, in not a few cases, materially affect the position of the accent; for, while in καλός τις, a certain good-looking fellow, there is no change in the intonation of καλός to the ear, the moment I say κάλλιστος τις, I either violate the rule which forbids the accent on the fourth syllable from the end, or I keep to the rule and say κάλλιστός τις. In the same way when I say ὁ διάβολος, the devil, simply, I preserve the antepenultimate accent with full effect in its natural place; but if I apply the reproachful term to a special person, and say, as in John vi. 70, ἐξ ὑμῶν εἷς διάβολός ἐστιν, one of you is a devil, I immediately, to give the ἐστιν something to lean on, must make the διάβολος oxytone. Similarly, I cannot write πνεῦμα ἔστιν, which in accentual value would be a compound word of five syllables, but I must say πνεῦμά ἐστι (John vi. 63), when the last syllable of the supporting word with the two syllables of the enclitic become accentually a new word of three syllables with a legitimate antepenultimate accent.

If the position of the accent, a point often not a little troublesome even to natives in the orthoepy of their own language, has been relieved of all practical difficulty by the curious prevision of the Alexandrian elders, the quantity is even more simple. With the double aid of the two separate signs for long vowels, η and ω, and the quantity of the final vowel as determined by its relation to the previous accented syllables, the only difficulty that remains is obviated by the mark ¯ over the long vowels, and the ˘ over the short ones found in all good dictionaries. In the present little work it will be sufficient to mark the long vowel where it occurs in doubtful cases, and leave the short ones to be understood as short from the absence of the long mark. But the real difficulty that prevents both accent and quantity from being easily acquired by English scholars is the negligent practice of transferring Latin or English habits of accentuation to Greek words, as when θεός is pronounced like Déus, and Σωκράτης as Sócrates, and again the supposition that the accent cannot be put on a syllable without making it long, or removed without making it short. Let only the honest attempt be made to pronounce ἄνθρωπος, not as anthroāpos, but as in lándhōlder, córndēaler, and other such words, and the α in Σωκράτης, not like a in claw or maw, but like the a in lattice and scatter, and the difficulty will vanish like the gleam of a mirage before the firm foot and the cool eye of the traveller.

LESSON I.—NOUNS

NOMINATIVE AND OBJECTIVE CASE

FIRST AND SECOND DECLENSION

VERBS

THREE PERSONS SINGULAR,

PRESENT INDICATIVE

A noun is the name of a thing or person, a verb signifies an action, an adjective a quality as good or bad belonging to a noun. The nominative case is the person who is or may be doing what the verb means; the objective case is the thing or person to which or towards which the action of the verb tends. The verb to be, denoting simple existence, not action, of course is followed by the nominative, not the objective case.

Nouns are masculine, feminine, or neuter.

Masculines generally end in ος.

Feminines in η or α, a few in ος—ὁδός, a way, βίβλος, a book, παρθένος, a maiden.

Neuters in ον.

The objective case ends in ν, the ν being added to the termination of feminines, and substituted for the ς in masculines. In neuters the nominative and objective are the same. Adjectives follow the same rule.

Verbs: first person ends in ω, second in ς, and third in ει or α, as—ὁρῶ, ὁρᾷς, ὁρᾷ, I see, thou seest, he sees.

ἀκούω, ἀκούεις, ἀκούει, I hear, etc.

So—

θαυμάζω, I wonder.

μῖσῶ, I hate.

ἔχω, I have.

USEFUL IMPERATIVES

φέρε, bring.

The article the is declined masculine, feminine, and neuter like the nouns, thus—

ὁ	ἡ	τὸ
τὸν	τὴν	τὸ

It never has α in the feminine.

The verb to be, εἰμί, has second person εἶ, third ἐστί, or before a vowel ἐστίν, and in plural ἐσμέν, ἐστέ, εἰσί.

The pronouns of the first and second persons are—

ἐγώ	μοῦ, ἐμοῦ	μοί, ἐμοί	μέ, ἐμέ
I	of me	to me	me
σύ	σοῦ	σοί	σέ
thou	of thee	to thee	thee

λαμπρός ἐστι ὁ ἥλιος, the sun is bright.

καὶ καλὴ ἡ ἡμέρα, and the day beautiful.

ὁρᾷς τὸν ἥλιον; do you see the sun?

ὁρῶ νεφέλην, I see a cloud.

νεφέλην στυγνὴν ὁρῶ, I see a dark cloud.

ὁρᾷς τὸν καπνόν; do you see the smoke?

ὁρᾷς τὸν οὐρανὸν τὸν κυανοῦν; do you see the blue sky?

ἀκούεις τοῦ ποταμοῦ; do you hear the river?

ἀκούεις τῆς βροντῆς; do you hear the thunder?

θαυμάζεις τὸ δένδρον τόδε τὸ ὑψηλόν; do you admire this tall tree?

θαυμάζω καὶ ἄλλα γε, I admire it extremely.

ὁρᾷς τὸ ρόδον τοῦτο τὸ καλόν; do you see this beautiful rose?

καὶ τὸ λείριον τὸ λευκόν; and the white lily?

καὶ τὴν πόαν τὴν χλωράν; and the green grass?

καλὸς ἐστὶν ὁ κῆπος, the garden is beautiful.

καὶ σοφὸς ὁ κηπουρός, and the gardener wise.

ὁρῶ ἄκανθαν, I see a thistle.

μῖσῶ τὴν κακὴν ἄκανθαν, I hate the ugly thistle.

φιλῶ τὸ ρόδον τὸ καλόν, I love the lovely rose.

σφοδρὸς ἐστὶν ὁ ἄνεμος, the wind is strong.

φιλῶ τὴν σκιάν, I love the shade.

καὶ τὴν σκέπην, and the shelter.

φέρε τὴν τράπεζαν, bring the table.

ποῦστι ὁ πέτασος ὁ ἐμός; where is my hat?

δός μοι τὸν πέτασον, give me the hat.

φιλῶ πῖλον ἐγώ, I love a cap.

κῖνει τὸ πῦρ, or τὴν ἐσχάραν, stir the fire.

δός μοι τὸ σκάλευθρον, give me the poker.

ἔχεις πυράγραν; have you tongs?

ἰδοῦ, there.

ὁρᾷς τὸ κάτοπτρον; do you see the mirror?

ἔχεις ἔδρᾱν; have you a seat?

ἔχεις ὑποπόδιον; have you a footstool?

ἔχεις κλῖνην; have you a sofa?

δός μοι τὴν βακτηρίαν, give me my stick.

τὸ παιδίον τόδε τίς ἔστι; who is this little boy?

ὁ ἀδελφὸς ὁ ἐμός, my brother.

ἔστι σοι ἀδελφή; have you a sister?

φιλῶ δεῖπνον, I love dinner.

ἔχεις ἄρτον καὶ βούτυρον; have you bread and butter?

καλὸν τὸ ἀργυροῦν ποτήριον τοῦτο, this silver cup is beautiful.

χάριν ἔχω, thanks.

ἰδοῦ σάπωνα τὸν τοῦ Πεαρσίου, here it is, Pears' soap.

θεῖον πάνυ χρήμα τοῦ καθαρτικοῦ, a splendid cleanser!

νῦν δὴ λευκαί μοι αἱ χεῖρες ὥσπερ ἡ χιών. Ἔρρωσο.
now my hands are white as snow. Farewell.

LESSON II

CASES, GENITIVE AND DATIVE

The genitive case signifies the source from which a thing comes and to which it belongs, as the folly of fools, the fool's folly, the folly that comes from the fool. The dative case means either the secondary or more distant object of an action, as I gave the book to the boy; or it signifies rest or residence in a thing, for which in English there is no special form; also in Greek it signifies the instrument with which, or by which, a thing is done, as to cut with a knife. In Greek masculines in ος have the genitive in ου and the dative in ω; feminines in ρᾱ or ρᾶ and ἰᾱ have the genitive in ας and the dative in α; other feminines in α—as τράπεζᾱ, a table—and feminines in η have ης in the genitive and η in the dative.

θαυμάζω τὴν σοφίαν τὴν ἐν τῷ σῷ ἀδελφῷ,
 I admire the wisdom that is in your brother.

δὸς τῷ ἀδελφῷ τὸν κάλαμον τόνδε, give your brother this pen.

καὶ τὸ καλαμάριον, and the inkstand.

ὁ ἀδελφὸς ὁ σὸς θαυμάζει τὸ λευκὸν ῥόδον τὸ ἐν τῷ κήπῳ, your brother admires the white rose in the garden.

ἀκούεις τῆς τοῦ ποταμοῦ βροντῆς;
 do you hear the thunder of the river?

ἡ βία τοῦ ἀνέμου ταραττεῖ τὸν κῆπον,
 the violence of the wind disturbs the garden.

καὶ τὸν γε πέτασον ἐπὶ τῇ ἐμῇ κεφαλῇ, yes, and the hat on my head.

κῖνει τὸ πῦρ τῷ σκαλεύθρῳ, stir the fire with the poker.

ὁρᾷς τὴν ἔδραν τὴν τοῦ ἐπισκόπου;
do you see the bishop's seat?

ἰσχυρὸς ἐστὶ· ἐσθίει τὸν τῶν πονούντων ἄρτον,
he is strong; he eats the bread of labour.

δός μοι τὸν κάλαμον τὸν τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ, give me your brother's pen.

φέρε τὸ καλαμάριον τὸ τῆς ἀδελφῆς, bring your sister's inkstand.

κόπτε τὸν κάλαμον τῇ μαχαίρᾳ, cut the pen with the knife.

LESSON III

PLURALS, NUMERALS, DIMINUTIVES

The plural of verbs is in ομεν, ετε, and ουσι for the three persons. In pure verbs αομεν becomes ὤμεν, ἄτε, and ὤσι; ε becomes οὔμεν, εἴτε, and οὔσι.

The plural of nouns in ος is in οι, nominative.

ων, genitive.
οις, dative.
ους, objective.

Neuters have nominative and objective α.

The plural of feminines is in αι, nominative.

ῶν, genitive.
αις, dative.
ᾶς, objective.

The relative pronoun, ὅς, ἣ, ὅ, who, which, is declined all through, like masculine nouns in ος, and feminines in η, and neuters in ον.

The numerals are—εἷς, μία, ἓν; δύο, τρεῖς, τέσσαρες, πέντε, ἕξ, ἑπτὰ, ὀκτώ, ἐννέα, δέκα, in their order; εἴκοσι, twenty; ἑκατόν, a hundred; χίλιοι, a thousand; μύριοι, ten thousand.

Diminutives are mostly neuter, ending in ἄριον, ἰον, and ὕλλιον: as ἵππος, a horse—ἱππάριον, a pony; παῖς, a boy—παιδίον, a little boy; βρέφος, a babe—βρεφύλλιον, a little babe. Masculine is ἴσκος, as παιδίσκος, a young boy, with feminine παιδίσκη, a little girl.

The adjective πολὺς, many (German viel), is declined in the nominative—

πολύς πολλή πολύ

and objective—

πολὺν πολλήν πολύ

otherwise regularly, as if from πολλός-ή-όν.

It is a peculiarity of Greek syntax that neuter plurals are joined with a singular verb, as καλῶς ἔχει τὰ πράγματα, matters are going on well.

γράφομεν καλάμῳ, ὁρῶμεν τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς, we write with a pen, and see with our eyes.

τὴν ἐπιστολὴν ἣν σοι γράφω δὸς τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς, the letter which I write for you give to your brothers.

πόσους ἔχεις ἀδελφούς; how many brothers have you?

ἕξ, ἀδελφὰς δὲ ἑπτὰ, six, and seven sisters.

δεινὰ ταῦτα, that is too bad!

πόσα ἔχεις ῥόδα ἐν τῷ πετάσῳ;
how many roses have you in your hat?

δώδεκα, λείρια δὲ ἕξ, twelve, and six lilies.

πόσους ἔχει ἵππους ὁ ἀδελφός;
how many horses has your brother?

τρεῖς, three.

ὁρᾷς τοὺς κύκνους καὶ τοὺς γεράνους ἐν τῇ λίμνῃ;
do you see the swans and the cranes in the loch?

ὁρῶ, δεινὸν τὸ πλῆθος,
yes, a very great number.

καὶ δὴ καὶ τρεῖς μόσχους κομψοὺς ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ;
also three pretty calves in the field?

ἔτι δὲ ἵππάριον, κόσμιον, βαλίον;
also a neat little piebald pony?

τί γελᾷς; what are you laughing at?

ἐκεῖνο τὸ παιδίον ἵπαζόμενον ἐπὶ τοῦ ἵππαρίου, that boy riding on the little pony.

καὶ δὴ καὶ τρέχει ὀπίσω ἡ παιδίσκη ἡ κομψή, and behind runs the pretty little girl.

τερπνὸν τὸ θέαμα, a pleasant sight.

ὁ θαυμαστὸς οὕτως δύο ὁρᾷ ἡλίους ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, ἡμεῖς δὲ ἓνα μόνον ὁρῶμε this strange man sees two suns in the sky; we see only one.

μῖσοῦμεν τὴν φωνὴν τοῦ μωροῦ, we hate a fool's voice.

τοῦ δὲ σοφοῦ φωνὴν φιλοῦμεν, but we love the voice of the wise man.

οἱ ἀστρονόμοι πολλὰ ὁρῶσι τοῖς τηλεσκοπείοις ἃ ἡμεῖς οὐχ ὁρῶμεν, the astronomers see many things with their telescopes which we do not see.

πολλὰ μὲν ἔχει δένδρα ἢ ὕλη, λόγους δὲ πολλοὺς ἢ τῶν μωρῶν γλῶσσα, there are many trees in the forest, and many words in a fool's tongue.

πολλὰς κόπτομεν ἀκάνθας ἐν τοῖς ἀγροῖς,
we are cutting down many thistles in the fields.

καὶ οὐκ ὀλίγας, ὡς ἐλπίζω, ἀκαλήφας, and not a few nettles also, I hope.

ἃς σὺ μῖσεῖς, ἀκαλήφας,
the nettles which you hate.

δικαίως ἔγωγε, πάντες γὰρ μῖσοῦσιν τὰς ἀκαλήφας τὰς κακάς, with good reason too. All hate the evil nettles.

τί πράττετε; what are you about?

γράφομεν ἐπιστολάς, we are writing letters.

ἐπιστολάς λέγεις; do you say letters?

καὶ μάλα γε, πρὸς τὴν βασίλισσαν, yes, to the queen.

θαυμαστὰ λέγεις, wonderful!

ἀγαθὴ ἡ βασίλισσα, καὶ πρὸς τὰς εὐχὰς οὐ κωφὴ τὰς τῶν πιστῶν πολιτῶν, good is the queen, and not deaf to the prayers of loyal citizens.

δίκαια λέγεις, you say what is just.

LESSON IV

THIRD DECLENSION, SINGULAR

The third declension of nouns in Greek is more rich and varied than the other two, and, besides, is distinguished by a peculiarity from which the others are free, viz. while in the first and second declensions all that requires to be done in forming the cases is to change the last syllable of the nominative commencing with a vowel, leaving the main body of the word unchanged, as ἡμέρα, -ας, ἄργυρ-ος, -ου, in the third we observe that the final consonant of the root seems in many cases to have been assimilated or absorbed by the termination of the nominative, and reappears in the other cases, as in ἐλπίς, genitive ἐλπίδος. Sometimes also the vowel of the last syllable of the nominative is shortened before the addition of the genitival termination, as in ποιμήν, ποιμένος. In some classes of nouns no change is made, and the analogy of the two other declensions is followed throughout. We shall take our examples from the more simple classes, leaving the more complex and exceptional to be learned in the course of reading.

The general type is—

-ος, genitive.
-ι, dative.
-α, objective.

σωτήρως, of or from a saviour.
κώδων, a bell.
κώδωνος, of a bell, etc.
λυμεών, -ῶνος, a blackguard, etc.

and a number of words signifying a dwelling-place, as—ἵππος, a horse;

ἵππων, -ῶνος, a stable.
ἐλαιών, -ῶνος, an oliveyard.
παρθενών, -ῶνος, room of the virgin;

and nicknames of men:

γάστρων, -ωνος } paunchy.
φύσκων

And to this class which follows the analogy of the other declensions our first colloquy is confined.

(1) ὁρᾷς τὸν ἀροτῆρα τῷ ἀρότρῳ κόπτοντα τὴν γῆν;
do you see the ploughman cutting up the ground with his plough?

χρήσιμον τὸ ἔργον τοῦτο καὶ ἀναγκαῖον, this is a useful and necessary work.

ἰσχυρὸν ἔχει ἵππον ὁ ἀροτήρ,
the ploughman has a strong horse.

τίνος ἐστὶν ἡ εἰκὼν ἐκείνη;
what likeness is that?

τοῦ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν,
the likeness of Jesus Christ our Saviour.

θεῖον πάνυ τὸ πρόσωπον,
an altogether divine countenance.

τίς ἐστὶν ἡ βίβλος ἐκείνη ἡ λαμπρά;
what is that grand book?

ἡ γεωγραφία τοῦ Στράβωνος,
the geography of Strabo.

τί πίνεις ἐκ τοῦ κρατῆρος ἐκείνου;
what are you drinking out of that bowl?

πίνομεν τὸν οἶνον, we are drinking wine.

δός μοι τὸν τρίβωνα τὸν παλαιόν, give me my old cloak.

ἐκ μικροῦ σπινθῆρος δεινὴ πολλάκις ἀνάπτεται φλόξ, from a small spark often a fearful flame arises.

ὥς γράφει ὁ Ἀπόστολος Ἰάκωβος, as James the Apostle writes.

καίτοι τί ταῦτα λέγεις; but why do you say this?

φοβεῖ μὲ ὁ πολὺς ἐκεῖνος καπνὸς ὁ ἐκ τῆς καπνοδόχης,
I fear that quantity of smoke from the chimney.

ἀκούω τοῦ κώδωνος καὶ τῆς τοῦ κλητῆρος φωνῆς ὃς ἐγείρει τοὺς πολῖται
I hear the bell, and the voice of the crier who wakes the people.

οὐ σμικρὸς ὁ κίνδυνος, there is great danger.

ἀκούω τοῦ ἀλεκτρυόνος, I hear the cock.

(2) Nouns in ωρ and ην shorten the long ultimate vowel of the nominative, as ῥήτωρ, ῥήτορος; ποιμὴν, ποιμένος; ὕδωρ, ὕδατος, water.

ὁρᾷς τὸν ποιμένα ἐκεῖνον μετὰ τῶν προβάτων ἐν τῷ λειμῶνι;
do you see that shepherd with the sheep in the meadow?

ὁρῶ, καὶ τὸν κύνα, I see them and the dog.

ἄρα οὖν ἀκούετε τῆς φωνῆς τοῦ δεινοῦ ἐκείνου ῥήτορος;
do you hear the voice of that great orator?

ἀκούομεν· μᾶλλον δὲ ἀρέσκει ὁ τῶν χελιδόνων τρισμὸς καὶ τῆς ἀηδόνης τὸ ᾄσμα,
we hear; but like better the twitter of the swallows and the song of the nightingale.

δίκαιώς· αὐται γὰρ κινουῦσι τὸ βαθὺ τῆς ψυχῆς, with good reason; for these stir the depths of the soul.

(3) Feminines in ῖς and ᾶς, with the radical δ before the case terminations, as λαμπᾶς, -άδος; ἐλπῖς, -ίδος. Neuters in α have the genitive in τος. Words ending in ψ = πς or βς, as λαῖλαψ, λαίλαπος, a storm; φλέψ, φλεβός, a vein; Κύκλωψ, -ωπος, a Cyclops, Giant Round Eye, lose the σ of the nominative and present π or β before the case termination. In the same way nouns in ξ = κς or γς, by losing the final σ of the compound consonant, cause the single κ or γ to reappear in the oblique cases, as ἰέραξ, a hawk, ἰεράκος; ἀλώπηξ, a fox, gen. ἀλώπεκος; κόραξ, a crow, gen. κόρακος.

οὐδαμῶς, not at all.

τὴν ψιλὴν ψεκάδα οὐκ ἔγωγε ὑετὸν λέγω,
a thin drizzle I do not call rain.

ἐκείνη ἡ νεφέλη σημαίνει λαίλαπα, that cloud foretells a storm.

λαμπρὰν ἔχω ἐλπίδα καλῆς ἡμέρας,
I have bright hope of a beautiful day.

ὁρᾷς ἐκεῖνο τὸ γυναικάριον ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ;
do you see that little woman in the field?

λέγουσι μαινάδα εἶναι, they say that she is mad.

καὶ πιστεύω ἔγωγε, I for one believe it.

δός μοι τὴν κρηπίδα, καὶ τὸν πέτασον καὶ τὴν χλαῖναν, give me my boot, my hat, and my plaid.

ποῦστι τὸ ὑπόδημά μου τὸ ἕτερον;
where is my other shoe?

τί ἔχεις ἐν τῷ στόματι;
what have you in your mouth?

ἄρτον· χάριν ἔχω τῷ Θεῷ, bread, thank God!

τί γράφεις; what are you writing?

ποίημα, a poem.

πότερον νοῦς ἔστιν ἐν τῷ ποιήματι;
is there any sense in the poem?

πῶς οὐ; οὐ φυσῶ φυσήματα ἐκ σαπῶνος, of course; I don't blow soap-bubbles.

ὁρᾷς ἐκεῖνον τὸν κόρακα;
do you see that crow?

ὁρῶ, περιπατεῖ ὡς κληρικὸς σεμνῶ τῷ βήματι,
I do; he walks like a clergyman, with a grave step.

τί ἐστὶ τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ ἐνδόξου ἐκείνου ῥήτορος;
what is the name of that famous orator?

Γλάδστων, Gladstone.

ὄνομα Σκωτικόν, a Scotch name.

καὶ μάλα γε· ἔχει γὰρ ἐρμηνείαν τὸ ὄνομα, λίθος ὁ τοῦ ἱέρᾱκος, certainly, for the interpretation of the name is the stone of the hawk.

ἔστι Γλάδστων ὄνομα δήμου τινὸς ἐν τῇ χώρᾳ τοῦ Μεσολωθιᾶνος, Gladstone is the name of a parish in Midlothian.

τί πράττει ὁ παῖς ἐκεῖνος; what is that boy doing?

μαστιγοῖ τὴν βέμβικα, he is whipping his top.

αὐτὸς μᾶλλον ἄξιος τῆς μάστιγος, κακοῦργον γὰρ τὸ θρέμμα, himself is more worthy of the whip, for he is a wicked creature.

ἔτι δὲ ἀργός· οὐκ ἄξιος τοῦ ἄρτου, also idle; not worthy of his bread.

νομίζω ἔγωγε τὸ νῶτον αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν μάστιγα ἐγγὺς προσήκειν γένει, I think the whip and his back are nearly related.

κακός ἐστιν· ἀλώπεκος καὶ ἄρκτου μῖγμα παράδοξον, he is bad; a strange mixture of a fox and a bear.

(4) Nouns in ἰς and ὕς have ν in the objective, as σὺς, a pig; ἰχθύς, a fish, κῑς, a woodworm. Also those in ἱς and ὕς, as πόλις, a city, πόλιν; ὄφις, a snake, ὄφιν; πῆχυς, a forearm, πῆχυν. These have the genitive in εως, and the dative in ει, as πόλεως, πόλει.

πατήρ, a father, and μήτηρ, a mother, have πατρός and μητρός in genitive, and πατρί and μητρί in dative; but the objective is in the regular form with the short penult πατέρα. θυγάτηρ, a daughter, follows the same rule, ἀνὴρ has ἀνδρός, ἀνδρί, ἄνδρα.

βασιλεύς, a king, and ἱερεύς, a priest, have the genitive in έως, and the dative in ει, like πόλις, but the objective is έα. βοῦς, an ox, has βοός, βοί, and βοῦν.

γυνή, a woman, has genitive and dative -αϊκός, -αϊκί, and objective -αϊκα.

ὁρᾷς τὸν καλὸν ἰχθῦν ἐν τῷ ὕδατι;
do you see that beautiful fish in the water?

ὁρῶ, στίλβει τὸ θρέμμα, ὥσπερ μαργαρίτης, yes, the creature glances like a pearl.

ἕτερον πάνυ ὁ σῦς ὁ ῥυπαρὸς ἐν τῷ συφεῶ, very different is the filthy pig in the sty.

μῖσῶ τὸν σῦν, I hate the pig.

ὁμως χοῖρος σιτευτὸς λαμπρὸν ἄγαλμα τοῦ δείπνου, nevertheless a fatted pig—bacon—is the great glory of a dinner.

ὁρᾷς τὸν ὄφιν ἐν τῇ πόᾳ;
do you see the snake in the grass?

μῖσῶ τὸ θρέμμα,
I hate the creature.

διὰ τί; why?

ἔχει κίνδυνον, it is dangerous.

φρίττω τὸ ζῶον,
πρόσωπόν γε τοῦ διαβόλου,
I shudder at the creature, a mask of the devil.

ἔχει πατέρα ὁ ὄφις τὸν Σατανᾶν,
the snake has Satan for his father.

πολλὰ ἔχει πρόσωπα ὁ διάβολος,
the devil has many masks.

αἰρετώτερον δὲ καλῆς γυναικὸς τὸ πρόσωπον, specially that of a fair woman.

καὶ δὴ καὶ ἱερέως ὑπερηφάνου, and that of a proud priest.

ἔτι δὲ βασιλέως ἀνόμου καὶ τυράννου ὠμοῦ,
also of a lawless king, and a cruel tyrant.

καὶ ἀνδρὸς ἐκάστου τῶν ἐν πόλει ὅσοι πονηροί, and of any bad man in the town.

(5) Adjectives of this declension occur most commonly in one of these three forms—

(α) ὢν, -ονος, masculine and feminine; ὄν, neuter—as σώφρων, sound-minded; πρόφρων, forward, ready— like nouns in ὢν supra.

(β) ῆς, as ἀληθῆς, masculine and feminine; ἀληθές, neuter; genitive in οῦς and dative in εἴ—ὑγιής, healthy; σαφής, -ές, distinct, clear.

(γ) ὕς, masculine; εἶα, feminine; ὕ, neuter; as γλυκύς, sweet; βαρύς, heavy.

μέλας, black, has μέλαινα, μέλαν, and τάλας, wretched, the same.

ἀληθές τὸ δόγμα τοῦτο τὸ περὶ τοῦ διαβόλου, this doctrine about the devil is true.

καὶ μάλα γε καὶ βαρύ, yes, and weighty.

γλυκὺ τὸ μέλι μετὰ τὸ πικρόν, sweet is honey after sour.

δημιουργοὶ αἱ μέλισσαι τοῦ μέλιτος τοῦ γλυκέος, the bees are the makers of sweet honey.

βασιλέως γλύκυσμα τὸ μέλι,
it is a king's dainty, honey.

στέργομεν σύμπαντες τὰ νώγαλα καὶ τὰ τρωγάλια ἀκόλουθα τοῦ δείπνου we all like dainties and a dessert to follow the dinner.

LESSON V

THIRD DECLENSION, PLURAL

The plural terminations of the third declension are—

ες, nominative, α, neuter.

ᾶς, objective, α, neuter;

as ποιμήν, ποιμένες, λαῖλαψ, λαίλαπες, following always the type of the genitive singular, as πατέρες, not πατρές; but ἀνὴρ has ἄνδρες, not ἀνέρες. Only in the dative plural the final consonant ν, δ, or τ is dropped before the σι of the dative, as ποιμέσι, to shepherds; στόμασι, to mouths; λαμπάσι, to torches.

The adjective πᾶς, πᾶσα, πᾶν follows this rule, having παντός in the genitive, but πᾶσι in dative plural; so γίγας, a giant; γίγαντος, of a giant; but γιγᾶσι, to giants.

οὗτος ὁ πατήρ πάντα τὰ χρήματα δίδωσι ταῖς θυγατράσι, τῷ δὲ υἱῷ οὐδέν, this father gives all the money to his daughters, to his son nothing.

οἱ μὲν τῆς ἐκκλησίας πατέρες πολλοί, ἕκαστος δὲ παῖς ἓνα μόνον ἔχει πατέρα the fathers of the church are many, but each boy has only one father.

δὸς τοῖς μὲν παισὶ βακτηρίαν, ταῖς δὲ παρθένοις σκιάδειον, give a stick to the boys, a parasol to the young ladies.

γίγας πάνυ ὁ παῖς οὗτοσί, καὶ τέρας γε πρὸς· δακτύλους γὰρ δὴ ἑπτὰ ἔχει ἐπὶ τοῖς ποσίν,
*this boy is a giant, and a monster to boot;
he has seven toes on his feet.*

LESSON VI

THE DEGREES OF COMPARISON IN ADJECTIVES

The general form is τερος for the comparative and τατος for the superlative, the genders following the type of the substantives of the first and second declensions, as δίκαιος, just, δικαιότερος, δικαιότατος; also, to avoid the concurrence of four short syllables unfavourable to the dactylic rhythm of the early poetry, the ότερος in certain cases becomes ώτερος, and the ότατος, ώτατος, as—σοφός, wise, σοφώτερος, σοφώτατος.

So—
φοβερός, terrible.
χαλεπός, difficult.
φανερός, plain.

Adjectives in ας, αινα, αν, and in ης, ες, add the τερος and τατος to the neuter, as—μέλας, black, μελάντερος, -τατος.

ἀληθής, true, ἀληθέστερος, -τατος.
ἀκριβής, accurate, ἀκριβέστερος, -τατος;

a termination which is assumed also by adjectives in ων, as εὐδαίμων, happy, εὐδαιμονέστερος, -τατος.

Some adjectives are compared by ιων, -ον, and ιστος, -η, -ον, as—καλός, beautiful;

καλλίων, more beautiful;
κάλλιστος, very beautiful.
ἡδύς, sweet, ἡδίων, ἡδιστος.
ταχύς, swift;
θάσσων for ταχίων, swifter;
and τάχιστος, very swift.

This form belongs also to some common irregular comparisons as—ἀγαθός, βελτίων, βέλτιστος, good, better, best.

 μέγας, great, μείζων, μέγιστος.
κακός, bad, χείρων, κάκιστος.
πολύς, many, πλείων, πλεῖστος;

which follow in declension the law of the substantives of the same type, as μείζων, μείζονος; πλείων,-ονος, plural πλείονες, contracted πλείους.

Comparatives are either accompanied with a genitive or followed by ἢ—as ὁ υἱὸς μείζων ἐστὶ τοῦ πατρός, the son is taller than the father —or ἢ ὁ πατήρ.

οὗτος ὁ νεανίσκος πολὺ μικρότερός ἐστι τῆς ἀδελφῆς· νῆνός ἐστι, this young man is much less than his sister; he is a dwarf.

λέγει ἡ ἁγία γραφὴ ὅτι ὁ Σαοὺλ πολὺ μέγιστος ἦν πάντων τῶν συμπολιτῶν, the holy scripture says that Saul was by far the tallest of all his fellow citizen οὐ σοφώτατος δέ, but not the wisest.

ἄμεινον τοῦ μεγέθους ἢ σοφία, wisdom is better than stature.

πόσα ἄτακτα ῥήματά ἐστιν ἐν τῇ Ἑλληνικῇ γλώσσῃ;
how many irregular verbs are there in the Greek tongue?

οὐκ οἶδα, I do not know.

περὶ τούτου γε χρὴ ἐρωτᾶν τὸν μάντιν, τὸν Οὐείτχιον, on this point you must consult the oracle, Veitch.

φοβερὸν τὸ πλῆθος, a terrible multitude.

πλείω ἢ οἱ κόρακες ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ, more than the crows in the field.

ἀληθέστατα λέγεις,
you say what is very true.

λέγω τὸ ἔμοιγε πονηρότατον καὶ χαλεπώτατον,
I say what for me at least is a very painful and a very difficult business.

μὴ ἀθύμει· πολλὰ ἔχει κακὰ ὁ βίος, παγκάκιστον δὲ τὸν ἀπελπισμόν, don't despair; there are many bad things in life, but the worst is despair.

τῶν δὲ ἀγαθῶν ἐν τῷ βίῳ τί βέλτιστον;
and of the good things in life which is best?

ἡ πίστις, faith.

ὡς λέγει ὁ προφήτης Ἀμβακούμ· ὁ δίκαιος ἐκ πίστεως ζήσεται, as the prophet Habakkuk says, the just man shall live by faith.

οὐδ' οὐκ ἔχει λόγον ἀληθέστερον ἢ ἁγία γραφή, a word than which nothing more true is found in holy scripture.

πατήρ τῆς ἀνδρείας ἡ πίστις, ἀνδρεία δὲ τῶν ἀνδρικῶν ἔργων πατήρ, faith is the father of courage, and courage is the father of manly deeds.

κάλλιστα λέγεις, admirable.

καλὸς ὁ λόγος, κάλλιον δὲ τὸ ἔργον,
a beautiful saying, but more beautiful is the deed.

ἄνευ ἔργου πάντων κενώτατον πραγμάτων ὁ λόγος, without the deed speech is the most empty of all things.

LESSON VII

THE FUTURE ACTIVE

The characteristic letter of the future tense is σ, inserted before the terminations that mark the persons, thus: λύω, I loosen; λύσω, I will; λύσεις, thou wilt; λύσει, he will; λύσομεν, we will; λύσετε, ye will; λύσουσι, they will loosen. Of course by inserting this σ, a preceding consonant, where the root is labial, uniting with it forms a ψ, as above in nouns (Lesson IV, 3); and in the same way, when the final vowel of the root is a palatal the κ or γ appears as ξ—so, from βλέπω, I see, βλέψω; from λέγω, I say, λέξω. But there are several variations, which will be learned by practice; the following are dominant:—

- (α) Verbs with two consonants before the ω of the present eject the latter before inserting the σ, so that the π or φ of the root united with the σ becomes a ψ, as in τύπτω, τύψω; κόπτω, I cut, κόψω; σκάπτω, I dig, σκάψω; γράφω, I write, γράψω.
- (β) The same rule holds with many verbs in σσω, Attic ττω, the root ending in κ or γ, as πράσσω, I do, root πραγ, future πράξω; τάσσω, I arrange, τάξω.
- (γ) Verbs in άζω have either σω or ξω, or both, as θαυμάζω, I admire, θαυμάσω; νυστάζω, I nod, άσω or άξω; άρπάζω, to carry off, ξω, άρπάσομαι in Attic; βαστάζω, to carry, βαστάσω.
- (δ) Pure verbs generally lengthen the vowel of the present, α being changed into η, except where a vowel or λ precedes the άω, as—

τιμάω,	I honour , τιμήσω.
φιλέω,	I love , φιλήσω.
δηλόω,	I show , δηλώσω.

But—

κλάω,	I break , κλάσω.
κοπιάω,	I labour at , κοπιάσω.

But some in έω prefer έσω, as τελέω, I finish, τελέσω; τρέω, to tremble, τρέσω; ζέω, to boil, ζέσω.

(ε) Liquid verbs shorten the long vowel of the root, or throw out the last of two consonants in the root, and lay a circumflex accent on the termination ω, as—μένω,	I remain,	μενῶ.

σπείρω,	I sow,	σπερῶ.
φαίνω,	I show,	φανῶ.
βάλλω,	I throw,	βαλῶ.
τέμνω,	I cut,	τεμῶ.

νῦν δὴ φοβεῖς με· δεινὸς ὡς ἀληθῶς ὁ χρόνος οὗτος ὁ τοῦ μέλλοντος, now indeed you frighten me; this future tense is terrible.

γέλοια λέγεις· οὐκ ἔάσω σε τὰ τοιαῦτα λέγειν· λέγε μᾶλλον τὸ τῆς παροιμίας, χαλεπὰ τὰ καλὰ, ridiculous; I will not permit you to speak thus; say rather,
as the proverb has it, all excellent things are difficult.

λέξω, I will say so.

ἔχε πίστιν, have faith.

πιστεύσω καὶ νικήσω,
I will believe and conquer.

αἰνέσει σε ὁ πατήρ,
your father will praise you.

οὐδὲν διστάζω, I do not doubt it.

ἀνδρικὸν δηλώσεις θυμόν,
you will show a manly spirit.

βλέψω ἀνδρικῶς πρὸς τὸν διάβολον καὶ οὐ τρέσω,
I will look manfully in the face of the devil and not tremble.

τί σκάπτει ὁ φύσκων ἐκεῖνος ἐν τῷ λειμῶνι;
what is that paunchy fellow digging at in the meadow?

σκάπτει τάφρον, he is digging a trench.

σκάπτει τοὺς θεμελίους λαμπροῦ οἰκήματος,
he is digging the foundations of a grand house.

οὐδαμῶς· τὸν τοιοῦτον οὐ θαυμάσομεν, not at all; such a fellow we will not admire.

ιδιώτης ἐστί· πόνον μὲν ἔχει, τέχνην δὲ οὐ· κόψει ποτὲ τὸν ἴδιον δάκτυλον τῇ μαχαίρᾳ, καὶ δὴ καὶ τὸν ἴδιον αὐτὸς ἑαυτοῦ σκάψει τάφρον· τοιοῦτο γὰρ δὴ φιλεῖ γίνεσθαι τὸ τῶν ἀπαιδευτῶν τέλος he is a bungler. He has labour, but no skill.
He will cut his finger with his knife some day, and dig his own grave
Such is wont to be the end of the unlearned.

LESSON VIII

THE PAST TENSE

The first aorist or indefinite past tense follows the type of the future, with a σ before the personal terminations, and an augment ϵ prefixed to the whole word, as a sign of the past tense, thus—

πράξω,	I will do. ἔπραξα,	-ας, -ε, I, thou, he	} did
ἐπράξαμεν,	-ατε, -αν, we, you, they

In liquid verbs, where the future has no σ , the aorist lengthens the vowel of the penult, as—

μένω	μενῶ	ἔμεινα στέλλω	στελῶ	ἔστειλα
τείνω	τενῶ	ἔτεινα

There is another form of the past in

-ον	-ες	-ε
-ομεν	-ετε	-ον

as ἔτυπον for ἔτυψα, which some verbs prefer, as in ἔβαλον, I threw, from βάλλω, βαλῶ; ἔκραγον from κράζω, and some have both, as ἤνεγκα, ἤνεγκον, I brought, irregular from φέρω, I bring, future οἴσω, I will bring.

οἶδα,	I know, has οἶδα,	οἶσθα, οἶδε, I, thou, he	} know.
ἴσμεν,	ἴστε, ἴσασι, we, you, they

and with the past participle, εἰδώς, -ότος.

ἦδεν,	ἦδεις, ἦδαι,	I, thou, he	} knew. ἦδειμεν,	ἦδειτε, ἦδσαν,	we, you, they ἅπερ ἐγὼ ἔπραξα χθές, σὺ πράξεις αὔριον, αἰὲ γὰρ ὑστερεῖς, what I did yesterday you will do to-morrow; you are always behind.

τίς τὰ φύλλα ἔκοψε τῆς καλῆς ἐκείνης βίβλου;
who cut the leaves of that beautiful book?

ἐγώ, I did.

ἔκοψας, νῆ Δία, ἀμβλείᾳ τῇ μαχαίρᾳ· πρὸς δὲ τούτοις ῥυπαροὶ εἰσι σοὶ οἱ δάκτυλοι, verily you cut it with a blunt knife; besides, your fingers are filthy.

νίψω τῷ χεῖρῃ, [5] I will wash my hands.

ἔδωκα ἐκείνῃ παρθένῳ μῆλον, ὃ δὲ παῖς ἥρπαξε· τίς ποτε ἐδίδαξεν αὐτὸν τὸ τέχνημα τόδε;
I gave that girl an apple, and the boy seized it. Who taught him that trick?

κακοδαίμων τις, an evil genius.

τίς ἔβαλε τὸν λίθον; who threw the stone?

ὁ παῖς ὁ ἐν τῷ κήπῳ, the boy in the garden.

παράνομός τις ἐστί, he is a lawless boy.

χθὲς διέθραυσε πλάκα ὑαλίνην ἐν τῇ τοῦ φροντιστηρίου τοῦ ἐμοῦ θυρίδι, yesterday he broke a glass pane in my study window.

who built this church?

not an architect, a stonemason.

ὁ γὰρ ἀληθὴς τέκτων ποιητής ἐστι· καὶ τὸ οἰκοδόμημα ὅπερ ᾠκοδόμησε χθὲς ποίημα μένει λίθος

LESSON IX

INFINITIVE MOOD AND PARTICIPLES

The infinitive mood gives the action of the verb substantively as we use the participle in seeing is a good thing, but in Greek, as in Latin, always the infinitive, as καλὸν τὸ ὁρᾶν, and declined with the article like a noun, through all the cases, of course neuter, as the gender does not lie in the action, but in the actor. Its normal ending in the active voice is εἶν, as in the present βάλλειν, to throw, and second aorist βαλεῖν; but in first aorist its termination is αι, as κόψαι, from κόπτω. Pure verbs follow their vowel, as τιμᾶν, to honour; φιλεῖν, to love.

Like substantives, verbal infinitives are governed by prepositions through all the cases, as περί, about; παρά, from beside; μετά, with; ἐν, in, and εἰς into—as περὶ τοῦ καπνίζειν λέγω μέτρον ἄριστον, about smoking I say moderation is best.

Participles are verbal adjectives declined as such, and signifying the quality or accident of a certain state of being or action belonging to an agent.

The participles of the present and of the second aorist are declined in masculine and neuter according to the type of the second declension, in feminine according to the first, as—

τύπτων,	τύπτουσα,	τύπτον,	he, she, or it	} striking τύπτ-οντος,	ούσης,	οντος,	of him, her, or it οντι,	ούση,	οντι,	to him, her, or it

The first aorist participle bears the type of the third declension, as in γίγας, γίγαντος, a giant—so ποιήσας, having made; feminine ποιήσᾱσα, neuter ποιῆσαν.

genitive,	-αντος	-ᾶσης	-αντος.
dative,	-αντι	-ᾶση	-αντι.
objective,	-αντα	-ᾶσαν	-αν.

Pure verbs have a long vowel or diphthong: thus, from περιπατέω	περιπατῶν	περιπατοῦντος

τιμάω	τιμῶν	τιμῶντος

ἄράγε εἶδες ἐκεῖνον τὸν παῖδα ἐν τῷ κήπῳ περιπατοῦντα;
did you see that boy walking in the garden?

εἶδον, I did.

καλὸν τὸ περιπατεῖν καὶ ὑγιές, οὐ τοιοῦτον δὲ τῷ κλέψαντι τὰ μῆλα, walking is good and healthy, but not for him who stole the apples.

τιμῶσα τὴν βασιλίσσαν τιμᾷς τὴν πόλιν ἧς δὴ ἐκείνη κεφαλὴ ἐστίν, in honouring the queen you honour the state of which she is the head.

περὶ τοῦ ὑπνοῦσθαι οὐδὲν ἀκριβῶς ἐπιτάττω· ἐν μόνον λέγω, οὐχ ὑγιές τὸ ὑπερβάλλειν ὀκτῶ ὥρας ἐν τῇ κοίτῃ, about sleeping I prescribe nothing curiously;
only this one thing I say, that to lie in bed more than eight hours is not healthy.

ἀληθῆ λέγεις, you say well.

τοῖς γε ὑγιᾶς ἔχουσι τὸ σῶμα,
at least for those who have a healthy body.

τὸ γὰρ ἀργεῖν διαφθείρει τό τε σῶμα καὶ τὴν ψυχὴν, for lying idle damages both body and soul.

μάλιστα· καὶ τὸ πράττειν ὁτιοῦν ἐναντίον τῷ συστήματι τοῦ ὅλου

Ἰάκωβος· εἰδότε τὸ καλὸν καὶ μὴ ποιοῦντι, αὐτῷ ἁμαρτία ἐστίν, certainly, for to do anything contrary to the system of the universe destroys the soul, as James the apostle of good works says, “to him that knoweth what is good and doeth it not, to him it is sin.”

τῷ λαλοῦντι πολλὰ πολὺς ὁ κίνδυνος, to the great talker there is great danger.

ἐν δὲ τῷ ὀλίγα λέγειν μεγάλη ἡ σωτηρία, but in speaking little there is great safety.

μεγάλη βιβλιοθήκη χρησίμη ἐστὶν εἰς τὸ πολλὰ εἰδέναι,
a good library is useful to get great knowledge.

πῶς γὰρ οὐ; ὅμως οὐκ ἀεὶ εἰς τὸ σοφῶς βιώναι, certainly, but not always for wise living.

πολλὰς βίβλους δυνατὸν τοὺς ἀσθενεῖς ἐγκεφάλους κυκᾶν, it is possible that many books may confound weak brains.

τὸ λεγόμενον, πολλοὶ ὄντες οἱ μάγειροι διαφθεῖρουσι τὸν ζωμόν, as they say, many cooks spoil the broth.

καὶ κατὰ τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον παμπλήθη ἔπιπλα ὑπὲρ τὸ πρέπον καὶ τὸ ἡδὺ ἐκπληροῖ τὸ οἶκημα and in the same way, a great quantity of furniture, beyond what is proper and comfortable σοφῶς. ἀεὶ κακὸν τὸ ὑπερβαίνειν, wise. All excess is bad.

τὴν σοφίαν λέγεις τοῦ Ἀριστοτέλους· ἐν τῷ μέσῳ ἀεὶ ἡ σωτηρία, the wisdom of Aristotle: safety lies in the mean.

LESSON X

THE OTHER PAST TENSES

The imperfect, with the augment prefixed as the sign of the past, is as follows; from κόπτω—ἔκοπτ-ον,	-ες,	-ε,	I, thou, he was	} cutting.

ἐκόπτ-ομεν,	-ετε,	-ον,	we, you, they were

Pure verbs contract

αον	into	ων
αες	”	ας
αε	”	α
άομεν	”	ῶμεν
άετε	”	ᾶτε
αον	”	ων

as in—

ἐτίμων	ἐτίμας	ἐτίμα
ἐτιμῶμεν	ἐτιμᾶτε	ἐτίμων

εον	into	ουν
εες	”	εις
εε	”	ει
έομεν	”	οῦμεν
έετε	”	εῖτε
εον	”	ουν

as in—

ἐφίλουν	ἐφίλεις	ἐφίλει
ἐφιλοῦμεν	ἐφιλεῖτε	ἐφίλουν

The present perfect, or the immediately past perfect, in addition to the augment, reduplicates the initial consonant of the root, and its terminations are —

-α, -ας, -ε, I, thou, he has ...
-αμεν, -ατε, -ᾱσι, we, you, they have ...

It changes also the σ of the future into a κ—τιμήσω—τετίμηκα τετίμηκας τετίμηκε τετιμήκαμεν τετιμήκατε τετιμήκᾱσι but this κ, when the root ends in γ or κ, appears as χ; thus—πλέκω πλέξω πέπλεχα

πράσσω πράξω πέπρᾱχα

and in the same way the final π of the root appears as φ; thus—τύπτω τύψω τέτυφα

γράφω γράψω γέγραφα

In the pluperfect, which is not often used, the same reduplication takes place, and the terminations are—

-ειν -εις -ει
-ειμεν -ειτε -εισαν or -εσαν

as in—

έτετύφειν έτετύφεις έτετύφει έτετύφειμεν έτετύφειτε έτετύφεισαν ἔτυπτον ἐγὼ τὸ παιδάριον, ὅτε εἰσελθὼν ὁ ἀστυνόμος ἤρπασέ με εἰς τὸ δεσμωτήριον, I was beating the boy, when the policeman entering took me to prison.

γέγραφα ἐπιστολὴν πρὸς τὸν πατέρα σου λέγων παῖδά σε εἶναι κόσμιον τοὺς τρόπους,
I have written a letter to your father saying that you are a well-behaved young man.

ἐτύγχανον ὕπτιος κείμενος ἐν τῇ κοίτῃ ὅτε μέγας τις μῦς ὑπερπηδήσας τὰ στρώματα δεινὸν μοι ἐνεποίησε φόβον,
I happened to be lying on my back in the bed when a rat, leaping over the bedcover, gave me a great fright.

δικαίως γε, and with good reason.

τὰ νῦν δὲ ποῦστι τὸ ἀναιδὲς θρέμμα;
and now, where is the shameless creature?

κέκαφεν αὐτὸ τὸ κυνάριον μου τὸ ἐκ τῆς Ὀρεινῆς, my little Skye terrier has just snapped it up.

δίκαια ἔπαθεν, served it right!

ποῦστι τὸ μελανοδοχεῖόν μου;
where is my inkstand?

εὔρηκα, εὔρηκα, ἐν τῷ λουτρῶνι,
I have found it, I have found it, in the bathroom.

παράδοξον τοῦτο· οὐκ ἔγραφον ἔγωγε ἐν τῷ λουτρῶνι, strange; I was not writing in the bathroom.

οὐχ ὁρῶ τὸν κάλαμον,
I do not see my pen.

ἰδοῦ· εὔρον ἐν τῷ δειπνητηρίῳ, here it is; I found it in the dining-room.

ἔπαιζεν ὁ αἴλουρος τῷ καλὰμῳ σου καὶ τῷ πετάσῳ, καὶ τῇ χλαμύδι, καὶ ταῖς κρηπίσι, καὶ δεινόν τινα ἐποίει θόρυβον, the cat was playing with your pen, and with your hat, and your plaid, and your boots, and making a terrible row.

σφάζον τὸ θρέμμα, kill the brute!

οὐδαμῶς· αὐτὸς σὺ αἴτιος, ὃς δὴ ἔλιπες τὸ οἶκημα ἐν πάσῃ ἀκοσμίᾳ, ὁ δὲ αἴλουρος πεπλήρωκε τὸ ἔργον σου, not at all; you yourself are to blame, who left the room in great disorder, and the cat has finished your work.

δίκαια λέγεις, you are right.

καὶ ἐγὼ μεγάλην ὥφληκα μωρίαν, and I have committed an act of great folly.

μετανοῶ ἐπὶ τῷ πράγματι,
I repent of the business.

LESSON XI

VERBS IN ΜΙ

The great mass of Greek verbs, whatever their variations of person and tense may be, agree in this one prominent feature, that the first person singular of the present indicative ends in ω, as in Latin ō, possibly a relic of the pronoun ἐγώ, I. But there is a small class of verbs in familiar use which, instead of the ω, affix to the first person μι, evidently identical with the English me and the German mich—a confusion of the nominative and accusative cases familiar to our ears in French and vulgar English, when we say it is me instead of it is I. Whatever may have been the original form of the verbs in μι, as a matter of practice, if we fling off the μι from the present, the future and the tenses cognate with it may be formed directly from an assumed form in ω: thus ἴστημι, I cause to stand, στήσω, I will cause to stand, as if from στάω; τίθημι, I place, θήσω, I will place, as if from θέω; δείκνυμι, I show, δείξω, I will show, as if from δείκω; and δίδωμι, I give, future δώσω, I will give, as if from δόω, the Latin dō evidently preserving the simple form from which δίδωμι comes by the prefix of δι and the suffix μι.

Present

ἴστημι,	ἴστης,	ἴστησι,	I, thou, he	} cause to stand.
ἵσταμεν,	ἵστατε,	ἵσταῖσι,	we, you, they

Imperfect

ἴστην	ἴστης	ἴστη
ἵσταμεν	ἵστατε	ἵτασαν

Second Aorist

ἔστην	ἔστης	ἔστη
ἔστημεν	ἔστητε	ἔστησαν

The middle and passive voice follow the form of the regular verb.

The perfect active of ἴστημι, ἔστηκα, is used as a present with a neuter sense, I stand, and in like manner, the pluperfect ἐστήκειν, and the 2nd aorist ἔστην, I stood.

τίθημι and its analogues have ε for the α in the plural, and first aorist ἔθηκα instead of ἔθησα; and in the same way ἵημι, to send, has first aorist ἦκα, I sent; so also δίδωμι has ἔδωκα, I gave, not ἔδωσα.

The irregular verbs εἰμί, I am, εἶμι, I go (usually future: I will go), evidently fall under this scheme. For εἰμί, I am, see supra, Lesson I. The verb to go has εἶμι, I go; εἶ, thou art going; εἶσι, he is going; ἴμεν, we are going; ἴτε, you are going; ἰᾶσιν, they are going.

Imperative ἴθι, go.

ἄπιθι, ἄπιθι, ἄκλητος καθίζεις ἐπ' ἐκείνη τῇ ἔδρᾳ· στήσω σε ἐνταῦθα,
begone, begone! you have no business in that seat;
I will plant you here.

ἔστηκα ὅπου ἔστηκα, καὶ καθίζω ὅπου καθίζω,
I stand where I stand, and I sit where I sit.

σοὶ ἔδωκα τὴν βίβλον τὴν κομψήν, σὺ δὲ ἔδωκας τῷ παιδισκαρίῳ τούτῳ· ἐς τοσοῦτον ἄρα καταφρονεῖς μου, καὶ τοῦ δώρου μου;
I gave the pretty book to you, and you gave it to that little girl.
Do you so despise me and my gift?

συνῆκα ἃ λέγεις· ἡ δὲ παρθένος μᾶλλον τῆς βίβλον ὀνήσεται ἢ ἐγώ, I understand what you say;
but the young lady will be more profited by the book than I.

μάλα ταπεινόφρων σύ γε, you are very humble.

οὐχ οὕτως· φιλῶ τὴν παρθένον, not at all; I love the girl.

οἱ πολλοὶ τί φασι περὶ τοῦ Γλάδστωνος;
what do people say about Gladstone?

καὶ τῶν τε Ἰταλικῶν καὶ τῶν Ἑλληνικῶν γραμμάτων ἐπιστήμονα, they admire him, with good reason, as a great speaker, also as an expert and apt financier, and besides a great Greek and Italian scholar.

ἀληθέστατα λέγεις· εἰ κατέστησαν αὐτὸν καθηγητὴν τῆς Ἑλληνικῆς φιλολογίας ἐν τῷ τοῦ Βουπόρου πανεπιστημίῳ, οὐκ ἐλάττων ἂν ἐγένετο ^[6] distinguished for great learning.*

LESSON XII

COMPOUND VERBS

Verbs compounded with a preposition place the augment and reduplication between the preposition and the verb. Except περὶ and πρὸ all prepositions ending in a vowel have the vowel elided before the augment; πρὸ generally forms a crasis with the augment and becomes προῦ. The v in ἐν and σύν, which had been assimilated in the present, is resumed before the augment.

The prepositions that most frequently occur in compound verbs are—

περί,	round about,	as in English periphery .
ἀπό,	off or away from,	as in apogee .
ὑπό,	under,	as in hypocrite .
ἐν,	in,	as in energy .
εἰς,	into.
σύν,	together,	as in sympathy .
πρό,	before,	as in prophet .
παρά,	alongside or away,	as in parallel, parasite .
ἀντί,	instead of, opposite to,	as in antidote .
μετά,	with or after,	as in metaphysics .
πρός,	toward,	as in proselyte .
ἀνά,	up or back,	as in anatomy .
κατά,	down,	as in catalepsy .
ἐπί,	on or upon,	as in epilogue .

LESSON XIII

MOODS: SUBJUNCTIVE AND CONDITIONAL

The subjunctive or conjunctive mood is the form which the verb takes when no independent assertion is made as a fact, but only as a sequence of an asserted fact or truth, and having only a secondary or conditional existence; as if I should say in English, I give you this, that it may be in your power to do so and so, the secondary sentence preceded by that is altogether dependent on the precedent thing done, I give you this. In this example the substantival proposition is in the present indicative, and the subjunctive nature of the dependent sentence is expressed by the auxiliary verb may; but, if the leading clause is in the past tense, the dependent clause is expressed by might, which in fact is the past tense of may, as I gave you this that you might. In Greek this past conditional is, from a peculiar usage, commonly called the optative mood. In the present lesson we shall confine ourselves to the dependent tense subjoined to a present or a future. The form of the subjunctive is very simple, consisting as it does in the mere change of the terminational vowel or diphthong of the present into ω and η —

κόπτ-ω,	-ης,	-η,	I, thou, he	} may strike;
κόπτ-ωμεν,	-ητε,	-ωσι,	we, you, they

and in the first and second aorist the same—κόπτω, ἔκοψα, κόψω, -ης, -η.

The subjunctive mood is often introduced by ἐάν or ἤν, ἵνα, and ὅταν, and when a negative particle belongs to it, it is μή, not οὐ.

δίδωμί σοι ταύτην τὴν βίβλον ἵνα καταλαμβάνης ὅσον ἐστὶ χαλεπὸν τὸ πρᾶγμα περὶ οὗ ἔγραφες,
I give you this book that you may understand how difficult the matter is on which you were writing.

ἐὰν μὴ ἐκπονῇς τὰ διδάγματα, οὐ διδάξω σε, if you don't work out the lessons, I will not teach you.

ἤν τὸν δάκτυλον κόψῃς ἐκείνῃ τῇ ὀξεῖᾳ μαχαίρᾳ, οὐ παρ' ἐμοὶ ἡ αἰτία, if you cut your finger with that sharp knife, the blame is not with me ἐκτέλεσον τὸ ἔργον τὸ προκείμενον, ἵνα μὴ σε ταράσῃ αὖριον τὰ τῆς σήμερον ἡμέρας ὑστερήματα, finish the work that lies before you, that the leavings of to-day may not disturb you to-morrow.

λαβὼν τὸ σκάλευθρον κῖνει τὸ πῦρ, ἵνα μὴ πνίγῃ τὴν φλόγα τὸ βάρος τῶν ἀνθράκων, take the poker and stir the fire, that the weight of the coals may not choke the flame.

ἐὰν μὴ φυλάττῃ τὴν φλόγα, καύσεις τὰς χειρίδας τοῦ ἱματίου, if you do not take care of the flame, you will burn the sleeves of your coat.

φέρε δὴ τὸν Ὅμηρον ἐκ τοῦ θηκίου, ἵνα ἀκούω τί λέγει περὶ τοῦ κάλλους τῶν γυναικῶν, bring me Homer from the shelf, that I may hear what he says about the beauty of women.

ἀνάγνωθι, read it.

καλὴ καὶ μεγάλη καὶ ἀγλαὰ ἔργ’ εἰδυῖα, beautiful and tall, and skilful in tasteful works.

φεῦ· ὥς εὖ λέγεις. οὐκ ἀργαὶ αἱ γυναῖκες αἱ παρὰ τῷ ἀοιδῷ, excellent. The singer’s ladies were no idlers.

μιμήτριαί γε τῆς ἐν τοῖς περὶ τὸν βίον σοφῆς προστατίδος Παλλάδος, they were imitators of their patron goddess Pallas, wise in all that relates to life.

ρίψον τὸ κυνάριον εἰς τὸ ὕδωρ, ἵνα μανθάνῃ τὸ νήχεσθαι, fling the dog into the water, that he may learn to swim.

ἰδοῦ—νήχεται—ὥς εὖμαθές τὸ θρέμμα, there he goes—he swims—what a clever creature!

ποίησον σὺ κατὰ ταῦτά, do you the same.

οὐδαμῶς· φοβοῦμαι μὴ βαπτίση με τὸ κῦμα, no; I fear the wave will overwhelm me.

γελοῖα λέγεις· ἐλαφρότερον γὰρ τὸ σῶμα τὸ ἀνθρώπινον τοῦ ὕδατος, nonsense; the human body is lighter than the water.

οὐ καταποντίσει σε τὸ ὕδωρ ἀλλὰ ὁ φόβος, it is not the water that will drown you, but fear.

πιθανόν· ὅμως ἀντέχομαι τῆς ξηρᾶς, likely enough; nevertheless I hold by the dry land.

σοφός σύ γε, δεξιώτερον δὲ τὸ ζῷον. χαῖρε, you are wise, but the animal is more clever. Adieu.

LESSON XIV

THE OPTATIVE MOOD

The optative mood, or subjunctive in a historic sequence after a past tense, is distinguished by the domination of the diphthong οι, and runs thus—βουλεύω,	I advise. βουλεύοιμι,	βουλεύοις,	βουλεύοι,	I, thou, he	} might

βουλεύοιμεν,	βουλεύοιτε,	βουλεύοιεν,	we, you, they

And so in the second aorist, where there is one, as λάβοιμι, λάβοις, λάβοι, etc., from λαμβάνω, might, could, would, or should get.

In the first aorist the vowel α rules, and becomes αι, as singular, βουλεύσαιμι, βουλεύσαις or ειας, βουλεύσαι or ειε; plural, βουλεύσαιμεν, βουλεύσαιτε, βουλεύσαιεν or ειαν.

The most common uses of the optative may be classified thus—

- (1) In narrating what some one said, without guaranteeing the fact; as if I should say in English, he said that he were going to do so, instead of was; e.g. ἔλεγεν ὅτι ἀνδρὶ νέῳ καὶ σφοδρῷ οὐ ῥάδιον εἶη κολλάζειν τὰ πάθη, he said that it was not easy for a man young and vehement to control his passions.
- (2) To express a purpose or consequence in past time, with ὥς, ἵνα, or ὅπως, as ἐπόνει σταθερῶς ἵνα ἄθλον λάβοι, he laboured steadily that he might gain a prize.
- (3) After εἰ, if, to express an indefinite future, generally with ἂν in the dependent clause, as εἴ τις αἵρεσίν μοι δοίη, σπουδάζοιμι ἂν περὶ τὴν Ἑλληνικὴν γλῶσσαν μᾶλλον ἢ περὶ τὴν Ἰταλικήν, if one gave me the choice, I should prefer to study Greek rather than Italian.
- (4) To express a wish (from which use the name optative came), as μὴ γένοιτο, may it not happen—God forbid!

ὁ φίλος μου συνεβούλευσέ μοι πηδᾶν εἰς τὸ ὕδωρ, ὅπως κυνὸς δίκην μάθοιμι τὸ νήχεσθαι· ἐγὼ δὲ οὐκ ἐς τοσοῦτο ἤκω μωρίας, my friend advised me to leap into the water that I might learn to swim like a dog; but I am not such a fool.

εἴ λῆγεις· ὁμολογῶ σοι τερπνότερον μὲν εἶναι τὸ ὀρχεῖσθαι, χρησιμώτερον δέ πο τὸ νήχεσθαι ἔν γε τῇ ναυαγίᾳ, you say well; I must confess dancing is more agreeable, but swimming is sometimes more useful, especially in a shipwreck.

τῶν γνωρίμων τῶν ἐμῶν τις εἶπε ὅτι ἀσκοῖ τὸ νήχεσθαι, ἵνα διαφεύγοι τοὺς κινδύνους τῆς θαλάσσης, an acquaintance of mine told me that he is practising swimming to escape the dangers of the sea.

σοφὸς ἐκεῖνος, a wise man he.

ἀσπίς τῶν σοφῶν ἡ πρόνοια, forethought is the shield of the wise.

ἀκούσας ᾄδοντος τοῦ ἀλεκτρυόνος εὐθύς ἀπέσεισα τὸν ὕπνον καὶ ἀπέδραμον ὡς τάχιστα ἵνα μὴ ὕστεροῖμι τῶν ἀγώνων, hearing the cock crow I forthwith shook off sleep, and ran at full speed that I might not be too late for the games.

ἐγὼ δὲ ἄνευ τῆς χλαίνης ἀπέδραμον ἵνα μὴ τοῦ λαμπροῦ θεάματος ἀστοχοῖμι, and I ran off without my plaid, that I might not miss so splendid a spectacle.

ἐκεῖ δὲ τί εἶδες;

what did you see there?

θύλακον μέγαν εἶδον ὑδρογόνῳ οἰδοῦντα ἀέρι,

I saw a huge bag full of hydrogen gas.

καὶ ἄνδρα ἔντοσθεν ἀεροβατοῦντα, ἵνα γε προσχάνοι αὐτῷ πολὺς ὄχλος ὡς ἐπισκεψομένῳ δῆθεν τὸν ἄνδρα τὸν ἐν τῇ σελήνῃ, and a man inside, sailing through the air, that he might make a rabble of people stare at him, as one going to pay a visit to the man in the moon.

ὦ τῆς μωρίας, O what folly!

μωρὸς μωρὸν θαυμάζει, fool admires fool.

καταβαίνοντα αὐτὸν σφοδρότερος αἰφνιδίως ἀρπάσας ἄνεμος παρήνεγκε εἰς τὸ κωδωνοστάσιον τοῦ μεγάλου ἱεροῦ τῶν ἐπισκοπικῶν, καὶ ὁ ἀλεκτρυὼν ὁ ἐν τῷ ἄκρῳ διεκέντησε τὰ ἐντόσθια, as he was coming down a strong blast suddenly seized him and drove him on to the steeple of the cathedral, and the cock on the top of the steeple pierced his bowels.

ὦ τοῦ δειλαίου, O the poor wretch!

ὦ τοῦ ἄφρονος· δίκαια ἔπαθεν· ἀεροβατεῖν δεῖ τὰς ὀρνίθας τὸν αἰθέρα, οὐ τοὺς ἀνθρώπους, O the fool! served him right!
birds ought to tread the air, not men.

LESSON XV

THE PARTICLE ἄν

Besides the use of ἄν with the optative in reference to a future probability, noticed in the last lesson, it is joined in Greek with the past tenses, the imperfect or aorists, to express what might, could, would, or should have taken place in past time if something else had happened, or had not happened, as ἔπραξας ἄν τὸ δίκαιον εἰ ἔπραξας τοῦτο, you would have done what is right if you had done this.

ἐγώ, εἰ ἔγνων τὸ ἥθος σου, οὐκ ἂν ἔδωκά σοι τὸ ἀργύριον, if I had known your character, I would not have given you the money.

τίνα δὴ ἀμαρτίαν ἡμάρτηκα; how have I done wrong?

ἐσπάθησας ἀχρήστως τὰ χρήματα· εἰ γὰρ ἐτύγχανες νοῦν ἔχων, οὐκ ἂν ἀνήλωσας ἅπαντα εἰς τέρψιν ἐξίτηλον, you squandered your money uselessly. If you had had sense, you would not have spent it all on a fleeting pleasure.

εἰ ἐτύγχανες σοφὸς ὢν, διέσωσας ἂν τι τῶν σήμερον θησαυρῶν εἰς τὴν χρείαν τῆς αὔριον, if you had been wise, you would have saved some of to-day's treasure for to-morrow's need.

μωρὸς ἂν ἦν ὄνειροπολῶν τὴν μέλλουσαν ἡδονήν, τῆς δὲ παρούσης ἀμαρτών, I should have been a fool, dreaming of the future and missing the present pleasure οὕτως λέγοντα ἐλέγχουσί σε οἱ μύρμηκες καὶ αἱ μέλισσαι, when you speak thus the ants and the bees confute you.

εἰ ὁ Βρούσσιος ἔτυχε μὴ νικήσας ἐν τῇ μάχῃ τοῦ Βαννοκβούρνου, τί ἂν συνέβη;
if Bruce had not gained the victory at Bannockburn, what would have been the consequence?

ἐπικρατήσασα ἡ Ἀγγλία ἠφάνισεν ἂν τὸν Σκῶτον ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς, dominant England would have caused the Scot to disappear from the face of the earth.

καὶ τοῦτο θεῖον πάνυ ἂν ἐγένετο εὐτύχημα, and this would have been a great piece of good luck.

ἐνίοις μὲν οὕτως δοκεῖ, ἐνίοις δὲ οὐ, some think so and some not.

τί ἂν συνέβη, εἰ ὁ Ἀλέξανδρος ὁ τοῦ Φιλίππου οὐκ ἐνίκησε τὴν ἐν Ἀρβήλοις νίκην;
what would have been the consequence if Alexander, the son of Philip, had not gained the battle of Arbela?

διετέλει ἂν ὁ Πέρσης δεσπόζων τῆς ἀνατολῆς, καὶ οὐκ ἂν

the Persian would have continued lording it over the East, and the Apostles would not have preached the gospel in Greek; for it was the son of Philip that introduced Greek learning into all the East.

λαμπαδηφόρος δῆπου τῆς Ἑλληνικῆς σοφίας ὁ μέγας Ἀλέξανδρος,

LESSON XVI

THE PASSIVE VOICE

expressing not what a man does to another person or thing by the putting forth of his active force, but what he suffers from the active force of another, has its characteristic form in Greek as follows—

Present

Indicative—

πείθ-ομαι,	-η,	-εται,	I, thou, he is	} persuaded.
-όμεθα,	-εσθε,	-ονται,	we, you, they are

Subjunctive, with the long vowel as in the active voice—

πείθ-ωμαι	-η	-ηται
-ώμεθα	-ησθε	-ωνται

and optative with οι—

πειθ-οίμην	-οιο	-οιτο
-οίμεθα	-οισθε	-οιντο

Imperfect

ἐπειθόμην	ἐπείθου	ἐπείθετο
ἐπειθόμεθα	ἐπείθεσθε	ἐπείθοντο

Future

πεισθ-ήσομαι	-ήσῃ	-ήσεται
-ησόμεθα	-ήσεσθε	-ήσονται

First Aorist

ἐπείσθ-ην	-ης	-η
-ημεν	-ητε	-ησαν

Optative—

singular,	πεισθ-είην	-είῃς	-είη
plural,	-εῖμεν	-εῖτε	-εῖεν

In the perfect as in the active voice the reduplication takes place, as—πέπεισμαι πέπεισαι πέπεισται πεπείσμεθα πέπεισθε πεπεισμένοι εἰσίν

Certain verbs have a second aorist, as στέλλω, I send, not ἐστάλην but ἐστάλην, I was sent; and pure verbs have the characteristic contraction of the vowel into a diphthong, as φιλούμεθα for φιλεόμεθα; but these variations are best learned by practice.

ἐστάλησαν οἱ ἀπόστολοι κηρύζοντες τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, καὶ ἐκήρυξαν δεινῶς,
the Apostles were sent to preach the gospel,
and they preached it with power.

ὅτε οἱ ἀπόστολοι ἐκήρυξαν τὸ εὐαγγέλιον ἐν ταῖς Ἀθήναις, ὀλίγοι ἐπείσθησαν,
when the Apostles preached the gospel in Athens, few were persuaded.

ὁ κακοῦργος ἐκεῖνος ἐπήνεγκέ μοι βιαίαν πληγὴν τῇ βακτηρίᾳ καὶ τὸ νῶτόν μοι ἐτραυματίσθη χαλεπῶς, that bad fellow struck me a heavy blow with his cudgel, and my back was severely wounded.

εἴτα δὲ τί συνέβη; then what happened?

τῶν τοξοτῶν τις τῶν φυλασσόντων τὴν πόλιν ἥρπασεν αὐτόν, καὶ εὐθὺς ἐνεβλήθη εἰς τὸ δεσμωτήριον, one of the policemen who keep the peace of the city laid hold of him, and he was forthwith cast into prison.

δίκαια ἔπαθεν, served him right.

κατὰ φύσιν τοῦτο· πάντες ὅσοι ἄνομοι καὶ βίαιοι δικαίως ἐμβληθήσονται εἰς τὸ δεσμωτήριον· οὐ γὰρ ἄνθρωποι οἱ τοιοῦτοι ἀλλὰ συγγενεῖς τῶν τίγρεων, quite natural; all lawless and violent persons will naturally be cast into prison; for such persons are not men, but related to tigers.

οἷμοι πέπληγμαι, πόθεν ἡ πληγή;
woe's me, I am struck! whence came the blow?

ὁ γνώριμός μου ὁ Ἰωάννης Καμερὼν παίζων τὴν κορύνην ἐν τῷ πεδίῳ ἔπληξε πλαγίως τὴν σφαῖραν, ἥπερ παρετράπη εἰς τὴν κεφαλὴν σοι my acquaintance John Cameron, playing at golf on the links, struck his ball obliquely and it was driven against your head.

οἷμοι—μοι—ὄτοτοτοτοῖ, O woe's me, woe!

ὦ τοῦ ταλαιπώρου, O poor fellow.

τί χρὴ πράξαι; what must we do?

φέρε εἰς τὸ νοσοκομεῖον, καὶ κάλεσον τὸν ἰατρόν· ἔχει γὰρ κίνδυνον τὸ πράγμα, *take him to the infirmary and call the doctor;
it is a dangerous business.*

αὐτίκα μάλα· κληθήσεται, instantly; he shall be called.

LESSON XVII

THE MIDDLE VOICE

The middle voice, or, as it might more significantly be called, the reflexive or the subjective voice, is a form of the verb where the action does not pass on from the agent to an outward object, but comes back on him, or in some loose way is looked on as done for his benefit, or affecting himself specially. Thus it is in the main identical with what in Latin grammar used to be called neuter verbs, only it is subject to not a few nice shades of personal reference, which leads to its apparent confusion with the active voice, and to various anomalous usages which can only be learned by practice. It is, of course, in strictness more nearly allied to the passive than to the active voice; for in both these voices, as distinguished from the active, the force of the verb is either altogether spent on the agent, or is in some way passively or emotionally or intentionally connected with him. This intimate relationship leads to a similarity of form in the two voices, the present and imperfect middle being in fact identical with the same tenses in the passive voice, and the other tenses, in their characteristic changes, more allied to the passive than to the active.

Future Indicative

λύσομαι	λύση	λύσεται
λυσόμεθα	λύσεσθε	λύσονται

First Aorist

έλυσάμην	έλύσω	έλύσατο
έλυσάμεθα	έλύσασθε	έλύσαντο

οὐ τῶν τυχόντων κατέλαβέ με ἔχειν διδασκάλους τῆς σοφίας, τὰ νῦν δὲ δικαίως αὐτὸς σοφίζομαι,
I had the good luck to have no common teachers of wisdom, but now with good reason I profess wisdom for myself.

ἐδεξάμην τὴν βίβλον ἣν σὺ ἐδέξω παρὰ τοῦ ἀνεψιοῦ, καὶ ἀναγνώσομαι αὐτὴν πάσῃ σπουδῇ,
I received the book which you got from your cousin, and I will read it carefully.

οὗτος ὁ νεανίας τρέχει δεινῶς· βλάψεται, this young man runs furiously; he will hurt himself.

οὐ φοβοῦμαι, I am not afraid.

ἀσφαλῆς ἐστὶ τοῖς ποσίν, he is a steady-footed fellow.

οὗτος ὁ νεανίας ταλαιπώρως κυπτάξει εἰς τὰς βίβλους· τρίψεται ὑπερτρυφῶν ἐν τῇ ἀναγνώσει, this young man stoops miserably down into his books;
he will wear himself away, stuffing himself with reading.

μὴ χαλέπαινε· βαθμηδὸν ἀκμάζει πάντα. τὰ μικρότατα σπέρματα, ἀρξάμενα ἀπὸ τοῦ ἡρινοῦ χρόνου, πρὸ τῆς ὀπώρας γενήσεται φυτὰ μεγάλα,
do not repine. All things grow ripe by degrees.
The smallest seeds beginning with the spring by harvest time will become large plants.

οὕτοσὶ πλήρεσιν ἀνάγεται τοῖς ἰστίοις, ἡμεῖς δὲ οὐχ ἡττησόμεθα,
this fellow sails out with full sails, but we shall not fall behind.

σήμερον λαμπρῷ χρώμεθα τῷ οὐρανῷ, to-day we have fine weather.

αὔριον δὲ ὕσει ὁ θεός, but it will rain to-morrow.

ὦ, τάλᾱς ἐγὼ· οὐδὲν διαγίγνεται μένον ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ τῷ κατὰ τὴν Καληδονία alas, alas! there is no continuity or permanence of weather in Scotland.

ἀληθῇ λέγεις· μόνον τὸ τῶν Καληδονίων ἦθος σεμνύνεται ἐπὶ τῷ ἄγαν σταθερῷ καὶ ἀμεταβόλῳ· κρατερόν τὸ Καληδόνιον ἦθος ὡς ὁ γρανιτόλιθος, ὁ ἐν Ἀβερδονία, true; only the character of the Scots boasts of steadiness and permanence. The Scottish character is strong as the Aberdeen granite.

χάριν οἶδα τῷ Θεῷ· αὐτὸς ἀλαζονεύομαι τῆσδε τῆς ἐπιμόνου κράσεως οὐ σπανίως μεταλαμβάνεσθαι, thank God! myself boast that I have a fair share of this persistent temperament.

δικαίως γε· ἐγγυᾶται τὴν κατόρθωσιν ἡ ἐπιμονή.

LESSON XVIII

PARTICIPLES

The Greek participle has a large range of idiomatic and significant usages, which can only be learned by reading. For a start, however, it may be enough to say that the participle follows the leading verb of the sentence in many cases where both Latin and English use the infinitive, and that when joined with the definite article the participle performs the function of a relative clause in a less formal style; as if in English, instead of the man who used such language is not a gentleman, we should say the man the having used, which no doubt sounds very clumsy, because we require an auxiliary verb to express the past participle, but in Greek ὁ ταῦτα λέξας is manifestly neater and more succinct than ὃς ταῦτα ἔλεξε.

οὐκ ἀνέχομαι οὕτω διαβαλλόμενος,
I cannot stand to be slandered in this way.

ἀμέλει· ἀμέλει· οἶδα τὸ ἀνθρωπάριον· χαίρει αἰὲν βλασφημῶν κατὰ τῶν κρεισσόνων, never mind; never mind; I know the creature; it is his delight always to be speaking ill of men better than himself.

ποία τις ἦν ἡ βλασφημία;
what was he slandering about?

ἐτύγχανον ἐγὼ ἐπαινῶν τινὰ τῶν δυνατῶν, ἄνδρα πλούσιον καὶ εὖφρονι καὶ σώφρονα ἐν Μαγκεστρίῳ· ὁ δὲ εὐθὺς ἤρξατο διαβάλλων ὀλοσχερῶ ἅπασαν τὴν τε ἀριστοκρατίαν καὶ πλουτοκρατίαν τὴν ἐν τῇ πόλει, I happened to be praising a gentleman of the influential classes in Manchester, rich and good and sensible, and forthwith he began to denounce in a sweeping style all the plutocracy and the aristocracy of the country.

φαίνεται διάβολος ὢν, καὶ ὡς ἀληθῶς συγγενὴς τοῦ Κακοδαίμονος, τοῦ Διαβόλου,
he appears to be a calumniator, and a cousin-german of the evil Spirit, the Devil.

καὶ διετέλει ἐπηρεάζων, ὡς ἐμοῦ παρασίτου ὄντος καὶ ἀκολούθου τῆς βδελυκτῆς τῶν ὀλιγαρχῶν αἰρέσεως· πρὸς δὲ τούτοις τὰ τοιαῦτα λοιδορήματα ἐποίησε τυπωθῆναι ἐν ταῖς ἐφημερίσι, and he went on to use insolent language, saying (or implying) that I was a parasite and a flunkey of the detestable faction of the oligarchs; and in addition to all this he got this insulting language printed in the newspapers.

τοὺς τοιούτους ἀνθρώπους ἐχρῆν μαστίξαι· ὅμως, τὸ πρότερον λεχθέν, ἀμέλει. δηλὸς ἐστὶ νικήσας τὴν ὀργὴν ὁ λέγων ἀμέλει, such ill-tongued rascals should have been flogged; but, as I said before, never mind. It is plain that the man who says ἀμέλει has conquered his passion.

δυνατὰ λέγεις· ὅμως σύννοιδα ἐμαυτῷ τὴν τῶν Κυαϊκέρων ἀπάθειαν οὐκ ἐπαγγελλόμενος, *possibly; but I am conscious that I do not profess
the apathy of the Quaker.*

ἀμέλει· ἀμέλει· τρὶς νῖκηφόρος ὁ νῖκήσας τὴν ὀργήν.
βραχεῖα μανία ἢ ὀργή,
never mind; never mind; he is three times conqueror who has conquered his passion. Anger is a brief madness.

APPENDIX I

ELEMENTARY HINTS ON ETYMOLOGY

(1) In borrowed words, especially when the borrowing language, as English, does not deal largely in sounding terminations, it is a common practice to let the termination drop, either altogether or partly, and leave only the simple root, as from λαμπάδα, lamp; from δημοκρατία, democracy; from κακοφωνία, cacophony, and other such feminines, as theology, philology, where the α is dropped, and the accent transferred to the antepenultimate after the favourite English fashion, while the German, more faithful to the Greek, preserves the accented ι, and marks the presence of the α by an e, as in Theologié, Philologié.

(2) As the Greek element in the English language often comes to us not directly from the Greek, but indirectly through the Latin of the Middle Ages, it sometimes happens that we find a pure Greek word with a Latin termination attached to it naturalised in English, as in cathédral, from καθέδρα, and in ephemeral, from ἐφήμερος. In this example the termination al, so common in Latin, takes the place of the Greek ος, with the same adjectival force; but in not a few cases, as optical, ethical, clinical, political, the al is an unmeaning superfluity, as the adjectival character of the word is already fixed by the Greek termination κος, as in κλινικός from κλίνη. In verbs the termination ate is pure Latin, but appears sometimes barbarously appended to a pure Greek verb, as homologate, from ὁμολογῶ.

(3) It is a general rule in etymology that cognate letters, that is, letters pronounced by the same organs, or a similar modification of the vocal organs, easily pass into one another; thus σ and τ being both dental, τ a pure dental, and σ a sibilant dental, and δ being only the blunt form of τ, these three letters pass into one another, as in Attic πράττω for πράσσω, and ῥόδον, English rose. So in German das for English that. In like manner, λ and ρ being both liquids, λείριον becomes lily, and the Latin Tibur becomes the Italian Tivoli, by the interchange of the labials and of the liquids.

(4) The termination s in the names of many of the sciences, as optics, acoustics, mechanics, is simply the sign of the plural in English, put for ά the neuter plural in Greek, as in τὰ πολιτικά, things belonging to the state; τὰ ὀπτικά, things belonging to vision, which, however, the Greeks often express by ἡ ὀπτική in the nominative singular feminine, with τέχνη, art, or θεωρία, theory, understood.

(5) The termination ise or ize, so common in English, generally though not always with an active signification, as in advertise, solemnise, is the ίζω of Greek, as in σοφίζω, I make wise, with σοφίζομαι, in the middle voice, I profess myself wise. The word σοφιστής from this verb, in English sophist, is the person who makes this profession, as in baptist, theorist, atheist, and other pure Greek words for an agent, with only the loss of the termination ής; sometimes in a hybrid way ist is added to a Latin root, as in deist, etymologically but not colloquially identical with theist.

(6) Sometimes not only is the terminational syllable cut off, but the initial also, either wholly or in part; so ἐπίσκοπος, with the change of π into the kindred labial β, becomes bishop.

(7) When two consonants of different kinship come together, one of them, specially that not belonging to the root, disappears, as from λάπτω, lap; from τύπτω, τύπος, type.

(8) The aspirate h, in Greek spiritus asper, has a close affinity with the sibilant s; so for ἕξ we have in Latin sex, in English six; ὄς for sow; ἔδος, sedes, seat.

(9) When a word in Latin or Greek commences with a p, by aspiration it becomes f in English and the Teutonic languages; thus for πῦρ we have fire, for ποδ-foot, for πατήρ, father, etc.

(10) The English w is closely connected with the vowels, as appears from water and ooater; hence it disappears in Greek altogether, or is represented by a breathing, as in οἶνος, wine; ὕδωρ, water; ὑετός, wet.

(11) In some adjectives the Latin an, like al, is superfluously appended to the Greek termination in κός, as rhetician, from ῥητορικός.

(12) The Greek κ, as in κύων, and cornu in Latin, appears in the Teutonic languages as h, so hound, horn; κολώνη, collis, hill.

(13) The letter m at the end of an English word curtailed from Greek signifies the thing done, the product of the verb, as ποίημα, poem, the thing made, a poem, from ποιέω, I make; so baptism from βαπτίζω, and chrism from χρίω, I anoint, and other isms.

(14) Finally, as at least two-thirds of the technical words used in our scientific nomenclature, and not a few even outside of the range, are of Greek extraction, the student would act wisely if at starting he were to make a list of all such terms in familiar use, with their Greek form and Greek analysis in an opposite column; as—

theology θεολογία
(θεός, God; λόγος, discourse)

He will thus find that he knows already some two or three hundred Greek words in a slightly disguised English form.

APPENDIX II

VOCABULARIES

In accordance with the principle set forth in the preface, these vocabularies, containing the names of the most familiar objects, are to be taken with him as a vade mecum wherever the student goes. He must in no wise be content with the lazy habit of recognising a word only in a passive recipient style when he meets with it in a book, but he must stamp it directly on every object that comes in his way, and repeat it frequently without the intervention of the mother tongue, till he uses it as familiarly as a workman handles his tools. The language will thus become his familiar friend, not, as in the mere bookish method, an occasional visitor. Of course, such a catalogue of words is not intended to be exhaustive; but the learner, after training himself to the habit of thinking and speaking in the foreign idiom, may supply the deficiency by consulting any good English-Greek dictionary, such as Arnold and Browne's, London 1856, and for modern Greek, where that may be necessary, Lascarides's English-Greek dictionary, London 1882. From these sources also, and from his own reading, which must in no wise be neglected, he will be able to pick out appropriate verbs with which he may put the Hellenised objects around him, so to speak, into motion, and hold a conversation with a fellow-student trained to the colloquial method, or with himself, solus cum solo, if he can find no partner in his colloquial exercise.

Updated editions will replace the previous one—the old editions will be renamed.

Creating the works from print editions not protected by U.S. copyright law means that no one owns a United States copyright in these works, so the Foundation (and you!) can copy and distribute it in the United States without permission and without paying copyright royalties. Special rules, set forth in the General Terms of Use part of this license, apply to copying and distributing Project Gutenberg™ electronic works to protect the PROJECT GUTENBERG™ concept and trademark. Project Gutenberg is a registered trademark, and may not be used if you charge for an eBook, except by following the terms of the trademark license, including paying royalties for use of the Project Gutenberg trademark. If you do not charge anything for copies of this eBook, complying with the trademark license is very easy. You may use this eBook for nearly any purpose such as creation of derivative works, reports, performances and research. Project Gutenberg eBooks may be modified and printed and given away—you may do practically ANYTHING in the United States with eBooks not protected by U.S. copyright law. Redistribution is subject to the trademark license, especially commercial redistribution.

START: FULL LICENSE

THE FULL PROJECT GUTENBERG™ LICENSE

PLEASE READ THIS BEFORE YOU DISTRIBUTE OR USE THIS WORK

To protect the Project Gutenberg™ mission of promoting the free distribution of electronic works, by using or distributing this work (or any other work associated in any way with the phrase “Project Gutenberg”), you agree to comply with all the terms of the Full Project Gutenberg License available with this file or online at www.gutenberg.org/license.

Section 1. General Terms of Use and Redistributing Project Gutenberg electronic works

1.A. By reading or using any part of this Project Gutenberg electronic work, you indicate that you have read, understand, agree to and accept all the terms of this license and intellectual property (trademark/copyright) agreement. If you do not agree to abide by all the terms of this agreement, you must cease using and return or destroy all copies of Project Gutenberg electronic works in your possession. If you paid a fee for obtaining a copy of or access to a Project Gutenberg electronic work and you do not agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement, you may obtain a refund from the person or entity to whom you paid the fee as set forth in paragraph 1.E.8.

1.B. “Project Gutenberg” is a registered trademark. It may only be used on or associated in any way with an electronic work by people who agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement. There are a few things that you can do with most Project Gutenberg electronic works even without complying with the full terms of this agreement. See paragraph 1.C below. There are a lot of things you can do with Project Gutenberg electronic works if you follow the terms of this agreement and help preserve free future access to Project Gutenberg electronic works. See paragraph 1.E below.

1.C. The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation (“the Foundation” or PGLAF), owns a compilation copyright in the collection of Project Gutenberg electronic works. Nearly all the individual works in the collection are in the public domain in the United States. If an individual work is unprotected by copyright law in the United States and you are located in the United States, we do not claim a right to prevent you from copying, distributing, performing, displaying or creating derivative works based on the work as long as all references to Project Gutenberg are removed. Of course, we hope that you will support the Project Gutenberg mission of promoting free access to electronic works by freely sharing Project Gutenberg works in compliance with the terms of this agreement for keeping the Project Gutenberg name associated with the work. You can easily comply with the terms of this agreement by keeping this work in the same format with its attached full Project Gutenberg License when you share it without charge with others.

1.D. The copyright laws of the place where you are located also govern what you can do with this work. Copyright laws in most countries are in a constant state of change. If you are outside the United States, check the laws of your country in addition to the terms of this agreement before downloading, copying, displaying, performing, distributing or creating derivative works based on this work or any other Project Gutenberg work. The Foundation makes no representations concerning the copyright status of any work in any country other than the United States.

1.E. Unless you have removed all references to Project Gutenberg:

1.E.1. The following sentence, with active links to, or other immediate access to, the full Project Gutenberg License must appear prominently whenever any copy of a Project Gutenberg work (any work on which the phrase “Project Gutenberg” appears, or with which the phrase “Project Gutenberg” is associated) is accessed, displayed, performed, viewed, copied or distributed:

This eBook is for the use of anyone anywhere in the United States and most other parts of the world at no cost and with almost no restrictions whatsoever. You may copy it, give it away or re-use it under the terms of the Project GutenbergTM License included with this eBook or online at www.gutenberg.org. If you are not located in the United States, you will have to check the laws of the country where you are located before using this eBook.

1.E.2. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is derived from texts not protected by U.S. copyright law (does not contain a notice indicating that it is posted with permission of the copyright holder), the work can be copied and distributed to anyone in the United States without paying any fees or charges. If you are redistributing or providing access to a work with the phrase “Project Gutenberg” associated with or appearing on the work, you must comply either with the requirements of paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 or obtain permission for the use of the work and the Project Gutenberg trademark as set forth in paragraphs 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.3. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is posted with the permission of the copyright holder, your use and distribution must comply with both paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 and any additional terms imposed by the copyright holder. Additional terms will be linked to the Project Gutenberg License for all works posted with the permission of the copyright holder found at the beginning of this work.

1.E.4. Do not unlink or detach or remove the full Project Gutenberg License terms from this work, or any files containing a part of this work or any other work associated with Project Gutenberg.

1.E.5. Do not copy, display, perform, distribute or redistribute this electronic work, or any part of this electronic work, without prominently displaying the sentence set forth in paragraph 1.E.1 with active links or immediate access to the full terms of the Project Gutenberg License.

1.E.6. You may convert to and distribute this work in any binary, compressed, marked up, nonproprietary or proprietary form, including any word processing or hypertext form. However, if you provide access to or distribute copies of a Project Gutenberg work in a format other than “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other format used in the official version posted on the official Project Gutenberg website (www.gutenberg.org), you must, at no additional cost, fee or expense to the user, provide a copy, a means of exporting a copy, or a means of obtaining a copy upon request, of the work in its original “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other form. Any alternate format must include the full Project Gutenberg License as specified in paragraph 1.E.1.

1.E.7. Do not charge a fee for access to, viewing, displaying, performing, copying or distributing any Project Gutenberg works unless you comply with paragraph 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.8. You may charge a reasonable fee for copies of or providing access to or distributing Project Gutenberg electronic works provided that:

- You pay a royalty fee of 20% of the gross profits you derive from the use of Project Gutenberg works calculated using the method you already use to calculate your applicable taxes. The fee is owed to the owner of the Project Gutenberg trademark, but he has agreed to donate royalties under this paragraph to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation. Royalty payments must be paid within 60 days following each date on which you prepare (or are legally required to prepare) your periodic tax returns. Royalty payments should be clearly marked as such and sent to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation at the address specified in Section 4, "Information about donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation."
- You provide a full refund of any money paid by a user who notifies you in writing (or by e-mail) within 30 days of receipt that s/he does not agree to the terms of the full Project Gutenberg™ License. You must require such a user to return or destroy all copies of the works possessed in a physical medium and discontinue all use of and all access to other copies of Project Gutenberg™ works.
- You provide, in accordance with paragraph 1.F.3, a full refund of any money paid for a work or a replacement copy, if a defect in the electronic work is discovered and reported to you within 90 days of receipt of the work.
- You comply with all other terms of this agreement for free distribution of Project Gutenberg™ works.

1.E.9. If you wish to charge a fee or distribute a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work or group of works on different terms than are set forth in this agreement, you must obtain permission in writing from the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the manager of the Project Gutenberg™ trademark. Contact the Foundation as set forth in Section 3 below.

1.F.

1.F.1. Project Gutenberg volunteers and employees expend considerable effort to identify, do copyright research on, transcribe and proofread works not protected by U.S. copyright law in creating the Project Gutenberg™ collection. Despite these efforts, Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, and the medium on which they may be stored, may contain “Defects,” such as, but not limited to, incomplete, inaccurate or corrupt data, transcription errors, a copyright or other intellectual property infringement, a defective or damaged disk or other medium, a computer virus, or computer codes that damage or cannot be read by your equipment.

1.F.2. LIMITED WARRANTY, DISCLAIMER OF DAMAGES - Except for the “Right of Replacement or Refund” described in paragraph 1.F.3, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the owner of the Project Gutenberg™ trademark, and any other party distributing a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work under this agreement, disclaim all liability to you for damages, costs and expenses, including legal fees. YOU AGREE THAT YOU HAVE NO REMEDIES FOR NEGLIGENCE, STRICT LIABILITY, BREACH OF WARRANTY OR BREACH OF CONTRACT EXCEPT THOSE PROVIDED IN PARAGRAPH 1.F.3. YOU AGREE THAT THE FOUNDATION, THE TRADEMARK OWNER, AND ANY DISTRIBUTOR UNDER THIS AGREEMENT WILL NOT BE LIABLE TO YOU FOR ACTUAL, DIRECT, INDIRECT, CONSEQUENTIAL, PUNITIVE OR INCIDENTAL DAMAGES EVEN IF YOU GIVE NOTICE OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGE.

1.F.3. LIMITED RIGHT OF REPLACEMENT OR REFUND - If you discover a defect in this electronic work within 90 days of receiving it, you can receive a refund of the money (if any) you paid for it by sending a written explanation to the person you received the work from. If you received the work on a physical medium, you must return the medium with your written explanation. The person or entity that provided you with the defective work may elect to provide a replacement copy in lieu of a refund. If you received the work electronically, the person or entity providing it to you may choose to give you a second opportunity to receive the work electronically in lieu of a refund. If the second copy is also defective, you may demand a refund in writing without further opportunities to fix the problem.

1.F.4. Except for the limited right of replacement or refund set forth in paragraph 1.F.3, this work is provided to you 'AS-IS', WITH NO OTHER WARRANTIES OF ANY KIND, EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY OR FITNESS FOR ANY PURPOSE.

1.F.5. Some states do not allow disclaimers of certain implied warranties or the exclusion or limitation of certain types of damages. If any disclaimer or limitation set forth in this agreement violates the law of the state applicable to this agreement, the agreement shall be interpreted to make the maximum disclaimer or limitation permitted by the applicable state law. The invalidity or unenforceability of any provision of this agreement shall not void the remaining provisions.

1.F.6. INDEMNITY - You agree to indemnify and hold the Foundation, the trademark owner, any agent or employee of the Foundation, anyone providing copies of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works in accordance with this agreement, and any volunteers associated with the production, promotion and distribution of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, harmless from all liability, costs and expenses, including legal fees, that arise directly or indirectly from any of the following which you do or cause to occur: (a) distribution of this or any Project Gutenberg work, (b) alteration, modification, or additions or deletions to any Project Gutenberg work, and (c) any Defect you cause.

Section 2. Information about the Mission of Project Gutenberg

Project Gutenberg is synonymous with the free distribution of electronic works in formats readable by the widest variety of computers including obsolete, old, middle-aged and new computers. It exists because of the efforts of hundreds of volunteers and donations from people in all walks of life.

Volunteers and financial support to provide volunteers with the assistance they need are critical to reaching Project Gutenberg's goals and ensuring that the Project Gutenberg collection will remain freely available for generations to come. In 2001, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation was created to provide a secure and permanent future for Project Gutenberg and future generations. To learn more about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation and how your efforts and donations can help, see Sections 3 and 4 and the Foundation information page at www.gutenberg.org.

Section 3. Information about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation is a non-profit 501(c)(3) educational corporation organized under the laws of the state of Mississippi and granted tax exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service. The Foundation's EIN or federal tax identification number is 64-6221541. Contributions to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation are tax deductible to the full extent permitted by U.S. federal laws and your state's laws.

The Foundation's business office is located at 41 Watchung Plaza #516, Montclair NJ 07042, USA, +1 (862) 621-9288. Email contact links and up to date contact information can be found at the Foundation's website and official page at www.gutenberg.org/contact

Section 4. Information about Donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

Project Gutenberg™ depends upon and cannot survive without widespread public support and donations to carry out its mission of increasing the number of public domain and licensed works that can be freely distributed in machine-readable form accessible by the widest array of equipment including outdated equipment. Many small donations ($1 to $5,000) are particularly important to maintaining tax exempt status with the IRS.

The Foundation is committed to complying with the laws regulating charities and charitable donations in all 50 states of the United States. Compliance requirements are not uniform and it takes a considerable effort, much paperwork and many fees to meet and keep up with these requirements. We do not solicit donations in locations where we have not received written confirmation of compliance. To SEND DONATIONS or determine the status of compliance for any particular state visit www.gutenberg.org/donate.

While we cannot and do not solicit contributions from states where we have not met the solicitation requirements, we know of no prohibition against accepting unsolicited donations from donors in such states who approach us with offers to donate.

International donations are gratefully accepted, but we cannot make any statements concerning tax treatment of donations received from outside the United States. U.S. laws alone swamp our small staff.

Please check the Project Gutenberg web pages for current donation methods and addresses. Donations are accepted in a number of other ways including checks, online payments and credit card donations. To donate, please visit: www.gutenberg.org/donate.

Section 5. General Information About Project Gutenberg electronic works

Professor Michael S. Hart was the originator of the Project Gutenberg concept of a library of electronic works that could be freely shared with anyone. For forty years, he produced and distributed Project Gutenberg eBooks with only a loose network of volunteer support.

Project Gutenberg eBooks are often created from several printed editions, all of which are confirmed as not protected by copyright in the U.S. unless a copyright notice is included. Thus, we do not necessarily keep eBooks in compliance with any particular paper edition.

Most people start at our website which has the main PG search facility:
www.gutenberg.org.

This website includes information about Project Gutenberg, including how to make donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, how to help produce our new eBooks, and how to subscribe to our email newsletter to hear about new eBooks.
