The test

In his image

All this, before

The creation

Vision

*EYE center of the universe
Whose pupil is the world
Teach us to see the light
Embracing night*

*Between the sunset and the dawn
To see the unicorn
Within that crystal ball
Of pure recall*

*Where time is an iris mirror
A pointillated blur
Of image and of form
Caught in its storm*

*With every moment held inside
The frame of canvas mind
Forever captive, stilled,
Motion fulfilled*

*Where memory and dream evoke
The future like a window
Made of stained glass, one cast
From the fractured past*

*As retina and perspective
For our darkness, the bridge
Connecting what has been
With things foreseen*

*Through your bright lens, illuminate
The galaxy that waits
Invisible as trust
In stars and dust*

The Poet's Dream

*WHEN the waters of the sun
Fall on the flaming sea*

*When the desert rose is one
With the snow sipping bee*

*All that our senses now shun
Time's alchemy will free*

*On the coral shores of night
The ghosts of fish shall wake*

*And offer incense to the light
That gives them bread to break*

*From the singing shells with wings
An artist's eye shall peer*

*With violin hands for strings
And a poet's ear*

*Then white silence like a nun
Shall lift her long white sleeves*

*And shake the treasures she has spun
From dreams whose thread she weaves*

*From the surf of mountain caves
A billion stars shall gush*

*And whirl on the windward waves
Through the darkened hush*

*In the valley of moon trees
The glowing fruit shall sway*

*And rise by twos and threes
Above the cradled day*

*On the jungle's peaceful floor
Lion and deer shall meet*

*A crucifix made of ore
Between their kneeling feet*

All of this and more shall be Within that shining net

*When time redeems mortality
From its mortal debt*

Then magnet age shall point its north Towards youth's eternal pole

*That alpha star in the fourth
Dimension of the soul*

*Where love curves back in heartspace
Within its chrysalis*

*And gravitates the imaged face
Of the all creating this*

*From the light years of the past
The undeflected force*

*Shall bind the future fast
To God's own source*

*As cause and word unending
Repeat the rhythmic plan*

*Of universe transcending
Man's origin as man*

Time Will Tell

*WHERE fireflies are stars
And the evening sky a sea,
There you will find me, far
From the leveling demands
That leveled you and me.*

*When distant mountains bend
Like deep swells toward the shore,
Then you will see the ends
For which I built my dikes Against the lowly roar.*

*Though breath was all I owned
To force my heart to climb,
Though words were all the stones
I had to seal my mind,
You will know why, in time.*

Afternoon of a Journey

*THERE will never be another,
That day was forever.*

*We dove through tropic noon
Into a green sky. The palms stood
Quiet, still, their fronds
Like swollen waves about
To break, transparent, lime limned
And streaked from base to rim
With icy light.*

*Lungs gilled and arms finned wide,
We slipped into the pale
Of that dry sea, following downrays
Until we reached the cool
Of silence, a sandpaved lagoon
Upholding its weight of time
Under trees that climbed.*

*Perched on a log, we scanned
The currents, the drifting shaft
Of shadows, instinctively alert
To armadillo's crawl, the stir
Of something red,
The eye of an iguana met...
Ourselves. Perceiving*

*We were not alone in breathing,
Being witness,
As well as evidence
In that primal air,*

*How all of us shared
In the serene of a sunless glow
Which waterless flowed.*

*Gently, we moved along a path
That opened as we passed,
Whispering our affirmations
To those secret ones
Who flickered and flashed,
Carrying our echoes back
From near, then far, far off.*

*And slowly, the silence arced,
Leaped high—and broke,
With parrots in the undertow
As the waves rolled over
And the green tide flooded
The forest floor, whirling,
Swirling a world set free.*

*Now all of us were cells
In a chemistry of shells
Older than snails,
Plankton or sunbaked clay,
Fellow creatures in an afternoon
As joyous as a long lost tune
About to be remembered.*

*Oh all of us there
In that drenched, tropic green
Began to sing and sing,
Shedding our ties
With root and rock and sky,
As we found our song
In our living bond.*

*Pod and leaf, mouth and beak,
Whatever lived and breathed*

*That sudden afternoon,
Sang wonder through the woods,
As we heard and discovered
Each in the other
Without a word.*

*Until a metallic bird,
On roaring wings,
Crashed our song beneath
The hammered surf,
As it thundered,
Like lightning in a storm,
Fearfully born.*

*Then all of us
Grew motionless
In the sculptured undersea
Of silenced green,
Knowing, as we did again,
The thing forbidden and forgotten
In a world of men.*

*There will never be another,
That day was forever.*

The Cave

*DROP by drop
The earth is born
A billion years
From dark to dawn*

*Drop by drop
As rivers flow*

*Past sunless cliffs
No wind has known*

*Where no grass blows
And no birds sing
There time drips slow
And patient clings*

*Drop by drop
Till waterfalls
Are turned to stone*

*Here new stars form
And mountains rise
Clear of the storms
That twist the sky*

*Drop by drop
While caverns tall
Carve crystal bones*

*What dream lies walled
Within this night
What shape shall crawl
Up to the light*

*Drop by drop
As silence grows
Inside its vault
Of carbon snow*

*When glaciers halt
Before no zones
When both the poles
At last are one*

*Drop by drop
The dawn shall come*

*A billion years
From cave to sun*

The Test

*HE who would climb the heights of tone
And scale the peaks beyond the listening ear,
Must first walk over water
And learn to stand on air, alone.*

*He who would swim the waves of light
And dive past shores into a sunless glow,
Must first merge with his shadow
And melt through solid glass, like night.*

*Where eyes are fins and sound is leap,
The rhythmic force performs its own ballet;
When dreams are fired in clay,
They burn a path through timeless sleep.*

In His Image

WHO has not looked into the heart of night and seen the darker light, concealed like spectral stars beyond the rim of Mars,

Who has not listened to the sound of mind and heard the silence wind, like rivers underground out to a sea profound,

has only eyes and ears.

Who has not reached above the clouded span and touched the cosmic plan, upheld like spider's climb upon the spokes of time,

*Who has not followed the labyrinthine thread
And crushed the monstrous dread, that other men may gleam
the glory of the dream,*

has only hands and feet.

Who has not lived within his hour of space and etched it with his face, as portrait of the sun reflects the solar one,

is only shape and dust.

All This, Before

*I RACED, I rushed, I ran, to catch the empty hand of time—
Before the wind, the blowing wind,
This breathless gift.*

*I willed, I worked, I wept,
To melt the frozen face of time—*

*Before the sun, the burning sun,
This frenzied bone.*

*I drank, I danced, I dared,
To tempt the stony foot of time—
Before the rain, the driving rain,
This raptured flame.*

*I leaped, I laughed, I loved,
To ease the burdened heart of time—
Before the dust, the settling dust,
This flesh and blood.*

The Creation

*OUT of the white and the blue
Out of the mist and the ice
Out of the wind and the flame
The creature came.*

*With eyes as brilliant as the light
With ears as lucid as the sound
With feet as sudden as the thought
The creature caught*

*A breath from the yawning sky
A drop from the nodding sea
A root from the sleeping earth
And from their birth*

*Measured the length of the seasons
Balanced the rhythm of the tides
Secured the growing of the seed
And woke the need*

*Of the dream inside the egg
Of the thirst within the cell
Of the shape beneath the bone
Then took a stone*

*And breaking the silent void
And loosing the swollen stream
And cutting the golden thread
The creature said:*

*Here on this dot of bounded space
Here in this point of moving time
Here with this seal of life and death
I fix my breath*

*That all the works of my hands
That all the passions of my heart
That all the wonders of my brain
Shall here remain.*

*I, Gilgamesh, Rama, Adam
I, Phoenician, Saxon, Mayan
I, Peasant, Leader, Architect
By this reject*

*Perpetual day or night
Everlasting rain or drought
Eternal struggle or peace
Until words cease*

*Between infinite men and gods
Between partisan young and old
Between ultimate right and wrong
For each is strong.*

*Let calendar be as record
Let monument be as witness*

Let history here determine Which shall win.

*Then the sky hurled its lightning
Then the sea roared its thunder
Then the earth reared its fire
To show their ire*

*At the vanity of the ego
At the rashness of the sower
At the folly of the dreamer
And redeemer*

*Who would thus destroy the sun
Who would thus defy the flood
Who would thus pollute the air
And showed him there*

*The blinding vision of the truth
The deafening echoes of the damned
The crashing madness of the plan
That he began.*

*And when he saw the faces
And when he heard the weeping
And when he knew the sickness
That men possess*

*As mortal children of ambition
As transient strangers of desire
As fatal victims of perfection
Released by none*

*From the essence of the grape
From the music of the reed
From the incense of the bowl
The creature stole*

*The power of forgetfulness
The illusion of contentment
The promise of exaltation
Making them one*

*That the lost and unfulfilled
That the laughter and the pain
That the glory and defeat
Be complete*

*Seeing how frail is the candle
Hearing how brief is the song
Knowing how soon is the temple
Darkened and still.*

*Then slipped the root from his feet
Then poured the sound from his ears
Then blew the light from his eyes
And went more wise*

*Into the white and the blue
Into the mist and the ice
Into the wind and the flame
The way he came.*

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Elizabeth Bartlett (1911-1994) was an American poet and writer noted for her lyrical and symbolic poetry, creation of the new twelve-tone form of poetry, founder of the international non-profit organization Literary Olympics, Inc., and known as an author of fiction, essays, reviews, translations, and as an editor. She is not to be confused with the British poet (1924-2008) of the same name. For more detailed information about her life, work, and critical commendations, see the Wikipedia article http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Elizabeth Bartlett %28American poet%29.

Bartlett's most notable achievements include:

- Creation of a new form of poetry, "the twelve-tone poem," adapting Arnold Schonberg's musical system to the verbal, accented sounds of language. Called "the Emily Dickinson of the 20th Century," her concise lyrics have been praised by poets, musicians, and composers alike.
- Publication of 16 books of poetry, a group of edited anthologies, and more than 1,000 poems, short stories, and essays published, for example, in Harpers, Virginia Quarterly, New York Times, North American Review, Saturday Review, Prairie Schooner, and in numerous international collections.
- Recipient of many fellowships, grants and awards, including NEA, PEN Syndicate, fellowships at the Huntington Hartford Foundation, Montalvo, Yaddo, MacDowell, Dorland Mt. Colony and Ragdale, travel grants, and honors for introducing literature as part of the Olympics.

- Founder of the Literary Olympics, to restore literature, specifically poetry, as a vital part of the Olympics as it once had been in ancient Greece.

Bartlett's poetry came to the attention of leading poets, writers, and critics as diverse as Marianne Moore, Wallace Stevens, Mark Van Doren, Conrad Aiken, Allen Tate, Alfred Kreymborg, Robert Hillyer, Louis Untermeyer, Rolfe Humphries, John Ciardi, Richard Eberhart, Richard Wilbur, Maxine Kumin, Robert M. Hutchins, Kenneth Rexroth, William Stafford, and others. Over the years, Bartlett maintained an active and extensive correspondence with eminent poets, writers, and literary critics; evident throughout this collected literary correspondence are strong statements attesting to the importance of her work.

Behold This Dreamer was published in Mexico City in 1959. By 1961, Jonathan Williams wrote of the book: "Your language is cultivated, employed consistently and lucidly. To my observation, it seems fair to say that you belong with the best of your generation, which I would say includes May Swenson, Denise Levertov, Garrigue, et al." Louis Untermeyer added his voice: "I particularly like your fusion of observation and whimsicality, as well as your avoidance of the poetic stereotypes." Rolfe Humphries was intrigued by Bartlett's poetic techniques: "I enjoyed your poems and admire many...." About Behold This Dreamer, Gustav Davidson wrote: "I enjoyed reading these poems. I was impressed by their precision, clarity, and technical competence." About the same work, critic Paul Jordan-Smith wrote: "Your poems were begotten of a strong, imaginative sense. My congratulations on this beautiful collection."

Elizabeth Bartlett's husband, Paul Alexander Bartlett (1909-1990) was an American writer, artist, and poet. He made a large-scale study of more than 350 Mexican haciendas, published novels, short stories, and poetry, and worked as a fine artist in a variety of media. For more detailed information about his life and work, see the Wikipedia article https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Paul_Alexander_Bartlett.

Elizabeth Bartlett's son, Steven James Bartlett (1945), is a psychologist and philosopher who has published many books and articles in the fields of philosophy and psychology. For more detailed information about his life and work, see the Wikipedia article

Section 4. Information about Donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

Project Gutenberg™ depends upon and cannot survive without widespread public support and donations to carry out its mission of increasing the number of public domain and licensed works that can be freely distributed in machine-readable form accessible by the widest array of equipment including outdated equipment. Many small donations ($1 to $5,000) are particularly important to maintaining tax exempt status with the IRS.

The Foundation is committed to complying with the laws regulating charities and charitable donations in all 50 states of the United States. Compliance requirements are not uniform and it takes a considerable effort, much paperwork and many fees to meet and keep up with these requirements. We do not solicit donations in locations where we have not received written confirmation of compliance. To SEND DONATIONS or determine the status of compliance for any particular state visit www.gutenberg.org/donate.

While we cannot and do not solicit contributions from states where we have not met the solicitation requirements, we know of no prohibition against accepting unsolicited donations from donors in such states who approach us with offers to donate.

International donations are gratefully accepted, but we cannot make any statements concerning tax treatment of donations received from outside the United States. U.S. laws alone swamp our small staff.

Please check the Project Gutenberg web pages for current donation methods and addresses. Donations are accepted in a number of other ways including checks, online payments and credit card donations. To donate, please visit: www.gutenberg.org/donate.

Section 5. General Information About Project Gutenberg electronic works

Professor Michael S. Hart was the originator of the Project Gutenberg concept of a library of electronic works that could be freely shared with anyone. For forty years, he produced and distributed Project Gutenberg eBooks with only a loose network of volunteer support.

Project Gutenberg eBooks are often created from several printed editions, all of which are confirmed as not protected by copyright in the U.S. unless a copyright notice is included. Thus, we do not necessarily keep eBooks in compliance with any particular paper edition.
