THE ASCENT OF MAN.

PRELUDE.

WINGS.

Ascend, oh my Soul, with the wings of the lark ascend!

Soaring away and away far into the blue.
Or with the shrill seagull to the breakers bend, Or with the bee, where the grasses and field-flowers blend,
Drink out of golden cups of the honey-dew.

Ascend, oh my Soul, on the wings of the wind as it blows,
Striking wild organ-blasts from the forest trees,
Or on the zephyr bear love of the rose to the rose,
Or with the hurricane sower cast seed as he goes Limitless ploughing the leagues of the sibilant seas.

Ascend, oh my Soul, on the wings of the choral strain,
Invisible tier above tier upbuilding sublime;
Note as it scales after note in a rhythmical chain Reaching from chaos and welter of struggle and pain,
Far into vistas empyreal receding from time.

Ascend! take wing on the thoughts of the Dead, my Soul,

Breathing in colour and stone, flashing through epic and song:
Thoughts that like avalanche snows gather force as they roll,
Mighty to fashion and knead the phenomenal throng
Of generations of men as they thunder along.

THE ASCENT OF MAN.

PART I.

As compressed within the bounded shell Boundless Ocean seems to surge and swell, Haunting echoes of an infinite whole Moan and murmur through Man's finite soul.

CHAUNTS OF LIFE.

I.

Struck out of dim fluctuant forces and shock of electrical vapour, Repelled and attracted the atoms flashed mingling in union primeval,
And over the face of the waters far heaving in limitless twilight Auroral pulsations thrilled faintly, and, striking the blank heaving surface, The measureless speed of their motion now leaped into light on the waters.
And lo, from the womb of the waters, upheaved in volcanic convulsion, Ribbed and ravaged and rent there rose bald peaks and the rocky Heights of confederate mountains compelling the fugitive vapours

To take a form as they passed them and float as clouds through the azure.
Mountains, the broad-bosomed mothers of torrents and rivers perennial, Feeding the rivers and plains with patient persistence, till slowly, In the swift passage of æons recorded in stone by Time's graver, There germ grey films of the lichen and mosses and palm-ferns gigantic,
And jungle of tropical forest fantastical branches entwining,
And limitless deserts of sand and wildernesses primeval.

II.

Lo, moving o'er chaotic waters, Love dawned upon the seething waste, Transformed in ever new avatars
It moved without or pause or haste: Like sap that moulds the leaves of May
It wrought within the ductile clay.

And vaguely in the pregnant deep, Clasped by the glowing arms of light
From an eternity of sleep Within unfathomed gulfs of night
A pulse stirred in the plastic slime Responsive to the rhythm of Time.

Enkindled in the mystic dark Life built herself a myriad forms,

And, flashing its electric spark Through films and cells and pulps and worms,
Flew shuttlewise above, beneath, Weaving the web of life and death.

And multiplying in the ocean, Amorphous, rude, colossal things Lolled on the ooze in lazy motion, Armed with grim jaws or uncouth
wings;
Helpless to lift their cumbering bulk They lurch like some dismasted hulk.

And virgin forest, verdant plain,
The briny sea, the balmy air,
Each blade of grass and globe of rain,
And glimmering cave and gloomy lair Began to swarm with beasts and birds,
With floating fish and fleet-foot herds.

The lust of life's delirious fires Burned like a fever in their blood, Now pricked them on with fierce desires, Now drove them famishing for food,
To seize coy females in the fray,
Or hotly hunted hunt for prey.

And amorously urged them on In wood or wild to court their mate, Proudly displaying in the sun
With antics strange and looks elate,

The vigour of their mighty thews Or charm of million-coloured hues.

There crouching 'mid the scarlet bloom,
 Voluptuously the leopard lies,
And through the tropic forest gloom
 The flaming of his feline eyes Stirs with intoxicating stress
The pulses of the leopardess.

Or two swart bulls of self-same age Meet furiously with thunderous roar,
And lash together, blind with rage, And clanging horns that fain would gore
Their rival, and so win the prize
Of those impassive female eyes.

Or in the nuptial days of spring,
 When April kindles bush and brier, Like rainbows that have taken wing,
 Or palpitating gems of fire, Bright butterflies in one brief day Live but to love and pass away.

And herds of horses scour the plains, The thickets scream with bird and beast
The love of life burns in their veins,
 And from the mightiest to the least Each preys upon the other's life In inextinguishable strife.

War rages on the teeming earth;
 The hot and sanguinary fight Begins with each new creature's birth:

A dreadful war where might is right;
Where still the strongest slay and win,
Where weakness is the only sin.

There is no truce to this drawn battle,
Which ends but to begin again;
The drip of blood, the hoarse death-rattle,
The roar of rage, the shriek of pain,
Are rife in fairest grove and dell, Turning earth's flowery haunts to hell.

A hell of hunger, hatred, lust, Which goads all creatures here below,
Or blindworm wriggling in the dust,
Or penguin in the Polar snow:
A hell where there is none to save,
Where life is life's insatiate grave.

And in the long portentous strife, Where types are tried even as by fire,
Where life is whetted upon life And step by panting step mounts higher,
Apes lifting hairy arms now stand And free the wonder-working hand.

They raise a light, aërial house On shafts of widely branching
trees,
Where, harboured warily, each spouse
May feed her little ape in peace, Green cradled in his heaven-roofed bed,

Leaves rustling lullabies o'erhead.

And lo, 'mid reeking swarms of earth Grim struggling in the primal wood,
A new strange creature hath its birth: Wild—stammering—nameless—shameless—nude;
Spurred on by want, held in by fear,
He hides his head in caverns drear.

Most unprotected of earth's kin,
His fight for life that seems so vain Sharpens his senses, till within The twilight mazes of his brain, Like embryos within the womb, Thought pushes feelers through the gloom.

And slowly in the fateful race
It grows unconscious, till at length
The helpless savage dares to face The cave-bear in his grisly strength;
For stronger than its bulky thews
He feels a force that grows with use.

From age to dumb unnumbered age,
By dim gradations long and slow,
He reaches on from stage to stage, Through fear and famine, weal and woe
And, compassed round with danger, still Prolongs his life by craft and skill.

With cunning hand he shapes the flint,

He carves the horn with strange device,
He splits the rebel block by dint
Of effort—till one day there flies
A spark of fire from out the stone: Fire which shall make the world his own.

III.

And from the clash of warring Nature's strife Man day by day wins his imperilled life;
For, goaded on by want, he hunts the roe, Chases the deer, and lays the wild boar low.
In his rude boat made of the hollow
trees
He drifts adventurous on the unoared
seas,
And, as he tilts upon the rocking tide, Catches the glistening fish that flash and glide Innumerable through the waters wide.
He'll fire the bush whose flames shall help him fel
The trunks to prop his roof, where he may dwell
Beside the bubbling of a crystal well, Sheltered from drenching rains or noxious glare
When the sun holds the zenith.
Delving there,

His cumbered wife, whose multifarious toil Seems never done, breaks the rich virgin soil,
And in the ashes casts the casual seeds
Of feathered grass and efflorescent weeds;
When, as with thanks, the bounteous earth one morn Returns lush blades of life-sustaining corn.
And while the woman digs and plants, and twines
To precious use long reeds and pliant bines,
He—having hit the brown bird on the wing,
And slain the roe—returns at evening,
And gives his spoil unto her, to prepare
The succulent, wildwood scented, simmering fare, While with impatient sniffs and eager-eyed His bronze-limbed children gather to his side.
And, when the feast is done, all take their ease, Lulled by the sing-song of the evening breeze
And murmuring undertones of manyfoliated trees; While here and there through rifts of green the sky

Casts its blue glance like an all-seeing eye.
But though by stress of want and poignant need Man tames the wolf-sprung hound and rearing steed, Pens up the ram, and yokes the deep-horned ox,
And through wide pastures shepherds woolly flocks;
Though age by age, through discipline of toil, Man wring a richer harvest from the soil,
And in the grim and still renewing fight Slays loathly worms and beasts of gruesome might By the close-knitted bondage of the clan, Which adding up the puny strength of man Makes thousands move with one electric thrill
Of simultaneous, energetic will;
Yet still behind the narrow borderland Where in security he seems to stand, His apprehensive life is compassed round
By baffling mysteries he cannot sound,
Where, big with terrors and calamities,
The future like a foe in ambush lies:
A muffled foe, that seems to watch and wait

With the Medusa eyes of stony fate.

Great floods o'erwhelm and ruin his ripening grain,
His boat is shattered by the hurricane,
From the rent cloud the tameless lightning springs—Heaven's flame-mouthed dragon with a roar of wings—And fires his hut and simple household things;
Until before his horror-stricken eyes
The stored-up produce of long labour lies,
A heap of ashes smoking 'neath the skies.—
Or now the pastures where his flocks did graze, Parched, withered, shrivelled by the imminent blaze
Of the great ball of fire that glares above,
Glow dry like iron heated in a stove; Turning upon themselves, the tortured sheep,
With blackening tongues, drop heap on gasping heap,
Their rotting flesh sickens the wind that moans
And whistles poisoned through their chattering bones;
While the thin shepherd, staring sick and gaunt,
Will search the thorns for berries, or yet haunt
The stony channels of some river-bed

Where filtering fresh perchance a liquid thread
Of water may run clear.—Now dark o'erhead, Thickening with storm, the wintry clouds will loom,
And wrap the land in weeds of mournful gloom; Shrouding the sun and every lesser
Till earth with all her aging woods grows white,
And hurrying streams stop fettered in their flight.
Then famished beasts freeze by the frozen lakes,
And thick as leaves dead birds bestrew the brakes;
And, cowering blankly by the flickering flame, Man feels a presence without form or name,
When by the bodies of his speechless dead In barbarous woe he bows his stricken head.
Then in the hunger of his piteous love He sends his thought, winged like a carrier dove—
Through the unanswering silence void and vast,
Whence from dim hollows blows an icy blast—
To bring some sign, some little sign at last,
From his lost chiefs—the beautiful, the brave—

Vanished like bubbles on a breaking wave, Lost in the unfathomed darkness of the grave.
When, lo, behold beside him in the night,— Softly beside him, like the noiseless
Of moonbeams moving o'er the glimmering floor That come unbidden through the bolted door,— The lonely sleeper sees the lost one stand
Like one returned from some dim, distant land, Bending towards him with his outstretched hand.
But when he fain would grasp it in his own,
He melts into thin moonshine and is gone—
A spirit now, who on the other shore Of death hunts happily for evermore.

A Son of Life, but dogged, while he draws breath,
By her inseparable shadow—death,
Man, feeble Man, whom unknown Fates appal, With prayer and praise seeks to propitiate all The spirits, who, for good or evil plight, Bless him in victory or in sickness smite.

Those are his Dead who, wrapped in grisly shrouds,
Now ride phantasmal on the rushing clouds, Souls of departed chiefs whose livid forms
He sees careering on the reinless storms, Wild, spectral huntsmen who tumultuously,
With loud halloo and shrilly echoing cry, Follow the furious chase, with the whole pack
Of shadowy hounds fierce yelping in the track Of wolves and bears as shadowy as the hosts
Who lead once more as unsubstantial ghosts
Their lives of old as restlessly they fly
Across the wildernesses of the sky.
When the wild hunt is done, shall they not rest
Their heads upon some swan-white maiden's breast,
And quaff their honeyed mead with godlike zest
In golden-gated Halls whence they may see
The earth and marvellous secrets of the Sea Whereon the clouds will lie with grey wings furled,
And in whose depths, voluminously curled,

The serpent looms whose girth engirds the world?
Far, far above now in supernal power Those spirits rule the sunshine and the shower!
How shall he win their favour; yea, how move
To pity the unpitying gods above, The Dæmon rulers of life's fitful dream,
Who sway men's destinies, and still would seem To treat them lightly as a game of chance,
The sport of whim and blindfold circumstance—
The irresponsible, capricious gods, So quick to please or anger; whose sharp rods Are storms and lightnings launched from cloven skies;
Who feast upon the shuddering victim's cries,
The smell of blood, and human sacrifice.
But ever as Man grows they grow with him;
Terrific, cruel, gentle, bright, or dim, With eyes of dove-like mercy, hands of wrath, Procession-like, they hover o'er his path
And, changing with the gazer, borrow
From their rapt devotee's adoring sight.

And Ormuzd, Ashtaroth, Osiris, Baal

Love spending gods and gods of blood and wail—

Look down upon their suppliant from the skies

With his own magnified, responsive eyes.

For Man, from want and pressing hunger freed,

Begins to feel another kind of need,
And in his shaping brain and through his eyes

Nature, awakening, sees her blue-arched skies;

The Sun, his life-begetter, isled in space;

The Moon, the Measurer of his span of days;

The immemorial stars who pierce his night

With inklings of things vast and infinite.

All shows of heaven and earth that move and pass

Take form within his brain as in a glass.

The tidal thunder of the sea now roars And breaks symphonious on a hundred shores;

The fitful flutings of the vagrant breeze

Strike gusts of sound from virgin forest trees;

White leaping waters of wild cataracts fall

From crag and jag in lapses musical,

And streams meandering amid daisied leas Throb with the pulses of tumultuous
 seas.
From hills and valleys smoking mists arise, Steeped in pale gold and amethystine dyes.
The land takes colour from him, and the flowers Laugh in his path like sun-dyed April showers.
The moving clouds in calm or thunderstorm,
All shows of things in colour, sound, or form Moulded mysteriously, are freshly wrought Within the fiery furnace of his thought.

IV.

 No longer Nature's thrall, Man builds the city wall That shall withstand her league of levelling storms;
 He builds tremendous tombs Where, hid in hoarded glooms,
His dead defy corruption with her worms:
High towers he rears and bulks of glowing stone,

Where the king rules upon a golden throne.

Creature of hopes and fears,
Of mirth and many tears,
He makes himself a thousand costly altars, Whence smoke of sacrifice, Fragrant with myrrh and spice, Ascends to heaven as the flame leaps and falters; Where, like a king above the Cloud control, God sits enthroned and rules Man's subject soul.

Yet grievous here below And manifold Man's woe; Though he can stay the flood and bind the waters,
His hand he shall not stay That bids him sack and slay And turn the waving fields to fields of slaughters;
And, as he reaps War's harvest grim and gory, Commits a thousand crimes and calls it glory.

Vast empires fall and rise,
As when in sunset skies
The monumental clouds lift flashing towers
With turrets, spires, and bars
Lit by confederate stars

Till the bright rack dissolves in flying
showers:
Kingdoms on kingdoms have their fleeting day, Dazzle the conquered world, and pass away.

In golden Morning lands
The blazing crowns change hands,
From mystic Ind to fleshly Babylon, Assyria, Palestine
Armed with her book divine,
Dread Persia whose fleet chariots charged and won Pale Continents where prostrate monarchs kneel
Before the flash of her resistless steel.

As one by one they start With proudly beating heart Fast in the furious, fierce-contested race, Where neck to neck they
Deliriously to gain
The winning post of power, the meed of praise;
Some drop behind, fall, or are trampled down While the proud victor grasps the laurel crown.

Not only great campaigns Shall glorify their reigns,

But high-towered cities wondrous to behold,
 With gardens poised in air Like bowers of Eden fair, With brazen gates and shrines of beaten gold,
And Palace courts whose constellated lights
Shine on black slaves and cringing satellites.

 Eclipsing with her fate
 Each power and rival state With her unnumbered stretch of generations,
 A sand-surrounded isle Fed by the bounteous Nile, Egypt confronts Sahara—sphinx of nations; Taught by the floods that make or mar her shore,
She scans the stars and hoards mysterious lore.

 Hers are imperial halls With strangely scripted walls
And long perspectives of memorial places, Where the hushed daylight glows
 On mute colossal rows Of clawed wild beasts featured with female faces,
And realmless kings inane whose stony eyes

Have watched the hour-glass of the centuries.

There in the rainless sands
The toil of captive hands, That aye must do as their taskmaster bids, Through years of dusty
Brick by slow brick shall raise
The incarnate pride of kings—the Pyramids—Linked with some name synonymous with slaughter
Time has effaced like a name writ in water.

For ever with fateful shocks,
Roar as of hurtling rocks, Start fresh embattled hosts with flags unfurled,
To meet on battle-fields With clash of spears and shields, Widowing the world of men to win the world:
The hissing air grows dark with iron rain,
And groans the earth beneath her sheaves of slain.

Triumphant o'er them all, See crowns and sceptres

Before the arms of iron-soldered legions;
As Capitolian Rome
Across the salt sea foam Orders her Cæsars to remotest regions: From silver Spain and Albion's clouded seas
To the fair shrines and marble mines of Greece.

Pallas unmatched in war,
To her triumphal car Rome chains fallen despots and discrownèd queens
With many a rampant beast, Birds from the gorgeous East,
And wool-haired Nubians torn from tropic scenes;
There huge barbarians from Druidic woods Tower ominous o'er the humming multitudes;

For still untamed and free In loathed captivity, Their spirits bend not to the conqueror's yoke, Though for a Roman sight
They must in mimic fight Give wounds in play and deal Death's mortal stroke, While round the arena rings the fierce applause Voluptuous, as their bubbling life-blood flows

In streams of purple rain
From hecatombs of slain Saluting Cæsar still with failing breath,
But in their dying souls Undying hate, which rolls From land to land the avalanche of Death,
That, gathering volume as it sweeps along, Pours down the Alps throng on unnumbered throng.

From northern hills and plains
Storm-lashed by driving rains, From moorland wastes and depths of desolate wood,
From many an icebound shore,
The human torrents pour, Horde following upon horde as flood on flood, Avengers of the slain they come, they come,
And break in thunder on the walls of Rome.

A trembling people waits As, surging through its gates, Break the fierce Goths with trumpet-blasts of doom;
And many a glorious shrine Begins to flare and shine,

And many a palace flames up through the gloom, Kindled like torches by relentless wrath
To light the Spoiler on destruction's path.

Yea, with Rome's ravished
walls,
The old world tottering falls
And crumbles into ruin wide and vast;
The Empire seems to rock As with an earthquake's shock,
And vassal provinces look on aghast;
As realms are split and nation rent from nation,
The globe seems drifting to annihilation.

V.

"Peace on earth and good will unto Men!" Came the tidings borne o'er wide dominions;
The glad tidings thrilled the world as when Spring comes fluttering on the west wind's pinions,
When her voice is heard Warbling through each bird,
And a new-born hope

Throbs through all things infinite in scope.

"Peace on earth and good will!" came the word Of the Son of Man, the Man of Sorrow—
But the peace turned to a flaming sword, Turned to woe and wailing on the morrow
When with gibes and scorns, Crowned with barren thorns, Gashed and crucified,
On the Cross the tortured Jesus died.

And the world, once full of flower-hung shrines, Now forsakes old altars for the new, Zeus grows faint and Venus' star declines As Jehovah glorifies the Jew,
He whom—lit with awe—God-led Moses saw,
Graving with firm hand In his people's heart his Lord's command.

Holding Hells and Heavens in either hand Comes the priest and comes the wild-eyed prophet, Tells the people of some happier land,

Terrifies them with a burning Tophet; Gives them creeds for bread
And warm roof o'erhead, Gives for life's delight Passports to the kingdom, spirit-bright.

And the people groaning everywhere
Hearken gladly to the wondrous story, How beyond this life of toil and care
They shall lead a life of endless glory:
Where beyond the dim Earth-mists Seraphim, Love-illuminated, wait—Hierarchies of angels at heaven's gate.

Let them suffer while they live
below,
Bear in silence weariness and pain;
For the heavier is their earthly woe, Verily the heavenlier is their gain In the mansions where Sorrow and despair, Yea, all moan shall cease With the moan of immemorial
seas.

And to save their threatened souls from sin,
Save them from the world, the flesh, the devil,

Men and Women break from bonds of kin
And in cloistered cell draw bar on evil, Worship on their knees Sacred Images,
And all Saints above, The Madonna, mystic Rose of love.

Mystic Rose of Maiden
Motherhood,
Moon of Hearts immaculately mild, Beaming o'er the turbulent times and rude
With the promise of her blessèd Child:
Whom pale Monks adore, Pining evermore
For the heaven of love Which their homesick lives are dying of.

But the flame of mystical desires Turns to fury fiercer than a leopard's, Holy fagots blaze with kindling fires
As the priests, the people's careful shepherds, In Heaven's awful name, Set the pile on flame Where, for Conscience' sake, Heretics burn chaunting at the stake.

Subterranean secrets of the prison,

Throbs of anguish in the crushing cell, Torture-chambers of the Inquisition Are the Church's antidotes to Hell.
Better rack them here, Mutilate and sear,
Than their souls should go To the place of everlasting woe.

And a lurid universal night, Lit by quenchless fires for unquenched sages, Thick with spectral broods that shun the light, Looms impervious o'er the stifled ages
Where the blameless wise Fall a sacrifice,
Fall as fell of old
The unspotted firstlings of the fold.

And the violent feud of clashing creeds Shatters empires and breaks realms asunder;
Cities tremble, sceptres shake like reeds
At the swift bolts of the Papal thunder;
Yea, the bravest quail, Cast from out the pale Of all Christendom
By the dread anathemas of Rome.

And like one misled by marish gleams

When he hears the shrill cock's note of warning, Europe, starting from its trance of dreams,
Sees the first streak of the clear-eyed morning
 As it broadening stands Over ravaged lands Where mad nations are Locked in grip of fratricidal war.

Castles burn upon the vine-clad knolls, Huts glow smouldering in the trampled meadows;
And a hecatomb of martyred souls Fills a queenly town with wail of widows
 In those branded hours When red-guttering
 showers
 Splash by courts and stews
To the Bells of Saint Bartholomew's.

Seed that's sown upon the wanton wind Shall be harvested in whirlwind rages,
For revenge and hate bring forth their kind,
And black crime must ever be the wages
 Of a nation's crime
 Time transmits to time, Till the score of years

Is wiped out in floods of staunchless tears.

Yea, the anguish in a people's life
May have eaten out its heart of pity, Bred in scenes of scarlet sin and strife,
Heartless splendours of a haughty city;
 Dark with lowering fate,
 At the massive gate
 Of its kings it may Stand and knock with tragic hand one day.

For the living tomb gives up its dead, Bastilles yawn, and chains are rent
 asunder,
 Little children now and hoary head, Man and maiden, meet in joy and wonder;
 Throng on radiant throng, Brave and blithe and strong,
 Gay with pine and palm, Fill fair France with freedom's thunder-psalm.

Free and equal—rid of king and priest—
The rapt nation bids each neighbour nation
 To partake the sacramental feast
And communion of the Federation:
 And electrified

Masses, far and wide, Thrill to hope and start Vibrating as with one common heart.

From the perfumed South of amorous France With her wreath of orange bloom and myrtle,
From old wizard woods of lost Romance Soft with wail of wind and voice of turtle,
From the roaring sea
Of grey Normandy,
And the rich champagnes Where the vine gads o'er Burgundian plains;

From the banks of the blue arrowy Rhone,
And from many a Western promontory,
From volcanic crags of cloven stone Crowned with castles ivy-green in story;
From gay Gascon coasts March fraternal hosts, Equal hosts and free,
Pilgrims to the shrine of liberty.

But king calls on king in wild alarms, Troops march threatening through the vales and passes,

Barefoot Faubourgs at the cry to arms
On the frontier hurl their desperate masses:
The deep tocsin's boom Fills the streets with gloom,
And with iron hand
The red Terror guillotines the land.

For the Furies of the sanguine past Chase fair Freedom, struggling torn and baffled,
Till infuriate—turned to bay at last

Rolled promiscuous on the common scaffold, Vengeful she shall smite
A Queen's head bleached white,
And a courtesan's Whose light hands once held the reins of France.

She shall smite and spare not—yea, her own,
Her fair sons so pure from all pollution,
With their guiltless life-blood must atone
To the goddess of the Revolution; Dying with a song
On their lips, her young Ardent children end, Meeting death even as one meets a friend.

And her daughter, in heroic shame,

Turned to Freedom's Moloch statue, crying:
"Liberty, what crimes done in thy name!"
Spake, and with her Freedom's self seemed dying
As she bleeding lay
'Neath Napoleon's sway: Europe heard her knell
When on Waterloo the Empire fell.

VI.

Woe, woe to Man and all his hapless brood!
No rest for him, no peace is to be found;
He may have tamed wild beasts and made the ground Yield corn and wine and every kind of food;
He may have turned the ocean to his steed, Tutored the lightning's elemental speed
To flash his thought from Ætna to Atlantic;
He may have weighed the stars and spanned the stream,
And trained the fiery force of panting steam
To whirl him o'er vast steppes, and heights gigantic:
But the storm-lashed world of feeling—

Love, the fount of tears unsealing, Choruses of passion pealing—Lust, ambition, hatred, awe, Clashing loudly with the law,
 But the phantasms of the mind Who shall master, yea, who bind!

What help is there without, what hope within Of rescue from the immemorial strife?
What will redeem him from the spasm of life,
With all its devious ways of shame and sin?
What will redeem him from ancestral greeds, Grey legacies of hate and hoar misdeeds,
Which from the guilty past Man doth inherit—
The past that is bound up with him, and part Of the pulsations of his inmost
 heart,
And of the vital motions of his spirit?
Ages mazed in tortuous errors, Ghostly fears, and haunting terrors, Minds bewitched that served as mirrors
For the foulest fancies bred In a fasting hermit's head, Such as cast a sickly blight
On all shapes of life and light.

Yea, panting and pursued and stung and driven,
The soul of Man flies on in deep distress,
As once across the world's harsh wilderness Latona fled, chased by the Queen of heaven;
Flying across the homeless Universe
From the inveterate stroke of Juno's curse;
On whom even mother earth closed all her portals, Refusing shelter in her cooing bowers,
Or rest upon her velvet couch of flowers,
To the most weary of all weary mortals.
Within whose earth-encumbered form, Like two fair stars entwined in storm,
Or wings astir within the worm, Feeling out for light and air, Struggled that celestial pair, Phœbus of unerring bow,
And chaste Dian fair as snow.

Ah, who will harbour her? Ah, who will save The fugitive from pangs that rack and tear;
Who, finding rest nor refuge anywhere,

Seems doomed to be her unborn offspring's grave;
The seed of Jove, murdered before their birth—
Did not the sea, more merciful than earth, Bid Delos stand—that wandering isle of Ocean—Stand motionless upon the moving foam,
To be the exile's wave-encircled home,
And lull her pains with leaves in drowsy motion,
Where the soft-boughed olive sighing Bends above the woman lying And in spasms of anguish
 crying, Shuddering through her mortal frame,
As from dust is struck the flame Which shall henceforth beam sublime Through the firmament of Time?

Oh, balmy Island bedded on the brine, Harbour of refuge on the tumbling
 seas,
The fabulous bowers of the Hesperides Ne'er bore such blooming gold as glows in thine:

Thou green Oasis on the tides of Time
Where no rude blast disturbs the azure clime;
Thou Paradise whence man can ne'er be driven,
Where, severed from the world-clang and the roar, Still in the flesh he yet may reach that shore Where want is not, and, like the dew from heaven,
There drops upon the fevered soul
The balm of Thought's divine control
And rapt absorption in the whole:
Delivery in the realm of art Of the world-racked human heart—
Forms and hues and sounds that make Life grow lovelier for their sake.

By sheer persistence, strenuous and slow,
The marble yields and, line by flowing line
And curve by curve, begins to swell and shine Beneath the ring of each far-sighted blow:
Until the formless block obeys the hand,

And at the mastering mind's supreme command Takes form and radiates from each limb and feature Such beauty as ne'er bloomed in mortal mould, Whose face, out-smiling centuries, shall hold Perfection's mirror up to 'prentice nature.

Not from out voluptuous ocean Venus rose in balanced motion, Goddess of all bland emotion;
But she leaped a shape of
light,
Radiating love's delight, From the sculptor's brain to be Sphered in immortality.

New spirit-yearnings for a heavenlier mood Call for a love more pitiful and tender,
And 'neath the painter's touch blooms forth in splendour The image of transfigured
motherhood.
All hopes of all glad women who have smiled
In adoration on their first-born child
Here smile through one glad woman made immortal;
All tears of all sad women through whose heart Has pierced the edge of sorrow's sevenfold dart

Lie weeping with her at death's dolorous portal.
For in married hues whose splendour Bodies forth the gloom and grandeur
Of life's pageant, tragic, tender, Common things transfigured flush
By the magic of the brush, As when sun-touched raindrops glow, Blent in one harmonious bow.

But see, he comes, Lord of life's changeable shows,
To whom the ways of Nature are laid bare,
Who looks on heaven and makes the heavens more fair, And adds new sweetness to the perfumed rose;
Who can unseal the heart with all its tears, Marshal loves, hates, hopes, sorrows, joys, and fears In quick procession o'er the passive pages;
Who has given tongue to silent generations
And wings to thought, so that long-mouldered nations May call to nations o'er the abyss of ages:
The poet, in whose shaping brain
Life is created o'er again

With loftier raptures, loftier
pain;
Whose mighty potencies of verse
Move through the plastic Universe,
And fashion to their strenuous will
The world that is creating still.

Do you hear it, do you hear it Soaring up to heaven, or somewhere near it?
From the depths of life upheaving, Clouds of earth and sorrow cleaving,
From despair and death retrieving, All triumphant blasts of sound Lift you at one rhythmic bound
From the thralldom of the ground.

All the sweetness which the glowing Violets waft to west winds blowing,
All the burning love-notes aching, Rills and thrills of rapture shaking Through the hearts that throb to breaking
Of the little nightingales; Mellow murmuring waters streaming Lakeward in long silver trails,

Crooning low while earth lies dreaming
To the moonlight-tangled vales; Swish of rain on half-blown roses Hoarding close their rich perfume,
Which the summer dawn uncloses Sparkling in their morning
bloom;
Convent peals o'er pastoral meadows, Swinging through hay-scented air
When the velvet-footed shadows
Call the hind to evening prayer.
Yea, all notes of woods and highlands;
Sea-fowls' screech round sphinx-like islands Couched among the Hebrides; Cuckoo calls through April
showers,
When the green fields froth with flowers
And with bloom the orchard
trees.
Boom of surges with their hollow Refluent shock from cave to cave,
As the maddening spring tides follow Moonstruck reeling wave o'er wave.
Yea, all rhythms of air and ocean Married to the heart's emotion,
To the interwoven emotion Of the heart for ever turning

In a whirl of bliss and pain, Blending in symphonious strain
All the vague, unearthly yearning
Of the visionary brain.

All life's discords sweetly blending, Heights on heights of being ascending, Harmonies of confluent sound
 Lift you at one rhythmic bound
 From the thralldom of the ground;
Loosen all your bonds of birth, Clogs of sense and weights of earth, Bear you in angelic legions High above terrestrial regions Into ampler ether, where Spirits breathe a finer air, Where upon world altitudes God-intoxicated moods Fill you with beatitudes; Till no longer cramped and bound By the narrow human round,
 All the body's barriers slide,
 Which with cold obstruction hide
The supreme, undying, sole Spirit struggling through the whole,
 And no more a thing apart From the universal heart Liberated by the grace Of man's genius for a space, Human lives dissolve, enlase
 In a flaming world embrace.

A SYMBOL.

Hurrying for ever in their restless flight
The generations of earth's teeming womb Rise into being and lapse into the tomb
Like transient bubbles sparkling in the light;
They sink in quick succession out of sight
Into the thick insuperable gloom Our futile lives in flashing by illuminate—Lightning which mocks the darkness of the night.

Nay—but consider, though we change and die, If men must pass shall Man not still remain?
As the unnumbered drops of summer rain Whose changing particles unchanged on high,
Fixed, in perpetual motion, yet maintain The mystic bow emblazoned on the sky.

TIME'S SHADOW.

Thy life, O Man, in this brief moment
lies:
Time's narrow bridge whereon we darkling stand,
With an infinitude on either hand

Receding luminously from our eyes.
Lo, there thy Past's forsaken Paradise Subsideth like some visionary strand, While glimmering faint, the Future's promised land, Illusive from the abyss, seems fain to rise.

This hour alone Hope's broken pledges mar,
And Joy now gleams before, now in our rear,
Like mirage mocking in some waste afar, Dissolving into air as we draw near.
Beyond our steps the path is sunny-clear,
The shadow lying only where we are.

THE ASCENT OF MAN.

PART II.

"Love is for ever poor, and so far from being delicate and beautiful, as mankind imagined, he is squalid and withered ... homeless and unsandalled; he sleeps without covering before the doors, and in the unsheltered streets."—PLATO.

THE PILGRIM SOUL.

Through the winding mazes of windy streets

Blindly I hurried I knew not whither, Through the dim-lit ways of the brain thus fleets

A fluttering dream driven hither and thither.—
The fitful flare of the moon fled fast, Like a sickly smile now seeming to wither,

Now dark like a scowl in the hurrying blast
As ominous shadows swept over the roofs
Where white as a ghost the scared moonlight had passed.

Curses came mingled with wails and reproofs,
With doors banging to and the crashing of glass,
With the baying of dogs and the clatter of hoofs,

With the rush of the river as, huddling its mass
Of weltering water towards the deep ocean,
'Neath many-arched bridges its eddies did pass.

A hubbub of voices in savage commotion Was mixed with the storm in a chaos of sound,
And thrilled as with ague in shuddering emotion

I fled as the hunted hare flees from the hound.
Past churches whose bells were tumultuously ringing The year in, and clashing in concord around;

Past the deaf walls of dungeons whose curses seemed clinging To the tempest that shivered and shrieked in amazement; Past brightly lit mansions whence music and singing

Came borne like a scent through the close-curtained casement, To vaults in whose shadow wild outcasts were hiding Their misery deep in the gloom of the basement.

By vociferous taverns where women were biding
With features all withered, distorted, aghast;
Some sullenly silent, some brutally chiding,

Some reeling away into gloom as I passed On, on, through lamp-lighted and fountain-filled places, Where throned in rich temples, resplendent and vast,

The Lord of the City is deafened with praises

As worshipping multitudes kneel as of old;
Nor care for the crowds of cadaverous faces,

The men that are marred and the maids that are sold—Inarticulate masses promiscuously jumbled
And crushed 'neath their Juggernaut idol of gold.

Lost lives of great cities bespattered and tumbled, Black rags the rain soaks, the wind whips like a knout, Were crouched in the streets there, and o'er them nigh stumbled

A swarm of light maids as they tripped to some rout.
The silk of their raiment voluptuously hisses
And flaps o'er the flags as loud laughing they flout

The wine-maddened men they ne'er sate with kisses For the pearls and the diamonds that make them more fair, For the flash of large jewels that fire them with blisses,

For the glitter of gold in the gold of their hair.
They smiled and they cozened, their bold eyes shone brightly

And lightened with laughter, as, lit by the flare

Of the wind-fretted gas-lamps, they footed it lightly, Or, closely enlacing and bowered in gloom,
With mouth pressed to hot mouth, their parched lips drain nightly

The wine-cup of pleasure red-sealing their doom.
Brief lives like bright rockets which, aridly glowing,
Fall burnt out to ashes and reel to the tomb.

On, on, loud and louder the rough night was blowing, Shrill singing was mixed with strange cries of despair;
And high overhead the black sky, redly glowing,

Loomed over the city one ominous glare,
As dark yawning funnels from foul throats for ever Belched smoke grimly flaming, which outraged the air.

On, on, by long quays where the lamps in the river Were writhing like serpents that hiss ere they drown,
And poplars with palsy seemed coldly to shiver,

On, on, to the bare desert end of the town.

When lo! the wind stopped like a heart that's ceased beating, And nought but the waters, white foaming and brown,

Were heard as to seaward their currents went fleeting.
But hark! o'er the lull breaks a desolate moan,
Like a little lost lamb's that is timidly bleating

When, strayed from the shepherd, it staggers alone
By tracks which the mountain streams shake with their thunder,
Where death seems to gape from each boulder and stone.

I turned to the murmur: the clouds swept asunder
And wheeled like white sea-gulls around the white moon;
And the moon, like a white maid, looked down in mute wonder

On a boy whose wan eyelids were closed as in swoon.
Half nude on the ground he lay, wasted and chilly,
And torn as with thorns and sharp brambles of June;

His hair, like a flame which at twilight burns stilly,

In a halo of light round his temples was blown,
And his tears fell like rain on a storm-stricken lily

Where he lay on the cold ground, abandoned, alone.
With heart moved towards him in wondering pity,
I tenderly seized his thin hand with my own:

Crying, "Child, say how cam'st thou so far from the city?
How cam'st thou alone in such pitiful plight,
All blood-stained thy feet, with rags squalid and gritty,

A waif by the wayside, unhoused in the night?"
Then rose he and lifted the bright locks, storm driven, Which flamed round his forehead and clouded his sight,

And mournful as meres on a moorland at even His blue eyes flashed wildly through tears as they fell.
Strange eyes full of horror, yet fuller of heaven,

Like eyes that from heaven have looked upon hell.
The eyes of an angel whose depths show where, burning

And lost in the pit, toss the angels that fell.

"Ah," wailed he in tones full of agonized yearning, Like the plaintive lament of a sickening dove
On a surf-beaten shore, whence it sees past returning

The wings of the wild flock fast fading above,
As they melt on the sky-line like foam-flakes in motion:
So sadly he wailed, "I am Love! I am
Love!

"Behold me cast out as weed spurned of the ocean,
Half nude on the bare ground, and covered with scars I perish of cold here;" and, choked with emotion,

Gave a sob: at the low sob a shower of stars Broke shuddering from heaven, pale flaming, and fell Where the mid-city roared as with rumours of wars.

"Be these God's tears?" I cried, as my tears 'gan to well.
"Ah, Love, I have sought thee in temples and towers, In shrines where men pray, and in marts where they sell;

"In tapestried chambers made tropic with flowers, Where amber-haired women, soft breathing of spice, Lay languidly lapped in the gold-dropping showers

"Which gladdened and maddened their amorous eyes.
I have looked for thee vainly in churches where beaming The Saints glowed embalmed in a prism of dyes,

"Where wave over wave the rapt music went streaming With breakers of sound in full anthems elate.
I have asked, but none knew thee, or knew but thy seeming;

"A mask in thy likeness on high seats of state;
And they bound it with gold, and they crowned it with glory, This thing they called love, which was bond slave to hate.

"And they bowed down before it with brown heads and hoary, They worshipped it nightly, loud hymning its praise, While out in the cold blast, none heeding its story,

"Love staggers, an outcast, with lust in its place."

Love shivered and sighed like a reed that is shaken,
And lifting his hunger-nipped face to my face:

"Nay, if of the world I must needs die forsaken,
Say thou wilt not leave me to dearth and despair.
To thy heart, to thy home, let the exile be taken,

"And feed me and shelter——"
"Where, outcast, ah, where?
Like thee I am homeless and spurned of all mortals;
The House of my fathers yawns wide to the air.

"Stalks desolation across the void portals,
Hope lies aghast on the ruinous floor,
The halls that were thronged once with star-browed immortals,

"With gods statue-still o'er the world-whirr and roar,
With fauns of the forest and nymphs of the river,
Are cleft as if lightning had struck to their core.

"The luminous ceilings, where soaring for ever Dim hosts of plumed angels smoked up to the sky, With God-litten faces that yearned to the giver

"As vapours of morning the sun draws on high, Now ravaged with rain hear the hollow winds whistle Through rifts in the rafters which echo their cry.

"Blest walls that were vowed to the Virgin now bristle With weeds of sick scarlet and plague-spotted moss, And stained on the ground, choked with thorn and rank thistle,

"Rots a worm-eaten Christ on a mouldering Cross.
From the House of my fathers, distraught, broken-hearted,
With a pang of immense, irredeemable loss,

"On my wearying pilgrimage blindly
I started To seek thee, oh Love, in high places and low,
And instead of the glories for ever departed,

"To warm my starved life in thy mightier glow.
For I deemed thee a Presence ringed round with all splendour, With a sceptre in hand and a crown on thy brow;

"And, behold, thou art helpless—most helpless to tender

Thy service to others, who needest their care.
Yea, now that I find thee a weak child and slender,

"Exposed to the blast of the merciless
air,
Like a lamb that is shorn, like a leaf
that is shaken,
What, Love, now is left but to die in despair?

"For Death is the mother of all the forsaken,
The grave a strait bed where she rocks them to rest, And sleep, from whose silence they never shall waken,

"The balm of oblivion she sheds on their breast."
Then I seized him and led to the brink
of the river,
Where two storm-beaten seagulls were fluttering west,

And the lamplight in drowning seemed coldly to shiver, And clasping Love close for the leap from on high, Said—"Let us go hence, Love; go home, Love, for ever;

"For life casts us forth, and Man dooms us to die."
As if stung by a snake the Child shuddered and started,

And clung to me close with a passionate cry:

"Stay with me, stay with me, poor, broken-hearted;
Pain, if not pleasure, we two will divide;
Though with the sins of the world I have smarted,

"Though with the shame of the world thou art dyed, Weak as I am, on thy breast I'll recover, Worn as thou art, thou shalt bloom as my bride:

"Bloom as the flower of the World for the lover
Whom thou hast found in a lost little Child."
And as he kissed my lips over and over—

Child now, or Man, was it who thus beguiled?—
Even as I looked on him, Love, waxing slowly,
Grew as a little cloud, floating enised,

Which spreads out aloft in the blue sky till solely It fills the deep ether tremendous in height,
With far-flashing snow-peaks and pinnacles wholly

Invisible, vanishing light within light.
So changing waxed Love—till he towered before me, Outgrowing my lost gods in stature and might.

As he grew, as he drew me, a great awe came o'er me, And stammering, I shook as I questioned his name; But gently bowed o'er me, he soothèd and bore me,

Yea, bore once again to the haunts whence I came,
By dark ways and dreary, by rough roads and gritty,
To the penfolds of sin, to the purlieus of shame.

And lo, as we went through the woeclouded city, Where women bring forth and men labour in vain, Weak Love grew so great in his passion of pity
That all who beheld him were born once again.

SAVING LOVE.

Would we but love what will not pass away!
The sun that on each morning shines as clear

As when it rose first on the world's first year;
The fresh green leaves that rustle on the spray.
The sun will shine, the leaves will be as gay When graves are full of all our hearts held dear,
When not a soul of those who loved us here,
Not one, is left us—creatures of decay.

Yea, love the Abiding in the Universe Which was before, and will be after us.
Nor yet for ever hanker and vainly cry
For human love—the beings that change or die; Die—change—forget: to care so is a curse, Yet cursed we'll be rather than not care thus.

NIRVANA.

Divest thyself, O Soul, of vain desire!
Bid hope farewell, dismiss all coward fears;
Take leave of empty laughter, emptier tears,
And quench, for ever quench, the wasting fire Wherein this heart, as in a funeral pyre,

Aye burns, yet is consumed not.
Years on years Moaning with memories in thy maddened ears—Let at thy word, like refluent waves, retire.

Enter thy soul's vast realm as Sovereign Lord,
And, like that angel with the flaming sword,
Wave off life's clinging hands.
Then chains will fall From the poor slave of self's hard tyranny—
And Thou, a ripple rounded by the sea,
In rapture lost be lapped within the All.

MOTHERHOOD.

From out the font of being, undefiled, A life hath been upheaved with struggle and pain;
Safe in her arms a mother holds again
That dearest miracle—a new-born child.
To moans of anguish terrible and wild
As shrieks the night-wind through an ill-shut pane—Pure heaven succeeds; and after fiery strain

Victorious woman smiles serenely mild.

Yea, shall she not rejoice, shall not her frame Thrill with a mystic rapture! At this birth,
The soul now kindled by her vital flame
May it not prove a gift of priceless worth?
Some saviour of his kind whose starry fame Shall bring a brightness to the darkened earth.

THE ASCENT OF MAN.

PART III.

"Our spirits have climbed high
By reason of the passion of our grief,
And from the top of sense, looked over sense
To the significance and heart of
Rather than things themselves."

E. B. BROWNING.

THE LEADING OF SORROW.

Through a twilight land, a moaning region, Thick with sighs that shook the trembling air, Land of shadows whose dim crew was legion,
Lost I hurried, hunted by despair.
Quailed my heart like an expiring
splendour,
Fitful flicker of a faltering fire, Smitten chords which tempeststricken render Rhythms of anguish from a breaking lyre.

Love had left me in a land of shadows, Lonely on the ruins of delight, And I grieved with tearless grief of
widows, Moaned as orphans homeless in the night.
Love had left me knocking at Death's portal—Shone his star and vanished from my sky—
And I cried: "Since Love, even Love, is mortal,
Take, unmake, and break me; let me die."

Then, the twilight's grisly veils dividing, Phantom-like there stole one o'er the plain,
Wavering mists for ever round it gliding

Hid the face I strove to scan in vain.
Spake the veiled one: "Solitary weeper,
'Mid the myriad mourners thou'rt but one:
Come, and thou shalt see the awful reaper, Evil, reaping all beneath the sun."

On my hand the clay-cold hand did fasten As it murmured—"Up and follow me;
O'er the thickly peopled earth we'll hasten, Yet more thickly packed with misery."
And I followed: ever in the shadow Of that looming form I fared along; Now o'er mountains, now through wood and meadow, Or through cities with their surging throng.

With none other for a friend or fellow Those relentless footsteps were my guide
To the sea-caves echoing with the hollow
Immemorial moaning of the tide.
Laughed the sunlight on the living
ocean,
Danced and rocked itself upon the spray,
And its shivered beams in twinkling motion

Gleamed like star-motes in the Milky Way.

Lo, beneath those waters surging, flowing,
I beheld the Deep's fantastic
 bowers;
Shapes which seemed alive and yet were growing On their stalks like animated
 flowers.
Sentient flowers which seemed to glow and glimmer Soft as ocean blush of Indian shells, White as foam-drift in the moony shimmer
Of those sea-lit, wave-pavilioned dells.

Yet even here, as in the fire-eyed panther,
In disguise the eternal hunger lay,
For each feathery, velvet-tufted anther
Lay in ambush waiting for its prey.
Tiniest jewelled fish that flashed like lightning, Blindly drawn, came darting through the wave, When, a stifling sack above them tightening, Closed the ocean-blossom's living grave.

Now we fared through forest glooms primeval

Through whose leaves the light but rarely shone,
Where the buttressed tree-trunks looked coeval
With the time-worn, ocean-fretted
stone;
Where, from stem to stem their tendrils looping, Coiled the lithe lianas fold on fold,
Or, in cataracts of verdure drooping, From on high their billowy leafage rolled.

Where beneath the dusky woodland cover, While the noon-hush holds all living things, Butterflies of tropic splendour hover In a maze of rainbow-coloured
wings:
Some like stars light up their own green heaven
Some are spangled like a golden toy,
Or like flowers from their foliage driven
In the fiery ecstasy of joy.

But, the forest slumber rudely breaking,
Through the silence rings a piercing yell;
At the cry unnumbered beasts, awaking,
With their howls the loud confusion swell.

'Tis the cry of some frail creature panting
In the tiger's lacerating grip;
In its flesh carnivorous teeth implanting, While the blood smokes round his wrinkled lip.

'Tis the scream some bird in terror utters,
With its wings weighed down by leaden fears,
As from bough to downward bough it flutters Where the snake its glistening crest uprears:
Eyes of sluggish greed through rank weeds stealing, Breath whose venomous fumes mount through the air, Till benumbed the helpless victim, reeling, Drops convulsed into the reptile snare.

Now we fared o'er sweltering wastes whose steaming Clouds of tawny sand the wanderer blind.
Herds of horses with their long manes streaming Snorted thirstily against the wind; O'er the waste they scoured in shadowy numbers, Gasp'd for springs their raging thirst to cool,

And, like sick men mocked in fevered slumbers, Stoop to drink—and find a phantom pool.

What of antelopes crunched by the leopard?
What if hounds run down the timid hare?
What though sheep, strayed from the faithful shepherd, Perish helpless in the lion's lair?
The all-seeing sun shines on unheeding,
In the night shines the unruffled moon,
Though on earth brute myriads, preying, bleeding,
Put creation harshly out of tune.

Cried I, turning to the shrouded figure

"Oh, in mercy veil this cruel strife!
Sanguinary orgies which disfigure
The green ways of labyrinthine life.
From the needs and greeds of primal passion,
From the serpent's track and lion's den,
To the world our human hands did fashion,
Lead me to the kindly haunts of men."

And through fields of corn we passed together,

Orange golden in the brooding heat,
Where brown reapers in the harvest weather
Cut ripe swathes of downward rustling wheat.
In the orchards dangling red and yellow, Clustered fruit weighed down the bending sprays;
On a hundred hills the vines grew mellow
In the warmth of fostering autumn days.

Through the air the shrilly twittering swallows Flashed their nimble shadows on the leas;
Red-flecked cows were glassed in golden shallows, Purple clover hummed with restless bees.
Herdsmen drove the cattle from the mountain,
To the fold the shepherd drove his flocks, Village girls drew water from the fountain, Village yokels piled the full-eared shocks.

From the white town dozing in the valley, Round its vast Cathedral's solemn shade,

Citizens strolled down the walnut alley Where youth courted and glad childhood played.
"Peace on earth," I murmured; "let us linger—
Here the wage of life seems good at least."
As I spake the veiled One raised a finger
Where the moon broke flowering in the east.

Faintly muttering from deep mountain ranges, Muffled sounds rose hoarsely on the night,
As the crash of foundering avalanches Wakes hoarse echoes in each Alpine height.
Near and nearer sounds the roaring—
thunder,
Mortal thunder, crashes through the vale; Lightning flash of muskets breaks from under Groves once haunted by the nightingale.

Men clutch madly at each weapon—women, Children crouch in cellars, under
roofs,
For the town is circled by their foemen—

Shakes the ground with clang of trampling hoofs.
Shot on shot the volleys hiss and
rattle, Shrilly whistling fly the murderous balls,
Fiercely roars the tumult of the battle Round the hard-contested, dear-bought walls.

Horror, horror! The fair town is burning, Flames burst forth, wild sparks and ashes fly;
With her children's blood the green earth's turning Blood-red—blood-red, too, the cloud-winged sky.
Crackling flare the streets: from the lone steeple
The great clock booms forth its ancient chime,
And its dolorous quarters warn the people Of the conquering troops that march with time.

Fallen lies the fair old town, its houses Charred and ruined gape in smoking heaps;
Here with shouts a ruffian band carouses,
There an outraged woman vainly weeps.
In the fields where the ripe corn lies mangled,

Where the wounded groan beneath the dead,
Friend and foe, now helplessly entangled, Stain red poppies with a guiltier red.

There the dog howls o'er his perished master,
There the crow comes circling from afar;
All vile things that batten on disaster Follow feasting in the wake of war.
Famine follows—what they ploughed and planted
The unhappy peasants shall not reap; Sickening of strange meats and fever haunted,
To their graves they prematurely creep.

"Hence"—I cried in unavailing pity—
"Let us flee these scenes of monstrous strife,
Seek the pale of some imperial city Where the law rules starlike o'er man's life."
Straightway floating o'er blue sea and river,
We were plunged into a roaring cloud, Wherethrough lamps in ague fits did shiver O'er the surging multitudinous crowd.

Piles of stone, their cliff-like walls uprearing, Flashed in luminous lines along the
 night;
Jets of flame, spasmodically flaring, Splashed black pavements with a sickly light; Fabulous gems shone here, and glowing coral, Shimmering stuffs from many an Eastern loom,
And vast piles of tropic fruits and floral Marvels seemed to mock November's gloom.

But what prowls near princely mart and dwelling, Whence through many a thundering thoroughfare Rich folk roll on cushions softly swelling
 To the week-day feast and Sunday prayer?
Yea, who prowl there, hunger-nipped and pallid, Breathing nightmares limned upon
 the gloom?
'Tis but human rubbish, gaunt and squalid, Whom their country spurns for lack of room.

In their devious track we mutely
 follow, Mutely climb dim flights of oozy stairs,

Where through gap-toothed, mizzling roof the yellow Pestilent fog blends with the fetid air.

Through the unhinged door's discordant slamming Ring the gruesome sounds of savage strife—Howls of babes, the drunken father's damning, Counter-cursing of the shrill-tongued wife.

Children feebly crying on their mother In a wailful chorus—"Give us food!"
Man and woman glaring at each other Like two gaunt wolves with a famished brood.
Till he snatched a stick, and, madly staring, Struck her blow on blow upon the head;
And she, reeling back, gasped, hardly caring—
"Ah, you've done it now, Jim"— and was dead.

Dead—dead—dead—the miserable creature—
Never to feel hunger's cruel fang Wring the bowels of rebellious nature That her infants might be spared the pang.
"Dead! Good luck to her!" The man's teeth chattered,

Stone-still stared he with blank eyes and hard, Then, his frame with one big sob nigh shattered, Fled—and cut his throat down in the yard.

Dark the night—the children wail
 forsaken,
 Crane their wrinkled necks and cry for food,
Drop off into fitful sleep, or waken Trembling like a sparrow's ravished brood.
Dark the night—the rain falls on the ashes,
 Feebly hissing on the feeble heat, Filters through the ceiling, drops in splashes
 On the little children's naked feet.

Dark the night—the children wail
 forsaken—Is there none, ah, none, to heed their moan?
Yea, at dawn one little one is taken, Four poor souls are left, but one is gone.
Gone—escaped—flown from the shame and sorrow Waiting for them at life's sombre
 gate,
But the hand of merciless to-morrow Drags the others shuddering to their fate.

But one came—a girlish thing—a creature
Flung by wanton hands 'mid lust and crime—
A poor outcast, yet by right of nature Sweet as odour of the upland thyme.
Scapegoat of a people's sins, and hunted, Howled at, hooted to the wilderness,
To that wilderness of deaf hearts, blunted
To the depths of woman's dumb distress.

Jetsam, flotsam of the monster city, Spurned, defiled, reviled, that outcast came To those babes that whined for love and pity, Gave them bread bought with the wage of shame.
Gave them bread, and gave them warm, maternal Kisses not on sale for any price:
Yea, a spark, a flash of some eternal Sympathy shone through those haunted eyes.

Ah, perchance through her dark life's confusion, Through the haste and taste of fevered hours, Gusts of memory on her youth's pollution

Blew forgotten scents of faded
flowers.
And she saw the cottage near the wild wood,
With its lichened roof and latticed panes, Strayed once more through golden fields of childhood, Hyacinth dells and hawthornscented lanes.

Heard once more the song of nesting thrushes
And the blackbird's long mellifluous note, Felt once more the glow of maiden blushes
Burn through rosy cheek and milkwhite throat
In that orchard where the apple blossom Lightly shaken fluttered on her hair,
As the heart was fluttering in her bosom
When her sweetheart came and kissed her there.

Often came he in the lilac-laden Moonlit twilight, often pledged his word;
But she was a simple country-maiden,
He the offspring of a noble lord.
Fading lilacs May's farewell betoken, Fledglings fly and soon forget the nest;

Lightly may a young man's vows be broken,
And the heart break in a woman's breast.

Gathered like a sprig of summer roses
 In the dewy morn and flung away, To the girl the father's door now closes, Let her shelter henceforth how she may.

Who will house the miserable mother With her child, a helpless castaway!

"I, am I the keeper of my brother?" Asks smug virtue as it turns to pray!

Lovely are the earliest Lenten lilies, Primrose pleiads, hyacinthine sheets;
Stripped and rifled from their pastoral valleys,
See them sold now in the public streets!
Other flowers are sold there besides posies—Eyes may have the hyacinth's glowing blue, Rounded cheeks the velvet bloom of roses, Taper necks the rain-washed lily's hue.

But a rustic blossom! Love and duty Bound up in a child whom hunger slays!

Ah! but one thing still is left her—beauty
 Fresh, untarnished yet—and beauty pays.
Beauty keeps her child alive a little,
 Then it dies—her woman's love with it—Beauty's brilliant sceptre, ah, how brittle, Drags her daily deeper down the pit.

Ruin closes o'er her—hideous, nameless;
 Each fresh morning marks a deeper
 fall;
Till at twenty—callous, cankered, shameless,
 She lies dying at the hospital.
Drink, more drink, she calls for—her harsh laughter Grates upon the meekly praying nurse, Eloquent about her soul's hereafter:
 "Souls be blowed!" she sings out with a curse.

And so dies, an unrepenting sinner—Pitched into her pauper's grave what time
That most noble lord rides by to dinner
 Who had wooed her in her innocent prime.
And in after-dinner talk he preaches Resignation—o'er his burgundy—

Till a grateful public dubs his speeches Oracles of true philanthropy.

Peace ye call this? Call this justice, meted Equally to rich and poor alike?
Better than this peace the battle's heated Cannon-balls that ask not whom they strike!
Better than this masquerade of culture Hiding strange hyæna appetites, The frank ravening of the raw-necked vulture
As its beak the senseless carrion smites.

What of men in bondage, toiling blunted
In the roaring factory's lurid
gloom?
What of cradled infants starved and stunted?
What of woman's nameless martyrdom?
The all-seeing sun shines on
unheeding,
Shines by night the calm, unruffled
moon,
Though the human myriads, preying, bleeding,
Put creation harshly out of tune.

"Hence, ah, hence"—I sobbed in quivering passion—

"From these fearful haunts of fiendish men!
Better far the plain, carnivorous fashion
Which is practised in the lion's den." And I fled—yet staggering still did follow
In the footprints of my shrouded guide—
To the sea-caves echoing with the hollow
Immemorial moaning of the tide.

Sinking, swelling roared the wintry
ocean,
Pitch-black chasms struck with flying blaze,
As the cloud-winged storm-sky's sheer commotion Showed the blank Moon's mute Medusa face
White o'er wastes of water—surges crashing
Over surges in the formless gloom,
And a mastless hulk, with great seas washing Her scourged flanks, pitched toppling to her doom.

Through the crash of wave on wave gigantic,
Through the thunder of the hurricane,
My wild heart in breaking shrilled with frantic Exultation—"Chaos come again!

Yea, let earth be split and cloven
asunder
With man's still accumulating curse

Life is but a momentary blunder
In the cycle of the Universe.

"Yea, let earth with forest-belted mountains,
Hills and valleys, cataracts and
plains,
With her clouds and storms and fires and fountains, Pass with all her rolling sphere contains,
Melt, dissolve again into the ocean, Ocean fade into a nebulous haze!" And I sank back without sense or motion
'Neath the blank Moon's mute Medusa face.

Moments, years, or ages passed, when, lifting Freezing lids, I felt the heavens on high,
And, innumerable as the sea-sands drifting, Stars unnumbered drifted through the sky.
Rhythmical in luminous rotation,
In dædalian maze they reel and fly,
And their rushing light is Time's pulsation
In his passage through Eternity.

Constellated suns, fresh lit, declining,

Were ignited now, now quenched in space,
Rolling round each other, or inclining Orb to orb in multi-coloured rays.
Ever showering from their flaming fountains Light more light on each farcircling earth, Till life stirred crepuscular seas, and mountains
Heaved convulsive with the throes of birth.

And the noble brotherhood of planets, Knitted each to each by links of
light, Circled round their suns, nor knew a minute's Lapse or languor in their ceaseless flight.
And pale moons and rings and burning splinters Of wrecked worlds swept round their parent spheres, Clothed with spring or sunk in polar winters
As their sun draws nigh or disappears.

Still new vistas of new stars—far dwindling—Through the firmament like dewdrops roll, Torches of the Cosmos which enkindling Flash their revelation on the soul.

Yea, One spake there—though nor form nor feature Shown—a Voice came from the peaks of time:—
"Wilt thou judge me, wilt thou curse me, Creature Whom I raised up from the Ocean slime?

"Long I waited—ages rolled o'er ages

As I crystallized in granite rocks, Struggling dumb through immemorial stages, Glacial æons, fiery earthquake
shocks.
In fierce throbs of flame or slow upheaval, Speck by tiny speck, I topped the
seas, Leaped from earth's dark womb, and in primeval Forests shot up shafts of mammoth
trees.

"Through a myriad forms I yearned and panted, Putting forth quick shoots in endless swarms—Giant-hoofed, sharp-tusked, or finned or planted Writhing on the reef with pinioned arms.
I have climbed from reek of sanguine revels
In Cimmerian wood and thorny wild,

Slowly upwards to the dawnlit levels Where I bore thee, oh my youngest Child!

"Oh, my heir and hope of my tomorrow,
I—I draw thee on through fume and fret, Croon to thee in pain and call through sorrow,
Flowers and stars take for thy alphabet.
Through the eyes of animals appealing, Feel my fettered spirit yearn to thine,
Who, in storm of will and clash of feeling,
Shape the life that shall be—the divine.

"Oh, redeem me from my tiger rages, Reptile greed, and foul hyæna lust;
With the hero's deeds, the thoughts of sages,
Sow and fructify this passive dust; Drop in dew and healing love of woman
On the bloodstained hands of hungry strife, Till there break from passion of the Human
Morning-glory of transfigured life.

"I have cast my burden on thy shoulder;
Unimagined potencies have given

That from formless Chaos thou shalt mould her
And translate gross earth to luminous heaven.
Bear, oh, bear the terrible compulsion, Flinch not from the path thy fathers trod,
From Man's martyrdom in slow convulsion
Will be born the infinite goodness —God."

Ceased the Voice: and as it ceased it drifted Like the seashell's inarticulate moan;
From the Deep, on wings of flame uplifted,
Rose the sun rejoicing and alone.
Laughed in light upon the living
 ocean,
Danced and rocked itself upon the
 spray,
And its shivered beams in twinkling
 motion
Gleamed like star-motes of the Milky Way.

And beside me in the golden morning I beheld my shrouded phantom-
 guide;
But no longer sorrow-veiled and mourning—
It became transfigured by my side.
And I knew—as one escaped from prison

Sees old things again with fresh surprise—
It was Love himself, Love re-arisen With the Eternal shining through his eyes.

POEMS OF THE OPEN AIR.

"Therefore all seasons shall be sweet to thee, Whether the summer clothe the general earth
With greenness, or the redbreast sit and sing Betwixt the tufts of snow on the bare branch."

S. T. COLERIDGE.

THE SOWER.

The winds had hushed at last as by command;
The quiet sky above,
With its grey clouds spread o'er the fallow land,
Sat brooding like a dove

There was no motion in the air, no sound
Within the tree-tops stirred, Save when some last leaf, fluttering to the ground, Dropped like a wounded bird:

Or when the swart rooks in a gathering crowd
With clamorous noises wheeled, Hovering awhile, then swooped with wranglings loud Down on the stubbly field.

For now the big-thewed horses, toiling slow

In straining couples yoked, Patiently dragged the ploughshare to and fro
Till their wet haunches smoked.

Till the stiff acre, broken into clods, Bruised by the harrow's tooth, Lay lightly shaken, with its humid sods Ranged into furrows smooth.

There looming lone, from rise to set of sun,
Without or pause or speed, Solemnly striding by the furrows dun,
The sower sows the seed.

The sower sows the seed, which mouldering,
Deep coffined in the earth,
Is buried now, but with the future spring
Will quicken into birth.

Oh, poles of birth and death!
Controlling Powers
Of human toil and need!
On this fair earth all men are surely sowers,
Surely all life is seed!

All life is seed, dropped in Time's yawning furrow,
Which with slow sprout and shoot,
In the revolving world's unfathomed
morrow,
Will blossom and bear fruit.

A SPRING SONG.

Dark sod pierced by flames of
 flowers,
Dead wood freshly quickening, Bright skies dusked with sudden
 showers,
Lit by rainbows on the wing.

Cuckoo calls and young lambs'
 bleating
Nimble airs which coyly bring Little gusts of tender greeting From shy nooks where violets cling.

Half-fledged buds and birds and vernal Fields of grass dew-glistening; Evanescent life's eternal Resurrection, bridal Spring!

APRIL RAIN.

The April rain, the April rain, Comes slanting down in fitful
 showers,
Then from the furrow shoots the grain,
And banks are fledged with nestling
 flowers;
And in grey shaw and woodland
 bowers
The cuckoo through the April rain

Calls once again.

The April sun, the April sun, Glints through the rain in fitful
splendour,
And in grey shaw and woodland dun
The little leaves spring forth and tender
Their infant hands, yet weak and slender,
For warmth towards the April sun,
One after one.

And between shower and shine hath birth
The rainbow's evanescent glory; Heaven's light that breaks on mists of earth!
Frail symbol of our human story, It flowers through showers where, looming hoary,
The rain-clouds flash with April mirth,
Like Life on earth.

THE SLEEPING BEAUTY.

There was intoxication in the air;
The wind, keen blowing from across the seas, O'er leagues of new-ploughed land and heathery leas, Smelt of wild gorse whose gold flamed everywhere.

An undertone of song pulsed far and near,
The soaring larks filled heaven with ecstasies,
And, like a living clock among the trees,
The shouting cuckoo struck the time of year.

For now the Sun had found the earth once more,
And woke the Sleeping Beauty with a kiss;
Who thrilled with light of love in every pore, Opened her flower-blue eyes, and looked in his.
Then all things felt life fluttering at their core—
The world shook mystical in lambent bliss.

APPLE-BLOSSOM.

Blossom of the apple trees!
Mossy trunks all gnarled and hoary, Grey boughs tipped with rose-veined glory, Clustered petals soft as fleece Garlanding old apple trees!

How you gleam at break of day!
When the coy sun, glancing rarely, Pouts and sparkles in the pearly Pendulous dewdrops, twinkling gay

On each dancing leaf and spray.

Through your latticed boughs on high,
 Framed in rosy wreaths, one catches Brief kaleidoscopic snatches Of deep lapis-lazuli
In the April-coloured sky.

When the sundown's dying brand Leaves your beauty to the tender Magic spells of moonlight
 splendour,
Glimmering clouds of bloom you stand,
Turning earth to fairyland.

Cease, wild winds, O, cease to blow!
 Apple-blossom, fluttering, flying, Palely on the green turf lying,
Vanishing like winter snow;
Swift as joy to come and go.

THE MUSIC-LESSON.

A thrush alit on a young-leaved spray,
 And, lightly clinging,
 It rocked in its singing As the rapturous notes rose loud and gay;
 And with liquid shakes,
 And trills and breaks, Rippled through blossoming boughs of May.

Like a ball of fluff, with a warm brown throat
And throbbing bosom,
'Mid the apple-blossom,
The new-fledged nestling sat learning by rote
To echo the song
So tender and strong,
As it feebly put in its frail little note.

O blisfullest lesson amid the green grove!
The low wind crispeth
The leaves, where lispeth
The shy little bird with its parent
above;
Two voices that mingle And make but a single Hymn of rejoicing in praise of their love.

THE TEAMSTER.

With slow and slouching gait Sam leads the team;
He stoops i' the shoulders, worn with work not years; One only passion has he, it would seem—
The passion for the horses which he rears:
He names them as one would some household pet, May, Violet.

He thinks them quite as sensible as men;
As nice as women, but not near so skittish;
He fondles, cossets, scolds them now and then, Nay, gravely talks as if they knew good British:
You hear him call from dawn to set of sun,
"Goo back! Com on!"

Sam never seems depressed nor yet elate, Like Nature's self he goes his punctual round;
On Sundays, smoking by his garden
gate,
For hours he'll stand, with eyes upon the ground, Like some tired cart-horse in a field alone,
And still as stone.

Yet, howsoever stolid he may seem,
Sam has his tragic background, weird and wild Like some adventure in a drunkard's dream.
Impossible, you'd swear, for one so mild:
Yet village gossips dawdling o'er their ale Still tell the tale.

In his young days Sam loved a servant-maid,

A girl with happy eyes like hazel brooks That dance i' the sun, cheeks as if newly made Of pouting roses coyly hid in nooks,
And warm brown hair that wantoned into curl:
 A fresh-blown girl.

Sam came a-courting while the year was blithe,
When wet browed mowers, stepping out in tune, With level stroke and rhythmic swing of scythe, Smote down the proud grass in the pomp of June,
And wagons, half-tipped over, seemed to sway
 With loads of hay.

The elder bush beside the orchard croft Brimmed over with its bloom like curds and cream;
From out grey nests high in the granary loft Black clusters of small heads with callow scream Peered open-beaked, as swallows flashed along To feed their young.

Ripening towards the harvest swelled the wheat,

Lush cherries dangled 'gainst the latticed panes;
The roads were baking in the windless heat,
And dust had floured the glossy country lanes,
One sun-hushed, light-flushed Sunday afternoon
The last of June.

When, with his thumping heart all out of joint,
And pulses beating like a stroller's drum, Sam screwed his courage to the sticking point
And asked his blushing sweetheart if she'd come To Titsey Fair; he meant to coax coy
May
To name the day.

But her rich master snapped his thumb and swore The girl was not for him! Should not go out!
And, whistling to his dogs, slammed-to the door Close in Sam's face, and left him dazed without
In the fierce sunshine, blazing in his path
Like fire of wrath.

Unheeding, he went forth with hot wild eyes

Past fields of feathery oats and wine-red clover; Unheeded, larks soared singing to the skies,
Or rang the plaintive cry of rising plover;
Unheeded, pheasants with a startled sound Whirred from the ground.

On, on he went by acres full of grain,
 By trees and meadows reeling past his sight,
As to a man whirled onwards in a train
 The land with spinning hedgerows seems in flight;
At last he stopped and leant a long, long while Against a stile.

Hours passed; the clock struck ten; a hush of night,
 In which even wind and water seemed at peace;
But here and there a glimmering cottage light Shone like a glowworm through the slumberous trees;
Or from some far-off homestead through the dark
 A watch-dog's bark.

But all at once Sam gave a stifled cry:
 "There's fire," he muttered, "fire upon the hills!"

No fire—but as the late moon rose on high Her light looked smoke-red as through belching mills:
No fire—but moonlight turning in his path
To fire of wrath.

He looked abroad with eyes that gave the mist
A lurid tinge above the breadths of grain Owned by May's master. Then he shook his fist, Still muttering, "Fire!" and measured o'er again
The road he'd come, where, lapped in moonlight, lay Huge ricks of hay.

There he paused glaring. Then he turned and waned Like mist into the misty, moon-soaked night,
Where the pale silvery fields were blotched and stained With strange fantastic shadows.
But what light Is that which leaps up, flickering lithe and long,
With licking tongue!

Hungry it darts and hisses, twists and turns,
And with each minute shoots up high and higher,

Till, wrapped in flames, the mighty hayrick burns
And sends its sparks on to a neighbouring byre, Where, frightened at the hot, tremendous glow,
 The cattle low.

And rick on rick takes fire; and next a stye, Whence through the smoke the little pigs rush out;
The house-dog barks; then, with a startled cry,
 The window is flung open, shout on shout Wakes the hard-sleeping farm where man and maid
 Start up dismayed.

And with wild faces wavering in the glare,
 In nightcaps, bedgowns, clothes half huddled on Some to the pump, some to the duckpond tear In frantic haste, while others splashing run
With pails, or turn the hose with flame-scorched face Upon the blaze.

At last, when some wan streaks began to show
 In the chill darkness of the sky, the fire

Went out, subdued but for the sputtering glow Of sparks among wet ashes. Barn and byre Were safe, but swallowed all the summer math
 By fire of wrath.

Still haggard from the night's wild work and pale,
Farm-men and women stood in whispering knots, Regaled with foaming mugs of nutbrown ale;
Firing his oaths about like vicious shots,
The farmer hissed out now and then:
 "Gad damn!
 It's that black Sam."

They had him up and taxed him with the crime;
Denying naught, he sulked and held his peace;
And so, a branded convict, in due time, Handcuffed and cropped, they shipped him over-seas: Seven years of shame sliced from his labourer's life
 As with a knife.

But through it all the image of a girl With hazel eyes like pebbled waters clear,
And warm brown hair that wantoned
 into curl,

Kept his heart sweet through many a galling year,
Like to a bit of lavender long pressed In some black chest.

At last his time was up, and Sam returned To his dear village with its single street, Where, in the sooty forge, the fire still burned,
As, hammering on the anvil, red with heat,
The smith wrought at a shoe with tongues aglow, Blow upon blow.

There stood the church, with peals for death and birth,
Its ancient spire o'ertopping ancient
trees,
And there the graves and mounds of unknown earth, Gathered like little children round its knees;
There was "The Bull," with sign above the door,
And sanded floor.

Unrecognized Sam took his glass of beer,
And picked up gossip which the men let fall:
How Farmer Clow had failed, and one named Steer Had taken on the land, repairs and all;

And how the Kimber girl was to be wed
To Betsy's Ned.

Sam heard no more, flung down his pence, and took The way down to the well-remembered stile;
There, in the gloaming by the trysting brook,
He came upon his May—with just that smile
For sheep-faced Ned, that light in happy eyes:
Oh, sugared lies!

He came upon them with blackknitted brows
And clenched brown hands, and muttered huskily:
"Oh, little May, are those your true love's vows
You swore to keep while I was over-sea?"
Then crying, turned upon the other one,
"Com on, com on."

Then they fell to with faces set for fight,
And hit each other hard with rustic pride;
But Sam, whose arm with iron force could smite, Knocked his cowed rival down, and won his bride.

May wept and smiled, swayed like a wild red rose
As the wind blows.

She married Sam, who loved her with a wild Strong love he could not put to words—too deep For her to gauge; but with her first-born child May dropped off, flower-like, into the long sleep,
And left him nothing but the memory of His little love.

Since then the silent teamster lives
alone,
The trusted headman of his master Steer;
One only passion seems he still to own—
The passion for the foals he has to rear;
And still the prettiest, full of life and play,
Is little May.

A HIGHLAND VILLAGE.

Clear shining after the rain,
The sun bursts the clouds asunder,
And the hollow-rumbling thunder Groans like a loaded wain
As, deep in the Grampians yonder, He grumbles now and again.

Whenever the breezes shiver
The leaves where the rain-drops quiver,
 Each bough and bush and brier Breaks into living fire, Till every tree is bright With blossom bursts of light.

From golden roof and spout
 Brown waters gurgle and splutter, And rush down the flooded gutter
Where the village children shout, As barefoot they splash in and out
 The water with tireless patter.

The bald little Highland street Is all alive and a-glitter;
The air blows keen and sweet From the field where the swallows twitter;
Old wives on the doorsteps meet,
 At the corner the young maids titter.

And the reapers hasten again,
Ere quite the daylight wane
 To shake out the barley sheaves; While through the twinkling leaves
 The harvest moon upheaves
Clear shining after the rain.

ON A FORSAKEN LARK'S NEST.

Lo, where left 'mid the sheaves, cut down by the iron-fanged reaper,

Eating its way as it clangs fast through the wavering wheat,
Lies the nest of a lark, whose little brown eggs could not keep her As she, affrighted and scared, fled from the harvester's feet.

Ah, what a heartful of song that now will never awaken, Closely packed in the shell, awaited love's fostering,
That should have quickened to life what, now a-cold and forsaken, Never, enamoured of light, will meet the dawn on the wing.

Ah, what pæans of joy, what raptures no mortal can measure, Sweet as honey that's sealed in the cells of the honey-comb,
Would have ascended on high in jets of mellifluous pleasure, Would have dropped from the clouds to nest in its gold-curtained home.

Poor, pathetic brown eggs! Oh, pulses that never will quicken!
Music mute in the shell that hath been turned to a tomb!
Many a sweet human singer, chilled and adversity-stricken,
Withers benumbed in a world his joy might have helped to illumine.

REAPERS.

Sun-tanned men and women, toiling there together; Seven I count in all, in yon field of wheat,
Where the rich ripe ears in the harvest weather
Glow an orange gold through the sweltering heat.

Busy life is still, sunk in brooding leisure:
Birds have hushed their singing in the hushed tree-tops;
Not a single cloud mars the flawless azure;
Not a shadow moves o'er the moveless crops;

In the glassy shallows, that no breath is creasing, Chestnut-coloured cows in the rushes dank Stand like cows of bronze, save when they flick the teasing Flies with switch of tail from each quivering flank.

Nature takes a rest—even her bees are sleeping,
And the silent wood seems a church that's shut; But these human creatures cease not from their reaping While the corn stands high, waiting to be cut.

APPLE-GATHERING.

Essex flats are pink with clover, Kent is crowned with flaunting hops,
Whitely shine the cliffs of Dover, Yellow wave the Midland crops;

Sussex Downs the flocks grow sleek on,
But, for me, I love to stand Where the Herefordshire beacon Watches o'er his orchard land.

Where now sun, now shadow dapples
As it wavers in the breeze—Clumps of fresh-complexioned apples
On the heavy-laden trees:

Red and yellow, streaked and hoary,
Russet-coated, pale or brown—
Some are dipped in sunset glory,
And some painted by the dawn.

What profusion, what abundance!
Not a twig but has its fruits;
High in air some in the sun dance,
Some lie scattered near the roots.

These the hasty winds have taken Are a green, untimely crop;
Those by burly rustics shaken Fall with loud resounding plop.

In this mellow autumn weather, Ruddy 'mid the long green grass, Heaped-up baskets stand together,

Filled by many a blowsy lass.

Red and yellow, streaked and hoary,
Pile them on the granary floors,
Till the yule-log's flame in glory Loudly up the chimney roars;

Till gay troops of children, lightly Tripping in with shouts of glee, See ripe apples dangling brightly
On the red-lit Christmas-tree.

THE SONGS OF SUMMER.

The songs of summer are over and past!
The swallow's forsaken the dripping eaves;
Ruined and black 'mid the sodden leaves
The nests are rudely swung in the blast:
And ever the wind like a soul in pain Knocks and knocks at the window-pane.

The songs of summer are over and
past!
Woe's me for a music sweeter than theirs—
The quick, light bound of a step on the stairs,
The greeting of lovers too sweet to last:

And ever the wind like a soul in pain
Knocks and knocks at the window-pane.

AUTUMN TINTS.

Coral-coloured yew-berries Strew the garden ways, Hollyhocks and sunflowers Make a dazzling blaze
In these latter days.

Marigolds by cottage doors Flaunt their golden pride, Crimson-punctured bramble leaves Dapple far and wide
The green mountain-side.

Far away, on hilly slopes Where fleet rivulets run, Miles on miles of tangled fern, Burnished by the sun,
Glow a copper dun.

For the year that's on the wane, Gathering all its fire, Flares up through the kindling world
 As, ere they expire, Flames leap high and higher.

GREEN LEAVES AND SERE.

Three tall poplars beside the pool
 Shiver and moan in the gusty blast,

The carded clouds are blown like wool,
And the yellowing leaves fly thick and fast.

The leaves, now driven before the blast,
Now flung by fits on the curdling pool,
Are tossed heaven-high and dropped at last
As if at the whim of a jabbering fool.

O leaves, once rustling green and cool!
Two met here where one moans
 aghast
With wild heart heaving towards the past:
Three tall poplars beside the pool.

THE HUNTER'S MOON.

The Hunter's Moon rides high, High o'er the close-cropped plain;
Across the desert sky
 The herded clouds amain Scamper tumultuously, Chased by the hounding wind That yelps behind.

The clamorous hunt is done,
 Warm-housed the kennelled pack;
One huntsman rides alone With dangling bridle slack;

He wakes a hollow tone,
Far echoing to his horn
In clefts forlorn.

The Hunter's Moon rides low,
Her course is nearly sped.
Where is the panting roe?
Where hath the wild deer fled?
Hunter and hunted now Lie in oblivion deep:
Dead or asleep.

THE PASSING YEAR.

No breath of wind stirs in the painted leaves,
The meadows are as stirless as the sky,
Like a Saint's halo golden vapours lie Above the restful valley's garnered sheaves.
The journeying Sun, like one who fondly grieves, Above the hills seems loitering with a sigh,
As loth to bid the fruitful earth good-bye,
On these hushed hours of luminous autumn eves.

There is a pathos in his softening glow,
Which like a benediction seems to hover

O'er the tranced earth, ere he must sink below
And leave her widowed of her radiant Lover, A frost-bound sleeper in a shroud of snow
While winter winds howl a wild dirge above her.

THE ROBIN REDBREAST.

The year's grown songless! No glad pipings thrill
The hedge-row elms, whose wind-worn branches shower Their leaves on the sere grass, where some late flower In golden chalice hoards the sunlight
 still.
Our summer guests, whose raptures used to fill Each apple-blossomed garth and honeyed bower,
Have in adversity's inclement hour Abandoned us to bleak November's chill.

But hearken! Yonder russet bird among The crimson clusters of the homely thorn Still bubbles o'er with little rills of song—
A blending of sweet hope and resignation:

Even so, when life of love and youth is shorn, One friend becomes its last, best consolation.

THE RED SUNSETS, 1883.

The boding sky was characterized with cloud,
The scripture of the storm—but high in air,
Where the unfathomed zenith still was bare,
A pure expanse of rose-flushed violet glowed
And, kindling into crimson light, o'erflowed
The hurrying wrack with such a blood-red glare,
That heaven, igniting, wildly seemed to flare
On the dazed eyes of many an awestruck crowd.

And in far lands folk presaged with blanched lips Disastrous wars, earthquakes, and foundering ships Such whelming floods as never dykes could stem, Or some proud empire's ruin and eclipse:
Lo, such a sky, they cried, as burned o'er them Once lit the sacking of Jerusalem!

THE RED SUNSETS, 1883.

The twilight heavens are flushed with gathering light,
And o'er wet roofs and huddling streets below Hang with a strange Apocalyptic
 glow
On the black fringes of the wintry
 night.
Such bursts of glory may have rapt the sight Of him to whom on Patmos long ago
The visionary angel came to show That heavenly city built of chrysolite.

And lo, three factory hands begrimed with soot, Aflame with the red splendour, marvelling stand,
And gaze with lifted faces awed and mute.
Starved of earth's beauty by Man's grudging hand,
O toilers, robbed of labour's golden fruit, Ye, too, may feast in Nature's fairyland.

ON THE LIGHTHOUSE AT ANTIBES.

A stormy light of sunset glows and glares

Between two banks of cloud, and o'er the brine Thy fair lamp on the sky's carnation line
Alone on the lone promontory flares:
Friend of the Fisher who at nightfall fares Where lurk false reefs masked by the hyaline
Of dimpling waves, within whose smile divine Death lies in wait behind Circean snares.

The evening knows thee ere the evening star;
Or sees thy flame sole Regent of the bight,
When storm, hoarse rumoured by the hills afar, Makes mariners steer landward by thy light, Which shows through shock of hostile nature's war How man keeps watch o'er man through deadliest night.

CAGNES.
ON THE RIVIERA.

In tortuous windings up the steep incline The sombre street toils to the village square, Whose antique walls in stone and moulding bear

Dumb witness to the Moor. Afar off shine,
With tier on tier, cutting heaven's blue
divine,
The snowy Alps; and lower the hills are fair,
With wave-green olives rippling down to where Gold clusters hang and leaves of sunburnt vine.

You may perchance, I never shall forget When, between twofold glory of land and sea,
We leant together o'er the old parapet,
And saw the sun go down. For, oh, to me,
The beauty of that beautiful strange place Was its reflection beaming from your face.

A WINTER LANDSCAPE.

All night, all day, in dizzy, downward
flight,
Fell the wild-whirling, vague, chaotic snow,
Till every landmark of the earth
below,
Trees, moorlands, roads, and each familiar sight
Were blotted out by the bewildering white.

And winds, now shrieking loud, now whimpering low, Seemed lamentations for the world-old woe That death must swallow life, and darkness light.

But all at once the rack was blown away,
The snowstorm hushing ended in a sigh;
Then like a flame the crescent moon on high Leaped forth among the planets; pure as they,
Earth vied in whiteness with the Milky Way:
Herself a star beneath the starry sky.

LOVE IN EXILE.

"Whatever way my days decline,
I felt and feel, tho' left alone,
His being working in mine own,
The footsteps of his life in mine."

LORD TENNYSON.

SONGS.

I.

Thou walkest with me as the spirit-
light
Of the hushed moon, high o'er a snowy hill, Walks with the houseless traveller all
the night,
When trees are tongueless and when mute the rill.
Moon of my soul, O phantasm of delight, Thou walkest with me still.

The vestal flame of quenchless memory burns
In my soul's sanctuary. Yea, still for thee
My bitter heart hath yearned, as moonward yearns

Each separate wave-pulse of the clamorous sea:
My Moon of love, to whom for ever turns
The life that aches through me.

II.

I was again beside my Love in dream:
Earth was so beautiful, the moon was shining;
The muffled voice of many a cataract stream Came like a love-song, as, with arms entwining, Our hearts were mixed in unison supreme.

The wind lay spell-bound in each pillared pine,
The tasselled larches had no sound or motion,
As my whole life was sinking into thine—
Sinking into a deep, unfathomed
ocean
Of infinite love—uncircumscribed, divine.

Night held her breath, it seemed, with all her stars:
Eternal eyes that watched in mute compassion
Our little lives o'erleap their mortal
bars,

Fused in the fulness of immortal passion,
A passion as immortal as the stars.

There was no longer any thee or me; No sense of self, no wish or incompleteness;
The moment, rounded to Eternity, Annihilated time's destructive fleetness:
For all but love itself had ceased to be.

III.

I am athirst, but not for wine;
The drink I long for is divine, Poured only from your eyes in mine.

I hunger, but the bread I want,
Of which my blood and brain are scant,
Is your sweet speech, for which I pant.

I am a-cold, and lagging lame, Life creeps along my languid frame;
Your love would fan it into flame.

Heaven's in that little word—your love!
It makes my heart coo like a dove,
My tears fall as I think thereof.

IV.

I would I were the glow-worm, thou the flower,
That I might fill thy cup with glimmering light;
I would I were the bird, and thou the bower,
To sing thee songs throughout the summer night.

I would I were a pine tree deeply rooted,
And thou the lofty, cloudbeleaguered rock, Still, while the blasts of heaven around us hooted,
To cleave to thee and weather every shock.

I would I were the rill, and thou the river;
So might I, leaping from some headlong steep,
With all my waters lost in thine for ever,
Be hurried onwards to the unfathomed deep.

I would—what would I not? O foolish dreaming!
My words are but as leaves by autumn shed,
That, in the faded moonlight idly gleaming, Drop on the grave where all our love lies dead.

V.

Dost thou remember ever, for my sake,
When we two rowed upon the rock-bound lake?
How the wind-fretted waters blew their spray
About our brows like blossom-falls of May
 One memorable day?

Dost thou remember the glad mouth that cried—
"Were it not sweet to die now side by side,
To lie together tangled in the deep Close as the heart-beat to the heart—so keep
 The everlasting sleep?"

Dost thou remember? Ah, such death as this Had set the seal upon my heart's young bliss!
But, wrenched asunder, severed and apart, Life knew a deadlier death: the blighting smart
 Which only kills the heart.

VI.

O moon, large golden summer moon, Hanging between the linden trees,
 Which in the intermittent breeze

Beat with the rhythmic pulse of June!

O night-air, scented through and through With honey-coloured flower of lime,
 Sweet now as in that other time When all my heart was sweet as you!

The sorcery of this breathing bloom Works like enchantment in my brain,
 Till, shuddering back to life again,
My dead self rises from its tomb.

And, lovely with the love of yore, Its white ghost haunts the moon-white ways;
 But, when it meets me face to face, Flies trembling to the grave once more.

VII.

Why will you haunt me unawares,
 And walk into my sleep,
Pacing its shadowy thoroughfares, Where long-dried perfume scents the airs,
 While ghosts of sorrow creep, Where on Hope's ruined altar-stairs,
 With ineffectual beams,
The Moon of Memory coldly glares Upon the land of dreams?

My yearning eyes were fain to look Upon your hidden face;

Their love, alas! you could not brook, But in your own you mutely took My hand, and for a space You wrung it till I throbbed and shook,
And woke with wildest moan
And wet face channelled like a brook With your tears or my own.

VIII.

When you wake from troubled slumbers
With a dream-bewildered brain,
And old leaves which no man numbers Chattering tap against the pane;
And the midnight wind is wailing Till your very life seems quailing
As the long gusts shudder and sigh:
Know you not that homeless cry Is my love's, which cannot die, Wailing through Eternity?

When beside the glowing embers, Sitting in the twilight lone, Drop on drop you hear November's Melancholy monotone,
As the heavy rain comes sweeping,
With a sound of weeping, weeping, Till your blood is chilled with fears;
Know you not those falling tears, Flowing fast through years on years,

For my sobs within your ears?

When with dolorous moan the billows

Surge around where, far and wide, Leagues on leagues of sea-worn hollows

Throb with thunders of the tide,
And the weary waves in breaking Fill you, thrill you, as with aching Memories of our love of yore Where you pace the sounding
shore,

Hear you not, through roll and roar,
Soul call soul for evermore?

IX.

In a lonesome burial-place Crouched a mourner white of face; Wild her eyes—unheeding Circling pomp of night and day—Ever crying, "Well away, Love lies a-bleeding!"

And her sighs were like a knell,
And her tears for ever fell,
With their warm rain feeding That purpureal flower, alas!
Trailing prostrate in the grass,
Love lies a-bleeding.

Through the yews' black-tufted
gloom
Crimson light dripped on the tomb, Funeral shadows breeding:

In the sky the sun's light shed Dyed the earth one awful red—
Love lies a-bleeding.

Came grey mists, and blanching
cloud
Bore one universal shroud; Came the bowed moon leading,
From the infinite afar Star that rumoured unto star—Love lies a-bleeding.

X.

On life's long round by chance I found
A dell impearled with dew, Where hyacinths, gushing from the ground, Lent to the earth heaven's native hue
Of holy blue.

I sought that plot of azure light Once more in gloomy hours;
But snow had fallen overnight And wrapped in mortuary white My fairy ring of flowers.

XI.

Ah, yesterday was dark and drear,
My heart was deadly sore;
Without thy love it seemed, my Dear,
That I could live no more.

And yet I laugh and sing to-day; Care or care not for me, Thou canst not take the love away With which I worship thee.

And if to-morrow, Dear, I live,
My heart I shall not break:
For still I hold it that to give Is sweeter than to take.

XII.

Yea, the roses are still on fire
With the bygone heat of July, Though the least little wind drifting by Shake a rose-leaf or two from the brier,
Be it never so soft a sigh.

Ember of love still glows and lingers Deep at the red heart's smouldering core;
With the sudden passionate throb of yore
We shook as our eyes and clinging fingers
Met once only to meet no more.

XIII.

We met as strangers on life's lonely way,
And yet it seemed we knew each other well;

There was no end to what thou hadst to say,
Or to the thousand things I found to tell.
My heart, long silent, at thy voice that day Chimed in my breast like to a silver bell.

How much we spoke, and yet still left untold Some secret half revealed within our eyes:
Didst thou not love me once in ages old?
Had I not called thee with importunate cries,
And, like a child left sobbing in the cold, Listened to catch from far thy fond replies?

We met as strangers, and as such we part;
Yet all my life seems leaving me with thine;
Ah, to be clasped once only heart to heart,
If only once to feel that thou wert mine!
These lips are locked, and yet I know thou art
That all in all for which my soul did pine.

You make the sunshine of my heart
And its tempestuous shower; Sometimes the thought of you is like A lilac bush in flower, Yea, honey-sweet as hives in May.
And then the pang of it will strike
My bosom with a fiery smart, As though love's deeply planted dart Drained all its life away.

My thoughts hum round you, Dear, like bees
About a bank of thyme, Or round the yellow blossoms of The heavy-scented lime.
Ah, sweeter you than honeydew, Yet dark the ways of love,
For it has robbed my soul of peace, And marred my life and turned heart's-ease
Into funereal rue.

XV.

Dear, when I look into your eyes My hurts are healed, my heart grows whole;
The barren places in my soul,
Like waste lands under April skies, Break into flower beneath your eyes.

Ah, life grows lovely where you are;
Only to think of you gives light To my dark heart, within whose
night
Your image, though you bide afar,

Glow like a lake-reflected star.

Dare I crave more than only this:
A thrill of love, a transient smile
To gladden all my world awhile?
No more, alas! Is mortal bliss Not transient as a lover's kiss?

XVI.

Ah, if you knew how soon and late My eyes long for a sight of you, Sometimes in passing by my gate You'd linger until fall of dew,
If you but knew!

Ah, if you knew how sick and sore
My life flags for the want of you, Straightway you'd enter at the door And clasp my hand between your two,
If you but knew!

Ah, if you knew how lost and lone
I watch and weep and wait for you, You'd press my heart close to your own Till love had healed me through and through,
If you but knew!

XVII.

Your looks have touched my soul with bright

Ineffable emotion;
As moonbeams on a stormy night Illume with transitory light A seagull on her lonely flight Across the lonely ocean.

Fluttering from out the gloom and roar,
 On fitful wing she flies, Moon-white above the moon-washed
 shore;
Then, drowned in darkness as before, She's lost, as I when lit no more
 By your beloved eyes.

XVIII.

Oh, brown Eyes with long black lashes, Young brown Eyes, Depths of night from which there flashes Lightning as of summer skies, Beautiful brown Eyes!

In your veiled mysterious splendour Passion lies Sleeping, but with sudden tender Dreams that fill with vague surmise
Beautiful brown Eyes.

All my soul, with yearning shaken, Asks in sighs—
Who will see your heart awaken, Love's divine sunrise

In those young brown Eyes?

XIX.

Once on a golden day,
In the golden month of May,
I gave my heart away—
 Little birds were singing.

I culled my heart in truth, Wet with the dews of youth,
For love to take, forsooth—Little flowers were springing.

Love sweetly laughed at this,
And between kiss and kiss Fled with my heart in his:
 Winds warmly blowing.

And with his sun and shower Love kept my heart in flower,
As in the greenest bower Rose richly glowing.

Till, worn at evensong, Love dropped my heart among Stones by the way ere long; Misprizèd token.

There in the wind and rain, Trampled and rent in twain, Ne'er to be whole again,
 My heart lies broken.

XX.

What magic is there in thy mien, What sorcery in thy smile,
Which charms away all cark and care,
Which turns the foul days into fair,
And for a little while Changes this disenchanted scene
From the sere leaf into the green, Transmuting with love's golden wand
This beggared life to fairyland?

My heart goes forth to thee, oh friend,
As some poor pilgrim to a shrine,
A pilgrim who has come from far To seek his spirit's folding star,
And sees the taper shine;
The goal to which his wanderings tend,
Where want and weariness shall end,
And kneels ecstatically blest Because his heart hath entered rest.

HEART'S-EASE.

As opiates to the sick on wakeful nights,
As light to flowers, as flowers in poor men's rooms,
As to the fisher when the tempest
glooms
The cheerful twinkling of his village lights;
As emerald isles to flagging swallow flights,

As roses garlanding with tendrilled blossoms
The unweeded hillocks of forgotten
 tombs,
As singing birds on cypressshadowed heights,

Thou art to me—a comfort past compare—
For thy joy-kindling presence, sweet as May Sets all my nerves to music, makes away With sorrow and the numbing frost of care,
Until the influence of thine eyes' bright sway
Has made life's glass go up from foul to fair.

UNTIMELY LOVE.

Peace, throbbing heart, nor let us shed one tear O'er this late love's unseasonable
 glow;
Sweet as a violet blooming in the snow,
The posthumous offspring of the widowed year,
That smells of March when all the world is sere,
And, while around the hurtling sea-winds blow—Which twist the oak and lay the pine tree low—

Stands childlike in the storm and has no fear.

Poor helpless blossom orphaned of the sun,
How could it thus brave winter's rude estate?
Oh love, more helpless love, why bloom so late,
Now that the flower-time of the year is done?
Since thy dear course must end when scarce begun, Nipped by the cold touch of untoward fate.

THE AFTER-GLOW.

It is a solemn evening, golden-clear
—
The Alpine summits flame with rose-lit snow
And headlands purpling on wide seas below,
And clouds and woods and arid rocks appear Dissolving in the sun's own atmosphere
And vast circumference of light, whose slow Transfiguration—glow and afterglow—
Turns twilight earth to a more luminous sphere.

Oh heart, I ask, seeing that the orb of day Has sunk below, yet left to sky and sea
His glory's spiritual after-shine:
I ask if Love, whose sun hath set for thee,
May not touch grief with his memorial ray,
And lend to loss itself a joy divine?

L'ENVOI.

Thou art the goal for which my spirit longs;
 As dove on dove, Bound for one home, I send thee all my songs
 With all my love.

Thou art the haven with fair harbour lights;
 Safe locked in thee,
My heart would anchor after stormful nights
 Alone at sea.

Thou art the rest of which my life is fain,
 The perfect peace;
Absorbed in thee the world, with all its pain
 And toil, would cease.

Thou art the heaven to which my soul would go!

O dearest eyes,
Lost in your light you would turn hell below
To Paradise.

Thou all in all for which my heart-blood yearns!
Yea, near or far—Where the unfathomed ether throbs and burns
With star on star,

Or where, enkindled by the fires of June,
The fresh earth glows, Blushing beneath the mystical white moon
Through rose on rose—

Thee, thee I see, thee feel in all live things,
Beloved one;
In the first bird which tremulously sings
Ere peep of sun;

In the last nestling orphaned in the hedge,
Rocked to and fro, When dying summer shudders in the sedge,
And swallows go;

When roaring snows rush down the mountain-pass,
March floods with rills, Or April lightens through the living grass

In daffodils;

When popped cornfields simmer in the heat

With tare and thistle, And, like winged clouds above the mellow wheat,
The starlings whistle;

When stained with sunset the wide moorlands glare

In the wild weather, And clouds with flaming craters smoke and flare Red o'er red heather;

When the bent moon, on frostbound midnights waking,

Leans to the snow Like some world-mother whose deep heart is breaking O'er human woe.

As the round sun rolls red into the ocean,

Till all the sea Glowes fluid gold, even so life's mazy motion
Is dyed with thee:

For as the wave-like years subside and roll,

O heart's desire,
Thy soul glows interfused within my soul,
A quenchless fire.

Yea, thee I feel, all storms of life
 above,
 Near though afar;
O thou my glorious morning star of love,
 And evening star.

THE PROPHECY OF SAINT ORAN,

And other Poems.

"There is perhaps no phase of our history more capable of poetic treatment than the sainted lives of the Irish monks who first spread the Christian faith over the western shores of Scotland, and yet it would be difficult to point to a single representative poem having Saint Columba and the devoted band of his disciples for its heroes. An attempt at filling up this gap has recently been made by Miss Blind in a narrative poem devoted to the fate of St. Oran, the friend and disciple of St. Columba.... Apart from the sonorous beauty of her lines, there is in her diction a straightforwardness and simplicity, and an entire absence of affectation and false sentiment, which, combined with considerable power of characterization, make her volume a remarkable contribution to English literature."—Times, September 26, 1881.

"To disturb the motif of a legend is always a bold, and mostly a rash, proceeding.... And yet so skilfully is the story handled that the main incidents of the legend do not lose, but gain by this disturbance of the motif, and the character of Oran, which with the old motif could only have presented the single side of the religious enthusiast, becomes a character exhibiting that complexity which modern taste demands.... Directness of style and lucidity of narrative are the characteristic excellences of the poem. There are few contemporary poets who could have done so much dramatic business in so few lines.... In each of the sonnets there is a thought that is well expressed, and worth expressing."—Athenæum, July 30, 1881.

"It is in the domain of character that the poem is distinguished by its highest excellence. There is an ideal statuesqueness embodied in the person of St.

Columba such as is felt to possess a powerful appeal to the imagination. The poem embraces many passions, of which the most tender and beautiful finds expression in the exquisite creation of the radiant golden-haired girl for whose love St. Oran breaks his vow of chastity. But the really powerful contribution to our knowledge of character which this book contains is fittingly centred in St. Oran himself. A dramatic instinct of high order finds utterance in his struggles between opposing passions. Nor are the metrical excellences of the poem less conspicuous.... If one were in need of some single phrase by which to denote the ultimate effect produced by this book, one might say that it seems the most mature of all recent first efforts, even of established rank."—Academy, July 16, 1881.

"In the choice of a subject for her chief poem she has been singularly fortunate.... That a story such as this is full of poetical suggestiveness is obvious, and Miss Blind has proved herself equal to the occasion. She has avoided writing anything approaching to a 'tendency poem.' She metes out justice with an equal hand to all her characters. The genuine enthusiasm and religious zeal of the monks are set forth in language as inspired as is the final protest of St. Oran against their narrow fanaticism; and one of the best passages in the book is indeed the Sermon in which St. Columba announces the Gospel of love and redemption to the islanders."—Pall Mall Gazette, August 22, 1881.

"'The Prophecy of Saint Oran' is skilfully told and vigorously written. In the description of nature and scenery; in the delineation of character; and in the management of singularly difficult positions there is visible a firm and practised hand, a bold and unmistakable power. 'The Street Children's Dance' not unworthily ranks with some of the touching pieces of Hood, Mrs. Barrett Browning, and others."—British Mail, September 1, 1881.

"The only excuse for street music that can reasonably be considered valid is the touching plea for public toleration which is embodied in Miss Mathilde Blind's poem, wherein the spectacle of poor children dancing round an organ is as pathetically moralized and as tender and full of loving pity as Mrs. Browning's 'Cry of the Children.'"—Daily Telegraph, September 1, 1881.

"The poem is rich in true description of sea and sky and mountain, and glows in sympathy with the deeper feelings which stir humanity. There has been published no poem of such creative suggestiveness as this for many a day, and we hope and believe that it is the precursor of other work by the same unfaltering hand. This poem is a true work of art, complete and beautiful. There is in the volume other work which shows a master's touch...."—Manchester Examiner and Times, July 1, 1882.

"Il y a là bien plus qu'une simple facilité de versification. Le récit du poème d'ouverture est grand et fort, la manière de raconter est pleine de poésie et d'effet. Depuis la mort de Mrs. Barrett Browning, nous n'avons point eu de poésie aussi hautement inspirée qui ait jailli d'une source féminine."—Le Livre, Paris, October 10, 1881.

THE HEATHER ON FIRE:

A Tale of the Highland Clearances.

"Miss Blind has produced one of the most noticeable and moving poems which recent years have added to our shelves.... As a singer with a message her attempt is praiseworthy, and her performance is fairly self-consistent. It is eminently homogeneous; the passion once felt, the inspiration once obeyed, the well-head pours forth its stream in a strong and uniform current, which knows no pause until its impulse ceases.... The story is pathetic at once in its simplicity and in its terror.... We congratulate the author upon her boldness in choosing a subject of our own time, fertile in what is pathetic, and free from any taint of the vulgar and conventional. Poetry of late years has tended too much towards motives of a merely fanciful and abstruse, sometimes a plainly artificial, character; and we have had much of lyrical energy or attraction, with little of the real marrow of human life, the flesh and blood of man and woman. Positive subject-matter, the emotion which inheres in actual life, the very smile and the very tear and heart-pang, are, after all, precious to poetry, and we have them here. 'The Heather on Fire' may possibly prove to be something of a new departure, and one that was certainly not superfluous."—Athenæum, July 17, 1886.

"Miss Blind has chosen for her new poem one of those terrible Highland clearances which stain the history of Scotch landlordism. Though her tale is a fiction it is too well founded on fact.... It may be said generally of the poem that the most difficult scenes are those in which Miss Blind succeeds best; and on the whole we are inclined to think that its greatest and most surprising success is the picture of the poor old soldier Rory driven mad by the burning of his wife. In his frenzy he mixes up his old battles with the French and the descent of the landlord's ejectors upon the village."—Academy, August 7, 1886.

"In this versified tale of Highland clearances, Mathilde Blind has, with genuine poetic instinct, selected a family the fortunes of which form the burden of her story.... Literature and poetry are never seen at their best save in contact with actual life.... This little book abounds in vivid delineation of character, and is redolent with the noblest human sympathy."—Newcastle Daily Chronicle, June 3, 1886.

"A subject which has painfully preoccupied public opinion is, in the poem entitled 'The Heather on Fire,' treated with characteristic power by Miss Mathilde Blind. Irish evictions have offered so convenient a theme to party strife, that the sufferings of the unhappy Highland crofters have not always met with the compassion they were so well calculated to inspire. In eloquent and forcible verse, Miss Blind tells the tale of their wrongs, their resistance to the hard fate imposed upon them, and describes the bitter grief with which 'Crowding on the decks with hungry

eyes, Straining towards the coast that flies and flies,'

those among them driven into exile look on the shores to which many bid an eternal farewell. Both as a narrative and descriptive poem 'The Heather on Fire' is equally remarkable."—Morning Post, July 30, 1886.

"We are happy in being able to extend to the present poem a welcome equally sincere and equally hearty; for it is a poem that is rich not only in power and beauty but in that 'enthusiasm of humanity' which stirs and moves us, and of which so much contemporary verse is almost painfully deficient. Miss Blind does not possess her theme; she is possessed by it, as was Mrs. Browning when she wrote 'Aurora Leigh.'... We can best describe the kind of her success by noting the fact that while engaged in the perusal of her book we do not say, 'What a fine poem!' but 'What a terrible story!' or, more probably still, say nothing at all, but read on and on under the spell of a great horror and an over-powering pity. Poetry of which this can be said needs no other recommendation, and, therefore, we need not unduly lengthen our review of 'The Heather on Fire.'"—Manchester Examiner and Times, September 1, 1886.

"There are charming pictures of West Highland scenery, in Arran apparently, and of the surroundings and conditions of Highland cottar life."—Scotsman, July 20, 1886.

"In 'The Heather on Fire' she exhibits a clearness and beauty of diction, a rhythmical correctness, a grace and simplicity of style which mark her out as no slavish follower of any poetic 'school,' but an unaffected and truthful expression of her own feelings.... Whatever the reader's opinion may be on the grievance which Miss Blind throws into such fierce light, he cannot fail to be pleased with her graceful tale, so gracefully and simply told."—Glasgow Herald, July 20, 1886.

"Miss Mathilde Blind's poem is the tragic epic of the old evictions in the Highlands of Scotland. It is a strange fact that the general reader knows more about the siege of Troy, the Norman Conquest, and the Wars of the Roses, than about such matters in the very history of our own days as the depopulation of the Highlands of Scotland by the landlords. The old story comes to the front just now by reason of the crofter agitation. In the preface to her fine and touching epic, and in the notes at the end, Miss Blind passes in review some of the facts of the eviction of the Glen Sannox people by the Duke of Hamilton in 1832, where, as she says, 'the progress of civilization, which has redeemed many a wilderness and gladdened the solitary places of the world, has come with a curse to these Highland glens, and turned green pastures and golden harvest fields once more into a desert.' The 'Heather on Fire' is a poem in four cantos—or 'Duans'—comprising about two hundred stanzas."—School Board Chronicle, July 10, 1886.

"It is written in a strain which must of necessity appeal to the sympathies of all grades of society, and at the same time it is eminently poetical, both in thought and rhythm."—Western Antiquary, August, 1886.

"A book like this forms an admirable corrective to the harsh and cold-blooded theories of such landlords as the Duke of Argyle on the rights of his class."—Cambridge Independent Press, August, 1886.

"There is a sonorous beauty, a classic dignity and depth of pathos throughout her four cantos, and a vivid and thrilling description is given of the industrious hamlets, the contented happy people, and the ruthless manner in which the evictions were effected by the stewards and ground-officers."—Elgin Courant, August, 1886.

TARANTELLA:

A Romance.

"The author of this two-volumed romance is favourably known by other works, and by her appreciative 'Life of George Eliot.' The strange effects of the bite of a tarantula spider, so firmly believed in by the Italian peasantry, and the marvellous power of musical enthusiasm, supply the motive of the story; and the characters are portrayed with great force, pathos, and a touch of homely humour."—Bookseller, Christmas, 1884.

"Miss Blind may be congratulated on 'Tarantella,' her first novel. In the récit (as we have called it) of the musician, Emanuel Sturm, nearly all the interest of the book is concentrated. The violinist, poor and unknown, finds himself at Capri. Accident brings him, one evening, to a frightened group of women, one of whom has just been bitten by the tarantula, and, according to the popular superstition, he is implored to play, in order to drive the poison out of her. He refuses at first, but afterwards consents, and, finding himself almost supernaturally inspired, plays an improvised 'Tarantella' throughout a whole stormy night, finally curing the girl. The tune thus strangely hit on spreads, and ultimately makes him famous, but the love he has conceived for his Antonella brings him almost as much misery as his music brings him fame."—Pall Mall Gazette, February 5, 1885.

"Admiration of the delicate sketching now in vogue should not blind us to the very opposite kind of charm of which 'Tarantella' is full. Entirely poetical in conception (save that it is not written in metre), 'Tarantella' is more essentially a poem than many a narrative written in smooth and elegant verse.... 'Tarantella' is indeed full of strange originality and scenic effects of uncommon powers. The dance among the ruins is not likely to be soon forgotten by the most unimaginative of readers, and it is rarely, we think, that in an English novel the psychology of the poetic temperament has been touched by a hand so delicate and at the same time so strong."—Athenæum, January 17, 1885.

"There is abundant imagination, and the language is generally fresh and vigorous.... The author finds many opportunities of introducing scenes from German life, which are evidently written with intimate knowledge.... This is distinctly a novel to read."—Echo, June 16, 1886.

"This powerful and pathetic tale has carried us more completely out of ourselves and along with it than any work of fiction we have read for many a day.... Her (Miss Blind's) word-pictures glow with rich local colours; she is a complete mistress of the art of dramatic cause and effect. When once fairly under weigh, she never allows the interest to flag for a single moment. Thus it is only when we have laid down the final volume that we have time or inclination to pause and recognize the care and art which have contributed to this triumphant result; to turn back ... and dwell on the author's extraordinary knowledge of the human heart—extraordinary alike for its depth and its range. As for the wit and humour with which the book is freely sprinkled, the poetic and artistic spirit which pervades it throughout, they can only be appreciated on a second or a third perusal."—Life, December 25, 1884.

"'Tarantella' is extremely clever, and the treatment of the weird subject she has chosen picturesque in the extreme. The local colouring is especially fine, and her character studies extremely strong. Thrice welcome in its two-volume form, 'Tarantella' is a book bound to make its mark."—Whitehall Review, December 11, 1884.

"We have very ingenious resources in music and the bite of the tarantula, which alone music is said to heal. Notwithstanding the sense of improbability, we follow the strange fortunes of Antonella, Countess Ogotshka, and her almost magical transformation with interest. Mina, the innocent girl, her friend, is well delineated, and Emanuel Sturm, the wonderful violinist and composer, for whose portrait Paganini has doubtless been available, is original, no less than his friend the painter."—British Quarterly, January, 1885.

"'Tarantella' is a very clever story, with plenty of action and not without tragic incidents. The author has also plenty of humour, and there is at least as much light as shade in the book. Mina is not less delightful than the Countess is objectionable, in spite of her beauty and her daring."—London Figaro, November 20, 1886.

"We shall not spoil the story by hinting at its dénouement. It is a deeply interesting one; and the characters, three of them at least, are sufficiently original to give the author a high rank as a novelist.... The book abounds in striking and interesting pictures of Italian and German life and scenery."—Dublin Mail, November, 1886.

"'Tarantella' is, indeed, a novel unlike the common—full of power and imagination and originality.... It would be unjust to deny to this very remarkable book a large share of what the world calls genius."—Melbourne Argus, March 14, 1885.

"By her recent works, 'The Prophecy of Saint Oran' and the 'Life of George Eliot,' Miss Blind brought herself before the public as a writer of considerable ability, and her latest novel will do much to increase her reputation.... 'Tarantella' deserves to be classed among the best novels of the present day."—Scottish News, June 15, 1886.

"There is an inherent charm about 'Tarantella' which will be apparent to the reader from a perusal of the first chapter. This agreeable quality does not end there, however. The whole of the tale, which is divided into forty-six chapters, is permeated with features of an exceptionally attractive description. Not the least noteworthy character of the story is its novelty. Most of the incidents, which are carefully elaborated and follow in logical sequence, are conspicuous for an airy freshness in nature and treatment. Every chapter has its specific purpose, there being a uniform overflow of idea and sentiment; and each development of the pleasing romance opens to the mental vision of the thoughtful reader incidents of a more or less engrossing description. Continental scenes and customs are described with freeness and perspicuity, and the varied and eventful adventures of the principal characters—pleasingly typical, it may be mentioned, of the romanticism invariably associated with 'love's young dream,' when, as in the present instance, there is a combination of youth and beauty—are recorded with a poetical fervour and gracefulness of diction which are certain to be generally admired."—Western Daily Press, June 2, 1886.

Section 1. General Terms of Use and Redistributing Project Gutenberg electronic works

1.A. By reading or using any part of this Project Gutenberg electronic work, you indicate that you have read, understand, agree to and accept all the terms of this license and intellectual property (trademark/copyright) agreement. If you do not agree to abide by all the terms of this agreement, you must cease using and return or destroy all copies of Project Gutenberg electronic works in your possession. If you paid a fee for obtaining a copy of or access to a Project Gutenberg electronic work and you do not agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement, you may obtain a refund from the person or entity to whom you paid the fee as set forth in paragraph 1.E.8.

1.B. “Project Gutenberg” is a registered trademark. It may only be used on or associated in any way with an electronic work by people who agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement. There are a few things that you can do with most Project Gutenberg electronic works even without complying with the full terms of this agreement. See paragraph 1.C below. There are a lot of things you can do with Project Gutenberg electronic works if you follow the terms of this agreement and help preserve free future access to Project Gutenberg electronic works. See paragraph 1.E below.

1.C. The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation (“the Foundation” or PGLAF), owns a compilation copyright in the collection of Project Gutenberg electronic works. Nearly all the individual works in the collection are in the public domain in the United States. If an individual work is unprotected by copyright law in the United States and you are located in the United States, we do not claim a right to prevent you from copying, distributing, performing, displaying or creating derivative works based on the work as long as all references to Project Gutenberg are removed. Of course, we hope that you will support the Project Gutenberg mission of promoting free access to electronic works by freely sharing Project Gutenberg works in compliance with the terms of this agreement for keeping the Project Gutenberg name associated with the work. You can easily comply with the terms of this agreement by keeping this work in the same format with its attached full Project Gutenberg License when you share it without charge with others.

1.D. The copyright laws of the place where you are located also govern what you can do with this work. Copyright laws in most countries are in a constant state of change. If you are outside the United States, check the laws of your country in addition to the terms of this agreement before downloading, copying, displaying, performing, distributing or creating derivative works based on this work or any other Project Gutenberg work. If you are not located in the United States, you will have to check the laws of the country where you are located before using this eBook.

1.E.2. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is derived from texts not protected by U.S. copyright law (does not contain a notice indicating that it is posted with permission of the copyright holder), the work can be copied and distributed to anyone in the United States without paying any fees or charges. If you are redistributing or providing access to a work with the phrase “Project Gutenberg” associated with or appearing on the work, you must comply either with the requirements of paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 or obtain permission for the use of the work and the Project Gutenberg trademark as set forth in paragraphs 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.3. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is posted with the permission of the copyright holder, your use and distribution must comply with both paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 and any additional terms imposed by the copyright holder. Additional terms will be linked to the Project Gutenberg License for all works posted with the permission of the copyright holder found at the beginning of this work.

1.E.4. Do not unlink or detach or remove the full Project Gutenberg License terms from this work, or any files containing a part of this work or any other work associated with Project Gutenberg.

1.E.5. Do not copy, display, perform, distribute or redistribute this electronic work, or any part of this electronic work, without prominently displaying the sentence set forth in paragraph 1.E.1 with active links or immediate access to the full terms of the Project Gutenberg License.

1.E.6. You may convert to and distribute this work in any binary, compressed, marked up, nonproprietary or proprietary form, including any word processing or hypertext form. However, if you provide access to or distribute copies of a Project Gutenberg work in a format other than “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other format used in the official version posted on the official Project Gutenberg website (www.gutenberg.org), you must, at no additional cost, fee or expense to the user, provide a copy, a means of exporting a copy, or a means of obtaining a copy upon request, of the work in its original “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other form. Any alternate format must include the full Project Gutenberg License as specified in paragraph 1.E.1.

1.E.7. Do not charge a fee for access to, viewing, displaying, performing, copying or distributing any Project Gutenberg works unless you comply with paragraph 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.8. You may charge a reasonable fee for copies of or providing access to or distributing Project Gutenberg electronic works provided that:

- You pay a royalty fee of 20% of the gross profits you derive from the use of Project Gutenberg works calculated using the method you already use to calculate your applicable taxes. The fee is owed to the owner of the Project Gutenberg trademark, but he has agreed to donate royalties under this paragraph to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation. Gutenberg™ trademark. Contact the Foundation as set forth in Section 3 below.

1.F.

1.F.1. Project Gutenberg volunteers and employees expend considerable effort to identify, do copyright research on, transcribe and proofread works not protected by U.S. copyright law in creating the Project Gutenberg™ collection. Despite these efforts, Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, and the medium on which they may be stored, may contain “Defects,” such as, but not limited to, incomplete, inaccurate or corrupt data, transcription errors, a copyright or other intellectual property infringement, a defective or damaged disk or other medium, a computer virus, or computer codes that damage or cannot be read by your equipment.

1.F.2. LIMITED WARRANTY, DISCLAIMER OF DAMAGES - Except for the “Right of Replacement or Refund” described in paragraph 1.F.3, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the owner of the Project Gutenberg™ trademark, and any other party distributing a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work under this agreement, disclaim all liability to you for damages, costs and expenses, including legal fees. YOU AGREE THAT YOU HAVE NO REMEDIES FOR NEGLIGENCE, STRICT LIABILITY, BREACH OF WARRANTY OR BREACH OF CONTRACT EXCEPT THOSE PROVIDED IN PARAGRAPH 1.F.3. YOU AGREE THAT THE FOUNDATION, THE TRADEMARK OWNER, AND ANY DISTRIBUTOR UNDER THIS AGREEMENT WILL NOT BE LIABLE TO YOU FOR ACTUAL, DIRECT, INDIRECT, CONSEQUENTIAL, PUNITIVE OR INCIDENTAL DAMAGES EVEN IF YOU GIVE NOTICE OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGE.

1.F.3. LIMITED RIGHT OF REPLACEMENT OR REFUND - If you discover a defect in this electronic work within 90 days of receiving it, you can receive a refund of the money (if any) you paid for it by sending a written explanation to the person you received the work from. If you received the work on a physical medium, you must return the medium with your written explanation. The person or entity that provided you with the defective work may elect to provide a replacement copy in lieu of a refund. If you received the work electronically, the person or entity providing it to you may choose to give you a second opportunity to receive the work electronically in lieu of a refund. If the second copy is also defective, you may demand a refund in writing without further opportunities to fix the problem.

1.F.4. Except for the limited right of replacement or refund set forth in paragraph 1.F.3, this work is provided to you 'AS-IS', WITH NO OTHER WARRANTIES OF ANY KIND, EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY OR FITNESS FOR ANY PURPOSE.

1.F.5. Some states do not allow disclaimers of certain implied warranties or the exclusion or limitation of certain types of damages. If any disclaimer or limitation set forth in this agreement violates the law of the state applicable to this agreement, the agreement shall be interpreted to make the maximum disclaimer or limitation permitted by the applicable state law. The invalidity or unenforceability of any provision of this agreement shall not void the remaining provisions.

1.F.6. INDEMNITY - You agree to indemnify and hold the Foundation, the trademark owner, any agent or employee of the Foundation, anyone providing copies of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works in accordance with this agreement, and any volunteers associated with the production, promotion and distribution of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, harmless from all liability, costs and expenses, including legal fees, that arise directly or indirectly from any of the following which you do or cause to occur: (a) distribution of this or any Project Gutenberg work, (b) alteration, modification, or additions or deletions to any Project Gutenberg work, and (c) any Defect you cause.

Section 2. Information about the Mission of Project Gutenberg

Project Gutenberg is synonymous with the free distribution of electronic works in formats readable by the widest variety of computers including obsolete, old, middle-aged and new computers. It exists because of the efforts of hundreds of volunteers and donations from people in all walks of life.

Volunteers and financial support to provide volunteers with the assistance they need are critical to reaching Project Gutenberg's goals and ensuring that the Project Gutenberg collection will remain freely available for generations to come. In 2001, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation was created to provide a secure and permanent future for Project Gutenberg and future generations. To learn more about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation and how your efforts and donations can help, see Sections 3 and 4 and the Foundation information page at www.gutenberg.org.

Section 3. Information about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation is a non-profit 501(c)(3) educational corporation organized under the laws of the state of Mississippi and granted tax exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service. The Foundation's EIN or federal tax identification number is 64-6221541. Contributions to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation are tax deductible to the full extent permitted by U.S. federal laws and your state's laws.

The Foundation's business office is located at 41 Watchung Plaza #516, Montclair NJ 07042, USA, +1 (862) 621-9288. Email contact links and up to date contact information can be found at the Foundation's website and official page at www.gutenberg.org/contact

Section 4. Information about Donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

Project Gutenberg™ depends upon and cannot survive without widespread public support and donations to carry out its mission of increasing the number of public domain and licensed works that can be freely distributed in machine-readable form accessible by the widest array of equipment including outdated equipment. Many small donations ($1 to $5,000) are particularly important to maintaining tax exempt status with the IRS.

The Foundation is committed to complying with the laws regulating charities and charitable donations in all 50 states of the United States. Compliance requirements are not uniform and it takes a considerable effort, much paperwork and many fees to meet and keep up with these requirements. We do not solicit donations in locations where we have not received written confirmation of compliance. To SEND DONATIONS or determine the status of compliance for any particular state visit www.gutenberg.org/donate.

While we cannot and do not solicit contributions from states where we have not met the solicitation requirements, we know of no prohibition against accepting unsolicited donations from donors in such states who approach us with offers to donate.

International donations are gratefully accepted, but we cannot make any statements concerning tax treatment of donations received from outside the United States. U.S. laws alone swamp our small staff.

Please check the Project Gutenberg web pages for current donation methods and addresses. Donations are accepted in a number of other ways including checks, online payments and credit card donations. To donate, please visit: www.gutenberg.org/donate.

Section 5. General Information About Project Gutenberg electronic works

Professor Michael S. Hart was the originator of the Project Gutenberg concept of a library of electronic works that could be freely shared with anyone. For forty years, he produced and distributed Project Gutenberg eBooks with only a loose network of volunteer support.

Project Gutenberg eBooks are often created from several printed editions, all of which are confirmed as not protected by copyright in the U.S. unless a copyright notice is included. Thus, we do not necessarily keep eBooks in compliance with any particular paper edition.

Most people start at our website which has the main PG search facility: www.gutenberg.org.

This website includes information about Project Gutenberg, including how to make donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, how to help produce our new eBooks, and how to subscribe to our email newsletter to hear about new eBooks.
