A View of the WEEKLY ESSAYS in this Month.

The Craftsman, by Caleb D'anvers Esq; and Mr Oldcastle.

Jan. 2. No. 235.

r. Oldcastle having begun his remarks on the conduct of the Kings of England, to shew how the spirit of Faction, and the spirit of Liberty had exerted themselves at different times and occasions, had brought his Observations down to the reign of Q. Elizabeth. He begins No. 234, with an Eulogium upon her prudent conduct in the most arduous difficulties that attended her accession to the Throne. These difficulties he explains at large, and goes on No. 235, to speak more largely of the means whereby she establish'd her glory and confirm'd herself in the affections of her People. Her first principle was to be neither fear'd nor despis'd by those she govern'd. He mentions some instances wherein she discover'd her wisdom in both these respects, particularly in maintaining her Prerogative, which altho' she was fond of, yet took care it never should be grievous, or if it should happen so to particular persons, that it should appear specious to the publick. The effects, he says, of a bare-fac'd Prerogative are not so dangerous to Liberty as the attempts which are made to surprize and undermine it. Wherefore Q. Eliz. never kept up a Standing Army, but placed her security in the affection of her People. With respect to parties he extols her moderation and equity, by which conduct she stood on firmer ground, and had less to fear from the spirit of Faction. She neither hastily espoused the party which she favour'd, nor inflam'd the spirits of the adverse party. The Papists and Puritans she used with lenity, 'till their evil practices made it necessary to execute rigours, and even then she distinguished Papists in conscience from Papists in Faction, nor condemn'd the Zeal of the Puritans, but sometimes censured their Violence. He says from Cambden, she bestowed her favours with so much caution, and so little distinction, as to prevent either party from gaining the ascendant over her, whereby she remained Mistress of her own self, and preserved both their affections and her own power and authority entire.

He proceeds to justify Q. Eliz. from the imputation of avarice, by observing that she neither hoarded up, nor was lavish of the publick money. Quotes a saying of the famous Burleigh, that, He never cared to see the treasury swell like a disorder'd spleen, when the other parts of the common-wealth were in a Consumption; and his mistress thought that money in the pockets of her subjects was better than in her own.

It was her maxim to save for the publick not for herself, and to measure her riches by the riches of the nation; refused supplies offered, and remitted payment of supplies granted, when the publick service did not require it. The two great principles of her Economy were 1st. Not suffering her Officers to enrich themselves by fraud or clandestine management. 2d. Never attempting to do any thing with money that could be done with wisdom or courage. (See p. 319.) For which cites several instances; and observes how greatly she promoted commerce, and increased the fleet of England, which before was inconsiderable.

Jan. 9. Craftsman, No. 236.

All his oratory here is pointed at the person of a certain great man whom he represents as affecting all the qualities and requisites of the most consummate statesman, without any qualifications in him necessary for so high a post. He ridicules him for a ready habit of lying, because it is sometimes proper for a politician to conceal the truth: Charges him with a dark mysterious proceeding on all Occasions, because secrecy is requir'd in a statesman, and adds, that 'tis a proof that his secret services are great by the large sums requir'd for carrying them on. Says, good Intelligence is another excellent property in an able statesman, and therefore our mock-minister apes him in this particular; gives a long detail of instances to illustrate what he advances.

Confesses, indeed, that the fluctuation of affairs hath oblig'd the ministry to go from court to court; to make treaties, which (as obsrv'd by the author of the London Journal) it is by no means proper to execute—and adds, They found us engag'd in a treaty with the Emperor; but they have very wisely vary'd from it—They made a Treaty with France; and have hitherto very wisely observ'd it—they sent a large squadron of ships, with an hostile appearance, and without any declaration of war, into the West-

Indies; but they wisely gave the Admiral instructions not to make use of any other force than perswasion—They sent another squadron into the Baltick; and a third into the Mediterranean; but they very wisely gave the Commanders of them the same pacifick instructions; even tho' Spain was actually at war with us, and attacking one of our most valuable possessions —They afterwards enter'd into a treaty with Spain; but they have hitherto very wisely declin'd to put it in execution; and if they are now negotiating another treaty at Vienna, as we have been told, I doubt not that the same wisdom will appear in it, whether it is design'd to be put in execution or not.

He concludes by reducing his harangue into a kind of problematical order, and makes a great many bold interrogatories, and answering of which, he imagines, would lay his opponents under the dilemma, of disapproving their own conduct, or allowing the justness of his arguments; such as these; Will our M——r execute the treaty of Seville, or will he not? would a Reconciliation at Vienna, tho' justifiable in other persons, be so in him? hath not the Emperor shewn that he does not fear us? will he not affect to show that he doth not want us? and many other queries to the like purpose. See London Journal of the 16th. p. 6, 7. and Free Briton of the 14th, p. 16, 17.

Craftsman, Jan. 16. No. 237.

Complains of the hardship that the authors of the Craftsman lye under; that a certain gentleman makes use of his authority to restrain their pens, while he employs others to throw about scandal at random; and others are suffer'd to call the authors of the Craftsman, traytors and villains!

Makes some reflections on the London Journal Jan. 9. which had took to pieces his Hague Letter, concerning the report of a negotiation at Vienna.

Mr Osborne in the London Journal having exposed a paradox from the Craftsman, that the ministry are never right; when they do what the Craftsmen count wrong: and yet wrong, when they do what the Craftsmen count right; the Craftsman observes, that 'tis allow'd that an accommodation with the Emperor is a right measure, but attended with fatal consequences, and almost insuperable difficulties; because such measures might be resented by other courts as an infraction of treaties, which Mr. Osborne says, were only occasional and temporal.

The Craftsman supposes these alliances to be such, but then asks, Will our allies understand 'em in the same sense! If not, what may be the consequences?

As to what the Craftsman had granted, that the fulness of time was come to desert one ally, and to Mr. Osborne's reasons for such desertion, he replies by demanding, Whether it was not equally reasonable long ago?

Osborne had ask'd—if upon the non-execution of this treaty, occasion'd by the different views of the allies, another court should grow stubborn, what must we do? This the Craftsman answers by another question, that is, Whether the different views of the allies do not proceed from their different interests?

Craftsman, Jan. 23. No. 238.

From the Minutes of Mr. Oldcastle.

This paper continues remarks on Q. Elizabeth's reign; and is a long Encomium on her management of treaties with foreign powers, which she always conducted in such a manner as was best suited to the good of her people and the honour and dignity of the nation. Her Ministry went wisely and steadily on to their own great purposes of preserving the peace of Europe, and the trade and prosperity of the Kingdom. (See Free Brit. p. 8, 326.)

Craftsman, Jan. 30. No. 239.

Maintains the liberty of the Press, in opposition to those who argue for the necessity of some restraint, which, if granted, he says, might be made use of to destroy all newspapers whatsoever, except the Gazette.

After repeating most of the points in debate, he defends his Hague letter (for which the government thought fit to call him to an account) in as much as there was nothing in it asserted, but only supposed; and adds, he has as much right to reason upon suppositions as Mr. Osborne; and to censure the conduct of ministers, as he hath to approve it; for unless the right is reciprocal, the liberty of the press is no liberty at all.

As to what Mr. Walsingham had allow'd, that we have a right to reason upon political affairs, tho' not to lay down false facts; he replies, that he has asserted no falsehoods, and only exercised the natural right of every Free Briton, to offer his opinion on affairs.

Concludes with saying, that if he should be call'd upon to defend himself in a court of justice he must submit to the law; and abide the judgment of his country. See p. 298.

London Journal. Jan. 2. No. 596. against the Craftsman, No. 233.

The Craftsman having in his said Journal advanced several arguments for the disbanding the Army and repealing the Riot Act, the Author of the London Journal undertakes here to confute them. He admits that a Government ought to have no more power than is necessary for the safety and protection, the preservation and happiness of the people, but adds that the laws alone, without a power to execute, and provide against all sudden emergencies, and possible dangers, will not answer these ends. Asserts that the possibility of powers being abused is not a sufficient reason to strip the Government of such a security, or to lodge the safety of the King in the affections of the people, which are variable and easily seduced, and (as the Craftsman allows) very precarious, when he makes a doubt whether his present Majesty enjoys them. Not only Armies and Riot Acts, but even the very law itself, by ill designing men may be used for our destruction, which were made for our safety. But must we part with the law, because we may suffer by the law? Every nation round us is arm'd, and must we alone stand naked and defenceless? If the liberties of many nations have been destroy'd by standing armies, the liberties of many have been preserv'd by them. Mentions the Revolution as an instance, and believes the Pr. of Orange would not have so easily succeeded, had the army been as true to the King as they were to their country. That the disbanding the army after the peace of Riswick embolden'd the French King to set his Grandson on the Throne of Spain, and declare the Pretender, which involv'd us in a ten years war:

That nothing more intimidated the Ministry in the last four years of Q. Anne's reign, than the honesty and bravery of the gentlemen of the army.

As to the riot act, he says that power is necessary to prevent riots and tumults, and to disperse the people when so assembled. To this purpose a law is made which tells them the consequences of it; a proper officer gives them warning; and if after this they will stay and be hang'd, 'tis their own fault.

He allows, that shou'd a Justice of the peace assume the liberty of reading the proclamation where a member of parliament is chusing, he ought to be hang'd. He don't see how this act can injure us any other way; for while the constitution is preserv'd, and our liberties taken care of by the government, the people can't be unjustly hurt by it.

The remaining part of his discourse is spent in setting forth the unreasonableness of repealing this act, from the behaviour of the authors of the Craftsman and their abettors, who by their conduct in exciting uneasiness in the people, have made it necessary to continue it in force.

London Journal, Jan. 9, No. 597.

Contains remarks upon a paper in the Craftsman, called, An extract of a letter from the Hague.

The author begins with observing, that tho' the pretence of the Craftsman is liberty and patriotism, yet his real design is opposition to the court.

He then reflects on the Craftsman's incoherent way of arguing, just as it serves to vent his spleen; for according to him the ministry are never right when they do what he counts wrong, and always wrong when they do what the Craftsman counts right.

When we were broken with the Emperor we were quite wrong, and now we are going to unite with the Emperor we are equally wrong.

This paper, or letter, the Journalist says, is made up of mere conjectures, and suppositions; or else insinuations, unsupported by facts or reason: justifies our ministry from the aspersion that we are undoing what we have been doing these five years; and insists that we have been continuing to do the same thing, that is, pursuing the peace and happiness of the nation by different means, as alterations happen'd, or circumstances varied.

He then answers the Craftsman's charge of deserting one ally, by supposing that this ally may have views inconsistent with the two other allies, and so stand disposed to act contrary to the design of that treaty and our interest. England is not obliged to execute the treaty, unless the other allies will act their part.

The Craftsman charges the ministry with obstinate perseverance in bad measures, and now with a precipitate alteration of councils. This the author of this Journal denies, and says, it should be more justly called, a wise and prudent accommodating themselves to the late unfortunate juncture of affairs. Changing hands is not an alteration of councils, but a conduct which wise and honest men ought to observe.

London Journal, Jan. 16. No. 598.

*Reflections on the present State of Affairs, occasion'd by the Craftsman,
Jan. 9.*

He takes notice of the Craftsman's method of drawing of characters, in which he offends all the laws of honesty, propriety and decorum; charges without evidence or reason, and without common sense; makes his Mock-minister a composition of insolence, malice, and a small talent for ridicule, yet is not half so odious as the Mock-patriot who drest him; who, while he counterfeits publick virtue, is infamously abusing the publick: clothes himself with the love of his country, while he is making a jest of it; and injures the community, while he pretends the highest regard for it; and who, because we have tried all possible ways to preserve the peace, calls our ministers Dupes of all the powers of Europe, political Mendicants, strolling about from court to court.

The Craftsman having advanc'd, that we are inexcuseable for not having foreseen and prevented these conjunctures in which nothing can be done which is not a fault to do; our author asks, what conjunctures those are, in which a man is not at liberty to act reasonably and honestly? or can it be a fault so to act?

By the treaty of Seville we only yielded to Spain a point, which, in real interest, concerned some of the contending powers. It could hardly be imagin'd that the Emperor would have put himself to the expence, or hazard of a war, for the small deviation of the Quadruple Alliance, had he not been informed, that the allies could not agree about the war; or that they disagreed about the scene of action; or, for the sake of peace, the allies might all concur to wait one Year to see what the Emperor would do. Any of these suppositions affords a reason why the treaty of Seville is not yet executed.

As to the queries put by the Craftsman, (p. 4.) they are all ask'd for the sake of the two last, which demand, Will not this measure of making up with the Emperor be attended with worse consequences than turning out the minister? and——Will the objections against it, be so strong, if manag'd by another hand?——he answers no; for persons don't alter the relation of things, or change the nature of actions. If it is reasonable, 'tis equally so whoever does it.

London Journal, Jan. 23. No. 599.

By the behaviour of the ministry for some years past, it evidently appears, that the preserving the peace of Europe, and securing the trade and prosperity of the kingdom, has been their greatest concern; but whether means taken to that end have been always right, is not so easily determin'd.

The sword indeed might have cut our way to peace, and added to our glory, but the event might have prov'd a general war.——Our ministry thought wisdom better than power. To this end, when our enemies arm'd we put ourselves in a posture of defence; we suffer'd little insults, as a proof that we were willing to be one with a nation with whom it is our interest to be one. To this end we united those who were disjoin'd, and separated those who were united; still avoiding a war.

But while the ministry have been industrious in preventing confusions, and watching opportunities of accommodating differences, their adversaries have practis'd all imaginary ways to insult and embarrass them.

Osborne clears himself from the imputation which the Craftsman had charg'd him with, viz. that the supposition that we are going to unite with the Emperor, will be attended with perfidy, infraction of treaties, and violation of faith.

London Journal, Jan. 30. No. 600.

This Journal contains observations on Mr. Oldcastle's minutes of Q. Elizabeth's reign, which he affirms is a collection of Scraps without order or method, coherence or connexion, being sounds without sense, confusedly thrown at the present administration. See p. 3.

Admits that this Queen was a wise and glorious Princess, but says that our Constitution, and the exercise of Power at home, is vastly better than what they were in her reign, and our Foreign Affairs transacted with as much wisdom.

Quotes Mr. Oldcastle's own words, in which he describes the Wisdom and Address of Q. Elizabeth, to describe the Wisdom and Address of the present Minister in negotiating Foreign Affairs. (See p. 3.)

Lastly, he gives several maxims out of Cambden and Francis Osborne's memoirs of this Queen, such as her preferring peace to war; her delaying resentment of injuries till proper seasons; her judgment of her subjects abilities, which she dextrously fitted for her favours and their employments; her steady resolution not to ransom herself from her enemies at the price of their preferments who lov'd her.

Fog's Journal, Saturday, January 9. No. 120.

A Letter is inserted, containing remarks on Mr. Chubb's discourse concerning Reason, in which is asserted, that it either is, or ought to be a sufficient guide in matters of Religion.

This Proposition the remarker explains in the words of Mr. Chubb, and assents to, and then proceeds to consider it more particularly. Does not comprehend Mr. Chubb's observation, i. e. The Question is not whether there be absolutely such a capacity in man: for if man has such a capacity, as Mr. Chubb insists, he may be truly said to be the possessor of it. Nor can the remarker understand the sense of that clause, he ought to have, because it has no relation to the dispute between Mr. Chubb and the Bp of London, i. e. what man now has, and is capable of.

The remarker goes on to shew, that the author's argument to prove that man ought to have such a capacity, is needless, because it is universally assented to.

Mr. Chubb argues, That as our species was no ways accessory to Adam's transgression, 'tis unreasonable and unequal that they should suffer by it.

To this is answer'd, that there are other difficulties in the general scheme of providence as hard to be solved; as that, whole families are involved in misery by the mismanagement of their ancestor; the entailment of chronick and terrible disorders on children by the debaucheries of a father, for that it is wrong intolerable, and against reason to punish children for the crimes of their fathers. But all these difficulties which seem to clash with the wisdom and goodness of God, are rectify'd in a future state, for which we are manifestly fitted and design'd.

Fog's Journal, Jan. 16. No. 121.

This paper begins with a piece of humourous irony; observing that as criticks never appear so disappointed as when they meet with beauties in an author; so the present sett of disaffected political writers conceive no small joy to see their country involv'd in difficulties; nor can they be worse mortified than to see this nation flourish in trade, wealth and credit.

That Osborne (writer of the London Journal) and Walsingham (of the Free Briton) affirm, That the present crew of factious writers proceeds on this principle. Descants upon the measures for some years past; the destruction of the Spanish Fleet in the Mediterranean, whereby Sicily was gain'd for the Emperor, and the preservation of the balance of Europe so ill settled by that wicked treaty of Utrecht.

Mentions some of the great Actions which have stirr'd up the envy of the disaffected; as, the sending annual fleets into the Baltick; the treaty of Hanover; the maintaining a body of Hessian troops; sending squadrons to the coasts of Spain and the West-Indies, the expedition to Spithead and lastly, the treaty of Seville. This last, he ironically says, had like to have kill'd the disaffected quite, because it was so wisely calculated for establishing a general tranquillity, and for the advancing the trade of Great Britain!

He goes on throwing his sarcasms at the writers on the side of the present ministry, who having challeng'd the disaffected to show any one step taken destructive of the true interest of their country, instances in the opening the harbour of Dunkirk, the Island of St. Lucia planted by the French; raising recruits in Ireland for the service of France; all which the two writers aforementioned, convinced the world were groundless, by telling the authors of these reports, they lyed.

He makes some reflections on Mr. Osborne's observations of the ill conduct of the ministry in the latter end of Q. Anne's reign; as the endeavours to break the power of the Dissenters, and to weaken the security of the Hanover succession; setting aside the Quaker's affirmation; the disbanding the army. All which Fog laughs at! and concludes with his surprize, that when he considers with how much good sense these two writers have exposed the actions of that Tory ministry, and how they have defended the measures of the present, there should be a disaffected person left in the kingdom.

Fog's Journal, Jan. 23. No. 123.

This Paper consists of reflections on a pamphlet, intituled, A Defence of the Measures of the present Administration.

He begins with the observation which the author had made: "That complaints and outcries are no foundation for supposing defects in publick counsels; for in a frame of government like ours, a continuance of the same administration will always lessen the popularity of the ministry.

"The frequent use of this observation, Fog says, is enough to shew its good sense. 'Twas first started by the Rev. Author of the Enquiry, all the anniversary pamphlets have had it since, and it has been repeated by Mr. Osborne 75 times; by Mr. Walsingham twice as many; nor is there any thing in this pamphlet but what has the authority of, at least, 50 repetitions": yet he cannot subscribe to his opinion; for supposing it true, it is a sure sign that affairs are well conducted; but if the contempt of all men of sense be added to this clamour, oh! then we pronounce him an angel.

He goes on to quote another passage; “That the Peace of Utrecht left us on good terms with Spain, which might have turn’d to our advantage, had our affairs been wisely manag’d in the late reign; but as they were not, it laid the foundation of the several perplexities that have since attended us.”

This conduct of the last reign, Fog says, ought to be apply’d to a person or two since dead, and not to the present ministers. Adds, that he might have spar’d his encomium of the Utrecht treaty, or shewn us the folly of cultivating a good understanding with the Emperor and Spain at the same time, by which our affairs, every where were left in a stupid calm; for had they contriv’d to make either of ’em our enemy, we should always have had a quarrel and a treaty depending, and so have given vent to our humours and money too.

The author having said, that when the present ministry came into power, they observ’d from the complexion of things mischief must be gath’ring some where, which prov’d to be an alliance betwixt Spain and the Emperor. This, Fog affirms, was very sagacious; but that the treaty he speaks of was, and still is deny’d by both the parties.

He then criticises on several other parts of the discourse, especially on those which extol the conduct of our ministry and their management of our affairs, relating to the inaction of the squadron sent to the West Indies, and keeping back the Spanish Treasure, thereby rendring it useless, as to any dangerous purposes.

The wisdom of this conduct, Fog takes notice, proved itself in the Event; The Spaniards were provoked; sent out their privateers, and pillag’d our merchants!

As to humouring the Q. of Spain in settling the Italian dukedoms on Don Carlos, says, sneeringly, besides obliging a fair Lady, Great Britain has gain’d the treaty of Seville!

Fog’s Journal, Jan. 30. No. 124.

The Press, says he, has lately swarm'd with writing pro and con, upon the present posture of affairs, by which we find that one party is of opinion, that ministers of state are no more than men; t'other will have 'em to be angels (that is while they continue in power.)—Here you read, that Affairs are in no better situation than they should be—there, that we have neither past miscarriages, or present grievances to complain of, and that the nation never was in so flourishing a condition. One D'Anvers, and, if I mistake not, one Fog, are accused of seditiously asserting that a Crow is black, but the writers on the other side, have with infinite Wit, proved a black Crow to be the whitest bird of all the feather'd kind.

He proceeds thus merrily to remark on a pamphlet intitled, Considerations on the present state of affairs, with regard to the Number of Forces in the Pay of Great Britain; and endeavours, in his ironical way, to overthrow the several arguments advanced by the author for maintaining the Hessian troops, and concludes with giving his opinion that they will be very far from convincing the disaffected.

The Grub-street Journal, Thursday, Jan. 14. No. 53.

Dr. Quibus chuses for the subject of his discourse the operation designed to be performed on the ears of one Rey, a condemn'd malefactor, by Mr. Cheselden. This he treats in a ludicrous manner, and supposes that if Mr. Rey should prove so unphilosophical as to give the surgeon the slip as soon as the operation is over, we should be as much in the dark as we were before. He declares his opinion, that not only the drum, but the whole organ, or the ear it self, is of no use at all in hearing, and would know the truth of his conjecture by seeing the ears of some malefactor entirely extirpated. Recommends it as a thing of great use, if instead of executing malefactors they were made to undergo such kind of experiments. Trial may be made whether the Retina of the eye is of any use in seeing. A needle might be introduced into the eye, and the Retina quite remov'd. The spleen might be taken out of some vile malefactor, and an observation made whether their inclinations to evil courses depend not on a superfluity of the Atra Bilis. Another experiment he recommends as of great consequence, that is, whether the tying up one of the testicles would not determine the sex of a child begotten at such a time. By this means, he says, many illustrious families might be inform'd of a just and certain method of obtaining an heir to their estates. See p. 19.

The Grub-street Journal, Thursday, Jan. 14. No. 54.

The author begins with the Laureat's new-year's ode (for which see p. 20.) and subjoins to it some explanatory notes; the substance of which is contain'd in the following short remarks.

Line 1. The eternity of the world is here maintain'd, tho' Dr. Clarke had objected against it.

3. Old Janus, a heathenish emblem, is supplanted by old Time, as more familiar to christian readers.

5. To this is objected, making Spring a living person calling for birth as it were to old Time; whereas old Time had bid spring pass, so no occasion for spring to call. Which is defended thus; When time bids spring pass, it might not be ready, but as soon as it was, it calls for birth.

Line 7. Harvest in summer is very early, and something unusual.

9. But not soon enough, it seems, because here each season is said to bring THEIR stores TO winter's wants, till warmer genial suns recall the spring—However Mr. Cibber's authority makes it current.

15. An admirable improvement of Nocte pluit tota, &c. which to set in a true light is translated and imitated:

*It rains all night, the shows returns with day:
Thus Jove and Cæsar bear divided sway.*

Plenty is Heav'n's, and Peace our Monarch's care, Thus Jove and George divided Empire share.

But to this was objected, that we are not only indebted to heaven for plenty, but for peace too, tho' like marriages said to be made there, it was not yet come down.

21. It is queried what war and peace the poet means here.

22. An emendation of this line is offer'd to make it clear,

We triumph most when MOST the farmer feeds.

and the Beef eaters at St. James's, are appeal'd to for the justness of it.

23, 24. The elegance of these lines are literally defended, but the propriety and cadence of them are called in question.

25, 26, 27, 21. These seem inconsistent with the 19th and 20th verses.

As in the 35th, and 46th lines, Phæbus had roll'd in vain, till Albion could behold such a sight as at present on the throne, well might the poet make the exclamation in the 37th and 38th.

39, 40. As it is impossible always to REACH our own desires, tho' required by heaven, it is proposed to alter it to TEACH; that is, instruct united hearts to address the throne by their own loyal desires.

41. Read selfish, as better than self-born; all views whatever being such.

46. Suns probably should be read sons, because it seems to be a contradiction to ever circling sun, line 1.

The criticiser concludes with observing, that when a song is good sense, it must be made nonsense before it is made musick; so when a song is nonsense, there's no other way but by singing it to make it seem tolerable sense.

Grub-street Journal, Jan. 21. No. 55.

The author begins with observing that nothing has increased their society so much as poetry: We are taught it at school; if not, believe we are born poets. Every corner abounds with its professors; the bellman nightly salutes his master and mistress: the marshal, his gentlemen soldiers every Christmas; every street rings with ballads; the royal palace resounds with odes; and every church-yard with its productions: Stephen Duck's good fortune has occasion'd a poor Weaver in Spittle-fields to publish a miscellany of poems which he addresses to the Queen, and introduces with this line.

Thy fortune, Duck, affects my kindred mind;

Wherefore Grub st. presumes to represent to her Majesty, that the best way to encourage the Weaver, would be to wear British manufactures; and the thresher, by giving him a small farm in the country; and to restrain both from writing a line more in rhyme or measure.

Apprehends, that from this general inclination to write, they shall be oblig'd, like the royal society, to discourage intruders amongst them, and, to prevent misunderstanding, proposes that no person shall be a member of both societies at the same time.

Grub-street Journal, Jan. 21. No. 56.

Makes some remarks concerning the management of controversies between the political writers. This he illustrates by two examples; by which he would intimate the spirit that animates and governs both parties. The first is a quotation of two severe personal characters, from a pamphlet entitled Sedition and Defamation display'd, in a Letter to the Author of the Craftsman. The other is some paragraphs attacking two characters on the opposite side, drawn from the Pamphlet call'd, A proper reply to a late scurrilous libel intituled Sedition and Defamation display'd; in a Letter to the author, by Caleb D'anvers Esq; which four characters he supposes imaginary, for if they were real, no man of sense, honour, or honesty would espouse them.

Weekly Register, Jan. 9. No. 39.

The Register publishes a mystical letter from a club of Gardners, wherein is figuratively describ'd the evils which the fraternity have occasionally suffer'd from the depredations of Locusts, Palmer-worms, Caterpillars, and other pestiferous vermin. Several discourses were made by the members concerning the Origin and Progress of these their common enemies. One of the company said, that the first appearance of them is in a sort of spawn, spread over the cabbage-leaves, which gradually rises into Grubs. This Grubbean race, he reckons, are descendants of the Egyptian Locusts, and the Palmer-worms and Caterpillars, a spurious offspring of the Locusts. Another of the society believes they are of an English extraction; gives several significations of the word Grub, and then runs a parallel between the insects called Grubs, and the Grubbean Society, or Grubstreet Journalists. To which he adds a remark, that 'tis something strange a body of Men should set themselves up to make a merit of other men's faults: they must of course be despicable themselves, because they take a pleasure in making others appear so.

Remembers that in the late wartime many postscripts to the Flying-Posts were bawl'd about with abundance of news, but scarce a word of truth: So that paper gain'd the name of the Lying Post, and was called Grub-street News. And still it's a common appellation, when we hear full and true accounts cry'd by our doors, 'tis Grubstreet, all Grubstreet.

Weekly Register, Jan. 16. No. 40.

On Ridicule, address'd to the authors of the Grubstreet-Journal.

Says, Ridicule is a general practice, and proceeds either from the wantonness of our own vanity, or contempt of others frailties. We take the same pleasure in scandal as monkies do in mischief. Wonders why the Tea-table should be thought the mother of scandal, or the nurse of ridicule, when all mankind is pursuing the same pleasure under different disguises. They condemn Censure in others, that they may indulge it themselves. The taverns are as necessary to it as private houses. Courts are esteemed the source of politeness and good manners; theatres of ingenuity, churches of sanctity; yet all are infected with the evil of scandal. Seems to prefer the gaming-table as freest from irony and slander; avarice being a spirit that allows of no rival. This vice is contagious, and runs thro' the whole people: it wanders every where, like an ignis fatuus, and is only at home in the Grubstreet-Journal.

Don't pretend how far this libertinism of speech is allowable, but is certain that every moral man will use it only for the sake of him he censures; and every gentleman will make good manners the only rule of behaviour. All men are jealous of their characters, and we must have a due complaisance for one frailty while we would reform another; for the insolence of knowledge is as insupportable as the affectation of folly. The subjects of ridicule are to be justly chosen and carefully distinguished.

Concludes with some Reflections on the authors of the Grubstreet-Journal, who have undertaken the drudgery of invective under pretence of being champions for politeness.

Weekly Register, Jan. 24. No. 41.

He remarks, that from an ambition of emulating, without a capacity to equal another's excellencies, have arisen an infinite number of pretenders to reputation. The regular physician is intruded upon by the empyrick; the masterly painter is slighted in favour of impudence and ignorance; the most elegant and chaste compositions of musick, are forc'd to give way to amusements less polite: Quackery interferes with trade, and undermines honesty. The pedlar stiles himself a merchant; No wonder then that authors of every character are so wretchedly personated. Exclaims against bad writers, from the Court-scribbler to the Grubstreet hackney.

Proceeds to the description of a good author; says, his principal end, in occasional writings, should be to entertain the publick innocently and genteely; to insinuate knowledge in the disguise of amusement, and trifle the world into virtue and good manners: he should consider every reader as a critick and a gentleman, and be earful of offending either: points out what a writer should observe, who would recommend himself and entertain the world; i. e. an important subject, a clear and expressive method, a flowing and natural stile, imagination and judgment, truth and impartiality, modesty in his images, pity for the failings of human nature, and endeavours to amend 'em. He shou'd think himself a son of the publick and be an example of the generous spirit he would recommend; he should be able to race the passions thro' all their disguises; have knowledge in his head, and good humour in his heart: he should be an enemy to vice, but a friend to all mankind.

Weekly Register, Jan. 30. No. 42.

This is a continuation of a former discourse upon criticism, wherein he points out several excellencies that distinguish a good critick from a bad.

He then considers the manner of criticism, that some are Fox-hunters in censure, and declare war against all writers in general. Some are like Fig and Sutton, the declar'd antagonists to one another. Some are Whigs and Tories, divided into parties, always applauding themselves, and condemning their opposers. Some are Grubstreet hawkers, who make a penny of throwing about censure at random without distinction or regard of persons.

The design of criticism is amendment; and concludes with acknowledging his own failings, and his readiness to be handsomely corrected.

The Universal Spectator, Saturday Jan. 2. No. 117.

*Great wits to madness nearly are ally'd
And thin partitions do their bounds divide.*

Dryden.

Mr. Stonecastle, the nominal author, begins this day's entertainment with observing that men are not born for themselves; that we are not only bound to relieve the necessities of others, but in all our dealings, &c. with mankind to render ourselves grateful to all, offensive to none, much less take pleasure in doing disagreeable things. Says there is a sett of people who are frequently committing ill-bred, rude, and even shocking things, which they excuse by only saying, 'tis their humour. Instances in a certain knight, who never spoke himself, nor suffer'd any body in his presence to speak louder than to be barely heard; insomuch that his servants, as they were accustom'd to be mutes at home, behav'd like no body when they came abroad.

His nephew Silvio, just come from the university, declaims on every subject you can mention, and imagines himself master of every science. Whatever is the topick of discourse, he will suffer no body to talk upon it but himself; his uncle has but one hope of curing him of his folly, that is, by engaging him to talk of maritime affairs before captain Firebal of the Tempest, who, very probably, will beat him into better manners.

Beauty itself loses its attraction when accompanied with these humours.

Artemisa is exquisitely handsome, but takes the liberty of abusing every body at random, by asking ill-natur'd questions, and being witty upon others imperfections: excuses herself by saying, 'tis her way to tell unlucky truths and she can't help it.

Crito is a man of sense, learning, and accuracy of judgment; but this ought not to privilege him to treat every writer he does not like with opprobrious language.

Belliza has wit and beauty, accompanied with a solid judgment. Yet all this will hardly palliate the disgust she gives people with whom she eats. She never uses a fork, is be-greased up to the knuckles, and by her immoderate taking of snuff, which frequently falling among her sauce, she gives her guests their bellies full before they have half din'd. Concludes with a merry story of a certain Colonel, whose flight it was, when he had drank a glass or two too much, to fire off and play tricks with his pistols. One night the col. having drank too freely order'd, his footman, who was an Irishman newly hired, to bring his pistols, Teague obey'd; the Col. loaded them both, and having lock'd the door commanded his man to hold one of the candles at arm's length, till he snuff'd it with a ball. Prayers and intreaties were in vain, and comply he must, and did, tho' trembling; the Col. perform'd the operation at the first attempt, then laying down his pistols was going to unlock the door. Teague catches up that which was loaded, 'Arra Maishter, says he, but now you must take up t'other candle, and let me have my shoot too.' The col. call'd him rogue and rascal to no purpose, Teague was now vested with power, and would be obey'd: Accordingly his master extended the candle, but this being the first time of Teague's performing, he not only miss'd, but shot off a button from the breast of the colonel's coat. So narrow an escape had a good effect, and cur'd him of this humour of turning marksman in his drink.

The Universal Spectator, Jan. 9. No. 118.

Contains two Letters, with the Spectator's answers to them.

The first is from a gentleman, who, about three months since, fell passionately in love with a lady at a ball; gives an account of his courtship, and of the kind reception of his addresses during that time, till of a sudden, without any reason given, or objection made, the lady sent him a peremptory message to desist any further pursuit. Complains that 'tis ungenerous and unjust to keep people so long in suspense, with no design but to gratify female pride and vanity.

To this the Spectator replies, That the lady gave him fair play, and an opportunity of rendring himself agreeable; which when she found he could not, she very civilly, by a third person, desir'd him to desist. However, he says, 'tis but reasonable that the lady should give him a certificate of his good behaviour during his courtship.

The second letter is from a young lady of 15, who signs herself Carolina, which may be summ'd up and comprized in those two queries.

1. May a Woman entertain several lovers at the same time?

2. After a Woman has once receiv'd a man's addresses, may she with honour turn him off?

To the first he answers, That such a licence might be granted, if nothing was design'd by it but the chusing of the most deserving for a husband; but considering the inconveniences that would necessarily attend such an indulgence, he durst not allow it.

The second query he grants in the affirmative; that is, if she discovers him false and base, or incapable of making her happy.

Universal Spectator, January, 16. No. 119.

Contains a letter from a physician, in which he describes the miserable condition of his patients, that apply to him on the venereal account. Of this sort the most unfortunate and pitiful object is a woman of the town, who, if not quite abandon'd, gives a loose to her passion on such occasions. The consideration of her past, present, and future state, fills her with distraction, and involves her in endless evils, from which death only can deliver her.

Proceeds to argue with the infamous authors of the misery of these wretches, who first seduce the poor young creatures from their innocence, and then triumph in their wickedness. He who debauches a maiden, and then exposes her to want and shame, is arrived to such a monstrous height of villany, that no word in our language can reach it. Mentions a further species of cruelty, that is, the necessity some of these poor wretches are under, if with child, of applying to a magistrate to procure some pitiful maintenance for her unfortunate babe.—When all that is to be done by the father, is to make the best bargain he can with the church-wardens to take it off his hands; which is commonly done for a treat, and 10 or 12*l.* So the child is placed upon the parish, and the woman upon the town.

Univers. Spectator, Jan. 23. No. 120.

Entertains his readers with two letters; the first is from Tristitia Stale, who complains that she is continually persecuted, merely because she is an old maid.

Virginity, she says, has not always been a reproach, sees no encouragement in matrimony, and begs the Spectator to reprimand the malaperts, who ridicule chastity; adds, that a single life in woman was esteem'd among the ancient as well as modern Romans; vestals then, and nuns now.

The other letter is from Charlotte Wilful, a young lady of 19, who says she has two admirers. The first is 'squire Scrape, who has 1200*l. per annum*, which he keeps in his own hands and farms himself, and therefore is favour'd in his pretensions by her father.

Mr Myrtle, her mother's favourite, is the other, who, by his own account is near 40, by that of his acquaintance 10 years older, has squander'd away a good estate, but by the death of an uncle is now worth 1000*l. per annum*, and is a perfect humourist.

But to both these she prefers Mr Plume of the Inner-Temple, who has no estate, but is of a sweet temper. Concludes with desiring Mr Stonecastle to declaim on parents making choices for their Children, with a stroke on antiquated beaus, and rural animals, and to recommend a fine gentleman with no fortune. Desires, by way of postscript, that he would not delay publishing her letter, because Mr Plume and she had agreed to run away together on Tuesday next.

The Universal Spectator, Jan. 30. No. 121.

Among all those amusements people find to pass away the time, Poesy and Musick are the most elegantly entertaining. By the ancients they were look'd upon as immediately inspired from above, and the professors reverenc'd as sacred, and the favourites of heaven.

He adds, that we excel the ancients in musick, if not in poetry, and prefers a good English song, tho' set to a common tune, before the Italian trifling unnatural compositions. The one ravishes the ear only, the other entertains the understanding also.—Hence he takes occasion to recommend A collection of Lyric poems and songs with musick annexed, lately publish'd.

Free Briton, Jan. 7. No. 58.

The author refutes a falsity advanced by Mr D'anvers in the Craftsman of the 13th of Dec. wherein, speaking of the riot-act, he says, "That an election of Church-wardens hath been already made a handle for putting this law in execution. That the master of a small vessel was kept a whole year in prison, to the loss of his voyage, and almost the ruin of his family, upon happening to go thro' the church-yard, from visiting a friend, an hour after the proclamation was read. Nay, that the poor man might have run the hazard of his life, as well as have been put to further expences, if his late Majesty had not been graciously pleas'd to grant him a Noli prosequi."

The falsehood of this story the Free Briton thus corrects.—The gentlemen of Greenwich disagreeing upon the choice of a church-warden at Easter 1722, a poll was demanded and a scrutiny afterwards agreed on. The scrutineers met, but a number of dissolute persons tumultuously assembling at the same time, insulted the justices in a rude and outrageous manner, (justice Savory receiving a blow on the back by a great stone) so that it was thought proper to read the proclamation in order to disperse them. Among the rioters was Charles Curtis, master of a small vessel. He was with them before, at, and after the proclamation was read, and very notorious by his behaviour; was several times admonished by the justices to depart; and as often very civilly acquainted by them with the ill consequence of his continuance in that riotous assembly. But notwithstanding their repeated admonitions, he still continued, and was found among the rioters an hour and a half after the Proclamation was read, and being even then advised to leave that place, and to avoid the fatal consequence, the said Curtis, still refused to depart, and insisted with uncommon insolence, that he was as much about his business in that place as the justices themselves. Whereupon he was apprehended, committed to Maidstone Gaol, try'd, and convicted, but in compassion to his family his punishment was suspended; but a Noli prosequi was never granted.

The aim of the Free Briton, in this paper, is to shew the inconclusive reasoning of the Craftsman from matters of fact falsely asserted.

Free Briton, Jan. 14. No. 59.

In the conclusion of this paper is a letter by way of reply to the Craftsman, Jan. 9. wherein that author calls upon the Free Briton to justify the administration for breaking with the Emperor. To which the Free Briton answers, that it will be full time to make a defence when such measures are undertaken; that their insolence is astonishing, in imputing the same crimes to our ministers for which themselves have deserved a halter. Asks the Craftsman whether he imagines the ministry are so fond of the Emperor on the sudden, as to sacrifice the trade of Spain, and abandon all the powers of Europe, only to run into his arms?

In Feb. last an outcry was rais'd on a pretended discovery that the ministry were making up at Vienna by an implicit guarantee of the Emperor's succession to the Austrian Netherlands, as he should settle it; yet this could not be obtain'd of the British councils; and now we are told we are ready to lurch all our allies for his sake.

The authors of the Craftsman allow that this Treaty-breaking measure would be right, provided a certain great man was removed. As if national compacts could be dissolv'd by the change of the ministers: The nation must answer for the faith of treaties. Grants that such a conduct might be expected, should this ministry be chang'd.

It does not redound to the shame of those who made the treaty of Seville, that the parties have allow'd the Emperor a reasonable time to come into their measures; which if they had not, they would have been charg'd with rashness, precipitation, and every enormity. Concludes with mentioning several injuries and insults that this nation has suffer'd from the Imperial quarter.

Free Briton, Jan. 21.

He applies Job's saying to his friends, Will you lye for God? to the Craftsman, Will you lye for liberty and country? and asks, if he demands impunity for defamatory falsehood?

Breach of faith, which the Craftsman had laid to the charge of the ministry, is the most virulent aspersion that a libeller can utter against any government, is therefore punishable, and declares his opinion, that spreading false news is no part of the freedom of the press.

He thinks no honest cause wants the assistance of falshood, so no man should lay claim to liberty who adheres not to truth; therefore the Craftsman ought not to complain of severity from the government, unless he will evince the truth of his assertion.

Men think that prosecutions and confinement are very hard, not considering the provocations that urg'd them; and that the worst imputations are charg'd on the councils of the crown, without the least colour of truth. The punishment inflicted on a libelling printer, bears no proportion with the wrongs thus offer'd to a great people.

Distinguishes between opinions offr'd upon national affairs, and misrepresentations of those affairs. The first is not criminal, the other may. Says, these men may be punished on the Statute, as spreaders of false news.

The Craftsman can defend himself no other way then by refuting the charge of falshood.

The Craftsman had suggested that the Government abetted the very practices for which he is under prosecution; and instanced in the pamphlet Sedition and Defamation display'd, which represents the conduct and characters of two persons who have laboured these five years to make this ministry odious, for which reasons the opposite writers spare no invectives to point out these gentlemen Weekly, as Traitors and Villains. The Free Briton here justifies the characters complain'd of.

Free Briton, Jan. 28. No. 61.

He takes notice that the Craftsman in his reply to the pamphlet called Sedition and Defamation display'd, has not once attempted to show that the characters of two gentlemen there given are in the least unlike or injurious, and maintains that whatever is said of them in that pamphlet is indisputably true; yet observes, that the author admitted, that he who had wronged his friendship, and betrayed his confidence, came into the world with all the advantages that recommend men to the esteem, favour, and approbation of mankind.

The Craftsman on the contrary divests the minister whose character he draws of all those talents and abilities, without which, power is not easily acquir'd, or long maintain'd. See p. 4.

But the minister's abilities have been the dread and disappointment of his enemies, and have carried him thro' innumerable difficulties for five years together, and enabled him to baffle all their attempts against him; notwithstanding he is describ'd as setting out in mean circumstances, and recommended to mankind by every bad quality, yet those who object this now, were more than ten years his associates in private life as well as publick affairs. As to what has been said of his being superior in impudence to all, this author replies, that 'twas never heard that he call'd gentlemen scoundrels in publick assemblies; reviled the Speeches from the Throne; or, that if affairs were managed as he dictated, he would maintain his Majesty's administration.

Several other scurrilous reflections, thrown out against this honourable person, are answer'd at large in this paper, and some of them charged with notorious falshood.

The British Journal: or, The Traveller, Jan. 9.

The author mentions two evils which attend those that trade with pawnbrokers; the first is, persons who have left pledges in their hands, upon offering to redeem them, have been obliged to advance five or six shillings more than they borrow'd on them. The other is the power of the pawnbroker to defraud his customer entirely of his pledge; both which may be redress'd by obliging pawnbrokers to give a receipt to every person borrowing money on pledges, to which both borrower and lender shall subscribe their names, and each of them take a copy.

In some considerations on the stage, opera's, and the force of musick, he says, that an opera ought to be as regularly conducted, and the characters as justly maintain'd; the same end propos'd, and as large room for the exercise of a fine genius, as in tragedy or comedy. That a compleat opera set to musick would have an advantage over tragedy. Is not pleased with the Recitativo of an opera, because 'tis the musick of the songs only that dwell on the memory.

Distinguishes between the grand-opera and those ballad-opera's now in vogue, which latter, if well set to musick, might deserve applause.

Commends Addison's Rosamond as a beautifull piece of poetry, both in fable and language. In it is maintain'd the dignity of tragedy, the humour of comedy, and the principal end of opera's; i. e. the encouragement of virtue, discouraging vice, and probability through the whole is preserv'd.

The British Journal, Jan. 23.

Relates the history of two traytors, Edric the father, and Edric the son, who lived near 800 years ago; from which he collects and concludes with this lesson to princes, that they ought to be cautious whom they trust, and to pry with piercing eyes into the conduct of their ministers, and the motives of their counsels.

An Extract of a Discourse made to the Royal Society, in Defence of Mr. Cheselden's intended Operation on the Ear of a condemn'd Malefactor.

Daily Courant. Jan. 17.

The author first observes, that the skin, commonly call'd, The Drum of the Ear, is not the organ of hearing, as was vulgarly thought; for the proof of which he offers a great number of reasons and observations of his own, as well as the opinions and reasons of the most learned and judicious anatomists. He then observes, there are two passages to the organs of hearing; one by the outward ear, the other thro' the back part of the mouth, thro' which some people can hear, who cannot hear thro' the outward ear. In this case he supposes the sound may be interrupted by the drum of the ear, which is seated in this passage, and being diseased, may hinder sounds from passing to the internal parts, where are seated the proper organs of hearing: In this case only, he supposes, that perforating the drum may prove a remedy for deafness, as depressing the chrystalline humour of the eye (vulgarly call'd couching a cataract) is daily found to be a remedy for blindness; and yet that operation has been as indecently and ignorantly ridicul'd as the experiment of Mr. Cheselden's; one writer against that operation not scrupling to give his book the following title, A new method of recovering the sight by putting out the eye. He also deserves, that the scituation of the drum is such, that the operation may be easily made by a skilful person; and it being a very thin skin, he presumes it will not be very painful; and if so, the person who is to undergo the experiment will purchase his life upon very easy terms: But supposing it should be very painful; (which 'tis hop'd it will not be) on whom can the first experiment be so fitly made, for the service of mankind, as on one whose life is already forfeited to the publick?

Read's Weekly Journal, Jan. 16.

Entertains his readers with a letter from a correspondent concerning the present state of the Law; takes notice of the spleen which in general appears against lawyer and law; says, that the multiplicity of statutes is one of the greatest grievances of this kingdom. Quotes an opinion of a learned judge, that the best way to reform the law, was to abrogate all the acts made for its amendment. Asserts, that the founding a proper Corpus Juris, is the highest point of policy in a well order'd state. The old English method of proceeding against debtors, being judg'd inconvenient, produced the act on which was found'd the Capias in detinue, as the shortest way of recovery. Complains of fictitious suits, particularly in ejectments. He resents likewise the encouragement given in every court to the multitude of suitors, as contrary to the very ends of justice. Proposes some remedies for these evils, by an act empowering commissioners to inspect into

1. The condition of the law in general, common and statute; what of them may be repealed, and what not.

2. To frame proper instructions to direct those who are intrusted with the execution of the law.

3. To examine into the nature of actions on the case, which by judge Dodderidge is declared to be a feigned action contrived in deceit of the law.

4. To contrive how to prevent vexatious and litigious suits, by lessening the credit of parole agreement.

5. That every practiser of the law be obliged by oath to give his opinion justly to the best of his knowledge, to practise fairly, and by no indirect means procure false judgment in any case.

Lastly, To compile a compleat body of the law, with an institute of maxims and rules, a treatise of practice, and the forms to be observed by courts.

Poetical* ESSAYS for JANUARY, 1731.

ODE for New-Years-Day by C. Cibber, Esq;

Recitativo.

Once more the ever circling Sun
Thro' the coelestial signs has run,
Again old Time inverts his glass,
And bids the annual Season pass:
The youthful Spring shall call for birth,⁵
And glad with op'ning flow'rs the Earth:
Fair Summer lead with Sheaves the Field,
And golden Fruit shall Autumn yield,
Each to the Winter's want their store shall bring,
'Till warmer genial Suns recall the Spring.¹⁰

Air.

Ye grateful Britons bless the Year,
That kindly yields increase,
While plenty that might feed a War,
Enjoys the guard of peace,
Your plenty to the Skies you owe,¹⁵
Peace is your Monarch's care;
Thus bounteous Jove and George below
Divided empire share.

Recitativo.

Britannia pleas'd, looks round her realms to see
Your various causes of Felicity!²⁰
(To glorious War, a glorious peace succeeds;
For most we triumph when the Farmer feeds)
Then truly are we great when truth supplies
Our Blood, our Treasures drain'd by victories.
Turn happy Briton, to the throne your Eyes,²⁵
And in the royal offspring see,
How amply bounteous providence supplies
The source of your felicity.

Air.

REHEARSAL OF THE MUSIC

Behold in ev'ry Face imperial Graces shine
All native to the Race of George and Caroline:³⁰
In each young Hero we admire
The blooming virtue of his sire;
In each maturing fair we find,
Maternal charms of softer kind.

Recitativo.

In vain thro' ages past has Phæbus reli'd,³⁵
E're such a sight blest Albion could behold
Thrice happy Mortals, if your state you knew,
Where can the Globe so blest a nation shew?
All that of you indulgent Heav'n requires,
Is loyal Hearts, to reach your own Desires.⁴⁰
Let Faction then her self born views lay down,
And Hearts united, thus address the Throne.

Air.

Hail! Royal Cesar, hail!
Like this may ev'ry annual Sun
Add brighter Glories to thy Crown,⁴⁵
'Till Suns themselves shall fail.

Recitativo.

May Heav'n thy peaceful Reign prolong,
Nor let to thy great Empires wrong,
Foreign or native Foes prevail.
Hail, &c.

See p. 10, 11.

ODE *humbly inscribed to the Poet Laureat, taken from Lon.
Evening Post Jan. 7. as there said by Step. Duck, Esq.

Semei in annoridet Apollo.

Recitativo.

Accept, O Cibber, the advent'rous lay,
Which, to your honour, dares both sing and say:
To you great Prince of Comedy and Song,
The Tributes o' inferior Pens belong;
You, who by royal favour wear the Bays,
And grateful eternize our Monarch's Praise.

Air.

Let us sing to the King,
All about the circling Year;
Sing a floreat to the laureat,
Ev'ry Season brings good cheer,
Grateful Britons, thank the bard,
Who by Peace does plenty guard,
Such as hungry War does need,
War, that does on plenty feed.

Recitativo.

Phœbus with joy looks Britain round to see,
The happy state of his lov'd Poetry,
To Eusdes, Cibber gloriously succeeds;
Wit triumphs most, when bard like farmer feeds!
Then truly are we great, when he can shew
The way his own out-doings to out-do.
Cast, envious Poets, on his Verse your Eyes,
Behold the offspring of his brain.
How his rich Genius constantly supplies
The source of his poetick vein!

Air.

Thro'out the whole what matchless Graces shine;
Paraphonalia sparkles in each Line;
Native to Cibber, we admire
The style and fancy, wit and fire,

In each maturing Word we find
Something soft for thought design'd.

Recitativo.

Complain not Sol, of fruitless ages past,
Think your self blest in such a Son at last!
Thrice happy Poets, if you knew your state;
Britain alone can boast a Laureat.
For if, like him, to Grandeur you aspire,
By his Example reach your own desire.
Let criticks then their self born views lay down;
And Bards in chorus thus sing round the town.

Air.

Hail! Matchless Colley, hail!
Like this may ev'ry New Year's Day
Add fresher Honour to the Bay,
'Till Bay itself shall fail.

Recitativo.

May Heaven preserve thy Genius clear,
For Christmas comes but once a Year.
Give the Poet then some Ale.
Ale, &c.

From Fog's Journal, Jan. 9.

An Ode on Twelfth Day. In Imitation of an Ode on New Year's-Day.

Past Two o'Clock, and a frosty Morning.

Recitativo.

Once more the Bell-man bids us wake,
With Prophecy of Ale and Cake;
Tells us before we sleep again,
Tom shall be King, and Nancy Queen,
While good Sir Knight a Knave appears,
And Madam the Slut's Ensign wears.
Such Kings and Queens should Colly sing,
Such Worthies in his numbers ring;
While both the British soil and Foreign Shores,
To form the Cake, unite their grateful Stores.

Air.

Ye grateful Footmen, bless the Day,
That such Preferments give;
Ye joyful Cook-maids drink away,
While ye your Title lives.
Good Ale you to the Brewer owe,
The Cake's the Baker's care,
And all above, and eke below,
Combine to give good fare.

Recitativo.

Tom thinks himself a real Monarch grown,
And, pleas'd looks round the Kitchen as his own.
While Nancy with him royal Honour shares,
And on the other Maids majestick stares.
The New King's Health is first, the Queen's succeed:
And most he triumphs, who most freely feeds.
Then all are truly great when Ale supplies
The want of Riches and of Dignities,
And the exhausted Jugg gives victories.
Turn happy Will, Jack, Kate, and Doll, your eyes
On yon Two Chairs, and there observe
How well the new rais'd prince the place supplies
Which both as you must own deserve

WHICH BOTH, AS YOU MUST OWN, DESERVE.

Air.

Behold in each pleas'd face what lovely graces shine,
How on their little realm they look with air benign,
Such, Will, must you and Kate appear,
If Fortune the ensuing Year,
Convinces us she is not blind,
By proving to your merit kind.

Recitativo.

In vain above Three Hundred Days have pass'd
Between this joyful Twelfth Day and the last,
No Scene like this has cheer'd your Hearts and Eyes,
Where shall we find such bliss beneath the Skies?
All that Sir William and my Lady ask,
Is, that when all have well perform'd their Task,
With silent pace, without your Shoes you'll tread
And each go peaceably, tho' drunk to bed.

Air.

Hail! merry Monarch, hail!
Like this may ev'ry annual Cake
You merrier still and merrier make,
'Till Cakes themselves shall fail.

Recitativo.

May you all long your Places keep;
May no makebate amongst you creep,
With Peace destroying Tale.

A HYMN to the LAUREAT,

Introduced in the Whitehall and London Evening Posts, Jan. 9. thus

Sir, By giving a Place in your Paper to the following Unfashionable Hymn you will very much oblige Sir, your Humble servt.

Cibber, accept these feeble lays
From an unskilfull muse,
Who tries with artless Note, to praise
What envious men abuse.

Nature and Art in thee combine;
Thy Comedies excell:
With Wit and Sense replete, they shine,
And read politely well.

Who sees th' inconstant^[1] Loveless range,
But mourns Amanda's fate?
Each female Heart approves his change,
And pants for such a state.

When Lady Betty^[2] treads the stage,
All modish prudes submit:
What Foppington adorns our age,
With the same Grace and Wit?

In Townley^[3] see the modern Wife!
How full of Vice! how blam'd!
How ruin'd by the modern Life!
How valu'd, when reclaim'd!

May empty Journals weekly rail;
May all dull bards repine:
If Wit unequall'd shou'd prevail,
The Laurel's justly thine.

^[1] Love's last shift.

^[2] Careless Husband.

^[3] Provok'd Husband.

To the Author of the Whitehall Evening Post.

Jan. 12.

SIR,

As you are an impartial Writer, I dare say you will do justice on both sides.

The Verses on the Laureat, in yours of Saturday last, have occasion'd the following reply; which I hope you will give a Place to in your next, to show that we can be quick as well as smart, upon a proper occasion. And as I think it the lowest mark of a scoundrel to make bold with any man's character in print, without subscribing the true name of the author; I therefore desire, if the Laureat is concern'd enough to ask the question, that you will tell him my name, and where I live, till then I beg leave to be known by no other than that of your servant,

Francis Fair-play.

*Ah! hah! Sir Coll. is that thy way,
Thy own dull Praise to write?
And would'st thou stand so sure a lay?
No! that's too stale a bite.*

*Nature and art in thee combine,
Thy Talents here excell:
All shining brass thou dost outshine,
To play the cheat so well.*

*Who sees thee in Iago's part,
But thinks thee such a Rogue?
And is not glad with all his heart,
To hang so sad a Dog?*

*When Bays thou play'st, thy self thou art,
For that by nature fit,
No blockhead better suits the part,
Than such a coxcomb wit,*

*In Wronghead too, thy brains we see,
Who might do well at plough;
As fit for Parliament was he,
As for the Laurel thou.*

*Bring thy protected verse from Court,
And try it on the Stage;
There it will make much better sport,
And set the town in rage.*

*There beau's, & wits, & cits, and smarts,
Where hissing's not uncivil,
Will shew their parts to thy deserts,
And send it to the devil.*

*But, ah! in vain 'gainst thee we write,
In vain thy verse we maul;
Our sharpest satire's thy delight*

*Our sharpest satire's thy delight,
For ^[4]Blood! thou'lt stand it all!*

*Thunder, 'tis said, the Laurel spares,
Nought but thy brow could blast it,
And yet! O curst provoking Stars!
Thy comfort is, thou hast it.*

^[4] Epilogue to the Non-juror.

An ODE to Sir Robert Walpole, for New-Year's-Day, 1731.

I.

Guardian of Britannia's glory,
Life and soul of Europe's peace,
Greatest name in modern story,
May thy happy years increase!
Brighter still thy genius shining,
Richer blessings yet designing.

II.

Thee, the sacred muses hailing,
Dulness seal'd in slumber lies;
Arts and wealth thro' thee prevailing,
Faction far confounded flies;
Happy prince in thee confiding:
Happy people of thy guiding!

III.

Viewing present, past, and future,
As thou keep'st eternal watch,
Janus say (for thou are neuter)
Hast thou seen our Walpole's match?
Phæbus in thy radiant journey,
Canst thou to a greater turn thee?

IV.

Lucky omens, minutes smiling,
All the friendly cares appear?
Every discontent beguiling,
Crown the Patriot's coming Year:
In his person strongly guarded,
Counsels blest, and works rewarded.

An Epitaph on Mrs. OLDFIELD.

Hic Juxta requiescit,
Tot inter poetarum laudata nomina,
ANNA OLDFIELD.
Nec ipsa minore laude digna,
Quippe quæ eorum opera
In scenam quories prodivit,
Illustravit semper, & nobilitavit.
Nunquam ingenium idem ad partes diversissimas
Habilius fuit.
Ita tamen ut ad singulas.
Non facta, sed nata esse videretur.
In tragediis
Formæ splendor, oris dignitas, incessus majestas
Tantâ vocis suavitate temperabantur,
Ut nemo esset tam agrestis, tam durus spectator,
Quin in admirationem totus raperetur.
In comediâ autem
Tanta vis, tam venusta hilaritas, tam curiosa felicitas
Ut neque sufficerent spectando oculi,
Neque plaudendo manus.

English'd thus.

Near this place rests the body of Anne Oldfield, amidst so many celebrated Poets, herself not less deserving to be celebrated; for whene'er she trod the stage, her actions always illustrated and ennobled their compositions. Never was one Genius so adapted to the most different parts; she seem'd not made but born for each distinctly. In tragedy her noble presence, elevated speech, and majestic step, temper'd with so peculiar a sweetness of voice, never fail'd to transport the most rustic and insensible into admiration. In comedy she discover'd such a winning air, such a sprightly and becoming gayety, and so happy an address, that neither eyes were satisfied with seeing her, nor hands weary of applauding.

Another.

Fashion'd alike by nature and by art,
To please, engage, and int'rest ev'ry heart:
In publick life, by all who saw, approv'd;
In private life, by all who knew her lov'd.

Another.

OLDFIELD lies here retir'd, undrest,
The curtain drawn, her part is done;
Ye that remain to act your best,
Must also make your exit soon;
How happy then, if worthy praise,
Ye can such lasting plaudits raise!

Another.

EXIT
Anna Oldfield;
Valete & plaudite.

Another.

Hic jacet Anna Oldfield.
Jam mea preacta est,
Mox vestra agetur fabula.
Vos valete & plaudite.

Mrs. B—rb—r, to Mrs. C—f—r, at Bath.

When lately you invited me,
With Carteret I din'd;
And in return, most gen'rously
To Onslow I resign'd.

On Opportunity we seize,
For search the Nation round,
Such Commoners and Peers as these
Are rarely to be found.

Our Situation chang'd, you see
How pleasure fleets away;
But yesterday you envy'd me;
I envy you to day.

EPIGRAM on a LADY, stung by a BEE.

To heal the wound the Bee had made upon my Delia's face,
Its honey to the wound she laid,
and bid me kiss the place.
Pleas'd I obey'd, and from the wound
suck'd both the sweet and smart;
The honey on my lips I found,
the sting went thro' my heart.

THE Monthly Intelligencer.

JANUARY, 1731.

Friday, January 1.

heir Majesties received the compliments of the Nobility for the New-Year; among the rest, of the Lord Carteret, who was graciously receiv'd.

At the same time the Ode for the Day, compos'd by Colly Cibber, Esq; Poet-laureat, was perform'd; the Musick by Mr. Eccles, and the vocal by Mr Hughs, Mr. Gates, &c. See the said Ode, p. [20, and Remarks on it, p. 10, 11.]

Forty mathematical Boys, educated in Christ's Hospital, in the school founded by K. C. II. were, according to annual Custom, presented to his Majesty.

His Majesty order'd 30 l. per. Ann. to be paid out of the Treasury towards the support of the Poor of the Parish of St. Mary le Strand.

Saturday, Jan. 2.

Great talk of an Experiment to be made on Charles Ray in Newgate, a Malefactor repriev'd on that Occasion. It was said to be in order to discover whether Deafness is not to be cured by purging. The Tympanum was to be cut by an Instrument, in order to demonstrate whether the Hearing proceeds from the Tympanum, or the Nerves that lie between that and the Conceptor of the Ear; it being the Opinion of some that Deafness is principally occasion'd by Obstructions in the said Nerves, See p. 10, 18, 19.

Geo. Burrington, Esq; Gov. of North Carolina, set out to embark for his Government.

Sunday, Jan. 3.

Dr. Greenwood, newly appointed Chaplain, preached before their Majesties, the Pr. of Wales, and three eldest Princesses, at the Chapel-royal at St. James's; the Nobility attended in their Robes and Collars, and the Duke of Dorset Lord Lieut. of Ireland carried the Sword of State.

Monday, Jan. 4.

The Lady Chaplin, Relict of Sir John Chaplin, of Tathwel in Lincolnshire, Bar., brought to bed of a Daughter. This Lady had a Writ de Ventre inspiciendo issued against her some Months ago, by the Heirs at Law; and by her not having an Heir Male, 3000 l. per. ann. descends with the Title to Thomas Chaplin, Esq; and an Estate of about 2000 l. per. ann. to Sir John's two Sisters, after a 3d Share to Mrs Chaplin.

Advice came of 3 Incendiaries, or as there call'd, Bristol Firemen, being taken up at Barnstaple, and conducted to Exeter Gaol. One was handsomely dress'd, and had a considerable Sum about him.

Two Hundred Recruits sent from the Savoy, to reinforce the Garrisons of Gibraltar and Port Mahon.

Tuesday, Jan. 5.

The Corpse of the late Earl of Delorain was a few Nights since privately interr'd at Leadwell in Oxfordshire.

Wednesday, Jan. 6.

This being Twelfth-day, his Majesty, the Prince of Wales, and the Kts Companions of the Garter, Thistle, and Bath, appeared in the Collars of their respective Orders. Their Majesties, the Prince of Wales, and three eldest Princesses, preceded by the Heralds, &c. went to the Chapel-royal, and heard Divine Service. The D. of Manchester carried the Sword of state. The King and Prince made the offerings at the altar, of gold, frankincense and myrrh, according to annual custom. At night their Majesties, &c. play'd at Hazard with the nobility, for the benefit of the Groom-porter; and 'twas said the K. won 600 guineas, the Q. 360. Pr. Amelia 20, Pr. Carolina 10, the E. of Portmore, and D. of Grafton several thousands.

At night Mr. Sharpless, high constable of Holborn division, together with several of his petty constables went to search a notorious gaming-house behind Grays-Inn-walks, by virtue of a warrant under the hands and seals of the Rt. Hn. Ld. Delawar and eleven other of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the County of Middlesex, but the gamesters having previous notice, they all fled, except the master of the house, who was apprehended, and bound in a recognizance of 200 l. penalty, pursuant to the old statute of 33 H. VIII.

It may be some sort of amusement to present our readers with the following list of officers established in the most notorious gaming-houses.

1. A Commissioner, always a proprietor, who looks in of a night, and the week's accompt is audited by him and two others of the proprietors.
2. A Director, who superintends the Room.
3. An Operator, who deals the cards at a cheating game called Faro.
4. Two Crowpees, who watch the cards, and gather the money for the Bank.
5. Two Puffs, who have money given them to decoy others to play.
6. A Clerk, who is a check upon the puffs, to see that they sink none of the money that is given them to play with.
7. A Squib, is a puff of a lower rank, who serves at half salary, while he is learning to deal.
8. A Flasher, to swear how often the bank has been stript.
9. A Dunner, who goes about to recover money lost at play.
10. A Waiter, to fill out wine, snuff candles, and attend the gaming-room.

11. An Attorney, a Newgate solicitor.

12. A Captain, who is to fight any gentleman that is peevish for losing his money.

13. An Usher, who lights gentlemen up and down stairs, and gives the word to the Porter.

14. A Porter, who is generally a soldier of the foot guards.

15. An Orderly man, who walks up and down the outside of the door, to give notice to the porter, and alarm the house, at the approach of the constables.

16. A Runner, who is to get intelligence of the justices meeting.

17. Link-boys, Coachmen, Chairmen, Drawers, or others, who bring the first intelligence of the justices meetings, or of the constables being out, at half a guinea reward.

18. Common bail, Affidavit-men, Ruffians, Bravoos, Assassins, cum multis aliis.

At a meeting of the society for propagating christian knowledge, held at Edinburgh, the several officers for the year ensuing were chosen, the stock amounted to 12,563 l. 12 s. 5 d. number of schools, 132; and they resolved to send three missionaries to preach the Gospel to the Indians on the borders of New-England; to which they are encouraged by a gift of Dr. Daniel Williams, late a presbyterian minister in England.

Thursday, Jan. 8.

Charles du Bois, chosen governor of the corporation for smelting down lead with sea-coal and pit-coal. And Samuel Beachcroft, Esq; deputy-governor of the same.

Mr Franklin was taken into custody for printing and publishing the Craftsman of the same day; as were likewise 3 persons for publishing it.

Ended the sessions for Westminster, when Sir J. Gouson was again chosen chairman, and desired to print his charge.

Terence Magrahe, a young man in the French interest, having inveigled many Irish papists to enter into that service, and it being soon known by their refusing to work, the magistrates of Birr in Ireland, assembled a Posse to secure them, but they were not able to apprehend above three, the rest escaped with their Captain, and took shipping near Dublin.

Saturday, Jan. 9.

The new-born son and heir of W. Pulteney, Esq; baptized by the name of William; the E. of Berkeley, and E. of Winchelsea and Nottingham, being Godfathers, and the Dutchess-dowager of Marlborough Godmother.

Sunday, Jan. 10.

Dr. Lynch preached before their Majesties at St. James's chapel; the Earl of Orkney carried the sword of State.

Monday, Jan. 11.

The corpse of the lady Dolben, wife of the rev. Sir John Dolben, lately arrived from France, was carried out of town to be interr'd, at Finedon in Northamptonshire. Sir John had also buried 4 sons in 8 months past.

Tuesday, Jan. 12.

Sir Isaac Shard, Kt. and Jn. Fuller, Esq; the present sheriffs, went to Woodstreet compter, and distributed a considerable sum of money to the poor debtors confined there.

Wednesday, Jan. 13.

The merchants having resolved to pay nothing for receipt of debenture money, for the 15 per Cent. and other duties, this day a great many were paid off without any abatement for pretended fees.

Thursday, Jan. 14.

The noted Mary Harvey, alias Machaig, broke out of the Kings's-bench, where she was confined for keeping a disorderly house.

Friday, Jan. 15.

Began the sessions at the Old baily, when Mr Maynee, a clerk to the Bank was arraigned upon two indictments for erasing and altering 2 bank notes, and pleaded guilty, upon which the Statute was read that makes it felony without benefit of clergy. See p. 216, 403.

His Majesty order'd a pension of 20 l. per. Ann. to such of the late King's superannuated livery servants who are not provided for on the present establishment.

Cork, Jan. 15. This day one Tim. Groneen was, for the murder and robbery of Mr. St. Leger and his wife at Bally volane, sentenc'd to be hang'd 2 minutes, then his head to be cut off, his bowels to be taken out and thrown in his face; and his body divided in 4 quarters to be placed in 4 cross ways. He was servant to Mr. Leger, and committed the murder with the privity of Joan Condon the servant maid, who was sentenced to be burnt, also of the gardener, whom he knock'd on the head to deprive him of his share of the booty. When he was taken, he said he would have all catholick servants use their protestant masters so, if they would merit heaven. But after Trial, made the following declaration. The Devil was too great with me, I first resolved only to rob my Master, but when I went into the room shot him in his Bed, and gave my Mistress 5 stabs. The Gardener consented to go with me and held the Candle. I took 20 l. and the watch out of my Masters pocket, and then rode off, (having first kill'd the gardener, and given the maid a small share of the money.)

Sunday, Jan. 17.

The Rev. Dr. Clark preached before their Majesties, &c. in the royal chapel at St. James's; the Lord Delawar carried the Sword of State.

Monday, Jan. 18.

Eight persons who were taken up at Norwich, for handing about a treasonable paper, intituled, The D. of Wharton's Reasons, &c. were admitted to bail about this time.

Tuesday, Jan. 19.

The KING's most excellent Majesty elected governor of the royal African company, Sir Robert Sutton, Knt. of the Bath, sub-governor, and Sir Biby Lake, Bar. deputy-governor; as also, the following Directors or Assistants.

Solomon Ashley, Esq;

John Baker, Esq;

Tho. Bradshaw*, Esq;

Domestick Occurrences in JANUARY, 1731.

Melancholy Effects of Credulity in Witchcraft.

For Burlington in Pensilvania we have an account, that the owners of several Cattle believing them to be bewitch'd, caused some suspected men and women to be taken up, and trials to be made for detecting them. Above 300 people assembled near the governor's house, and a pair of scales being erected, the suspected persons were each weigh'd against a large Bible; but all of them vastly outweighing it, the accused were then to be tied head and feet together, and put into a river, on supposition that if they swam they must be guilty. This trial they offer'd to undergo, in case as many of their accusers should be served in the like manner; which being done, they all swam very buoyant, to the no small diversion of the spectators, and clearing of the accused.—This has revived a like transaction in Somersetshire in Sept. last, and another in France.

The first is from Frome publish'd in the Daily Journal, Jan. 15. relating, That a child of one Wheeler being seized with strange unaccountable fits, the mother goes to a Cunning Man, who advis'd her to hang a bottle of the child's water, mix'd with some of it's hair, close stopt over the fire, that the witch would thereupon come and break it: Does not mention the success, but a poor old woman, in the neighbourhood, was taken up, and the old trial by Water Ordeal reviv'd. They dragg'd her, shivering with an ague, out of her house, set her astride on the pomel of a saddle, and carried her about two miles to a mill-pond, stript off her upper cloaths, tied her legs, and with a rope about her middle threw her in, 200 spectators huzza-ing and abetting the riot. They affirm she swam like a cork, tho' forced several times under water; and no wonder, for when they strained the line, the ends whereof were held on each side of the pond, she must of necessity rise; but by haling her from one bank to t'other, and often plunging, she drank water enough, and when almost spent, they poured in brandy to revive her, they drew her to a stable, threw her on some litter in her wet cloaths, where in about an hour after she expired. The coroner upon his Inquest cou'd make no discovery of the ring-leaders, altho' above 40 Persons assisted in the Fact, yet none of them could be persuaded to accuse his Neighbour: so that they were able to charge only 3 of them with Man-slaughter.

The like Credulity in witchcraft occasion'd a tragical Accident at a Village near Mortagne in France, in December last. A Man of that Village had been long ill of a Distemper which puzzled the Physicians; whereupon his Wife believ'd he was bewitch'd, and consulted a pretended Conjurer, who shew'd her the Wizard (her husband's uncle) in a glass of Water, and told her, that to oblige him to withdraw the Charm, they must beat him, and burn the Soles of his Feet. On her Return she sent for the Uncle, and notwithstanding his Protestations, with the Assistance of her Relations, beat him unmercifully, and burnt the Soles of his Feet, and the Crown of his Head in such a manner, that in two Days after he died. The Woman and her Accomplices were seized; she own'd the Fact, and said, if it was to do again, she would do it. See p. 358.

Extraordinary Accidents, and Casualties.

A barbarous Murder was committed the 4th Inst. at Night, on John Williams Carpenter of Cumback in Radnorshire, by stabbing him in the Throat with a Knife, and beating out his Brains with an Ax: His Door being left latch'd, and the Key in the thatch as usual, and no Robbery committed. It was not discover'd till the 7th, when his only Brother William came, and in the presence of abundance of Neighbours, owned the bloody Knife, which together with the washing of his bloody Cloaths by his sweetheart the Night the Murder was committed, and no body to get by his Brother's death but himself, caus'd him to be apprehended, and sent to Presteign Goal; and his Sweetheart was bound to appear against him. See p. 178.

From Dijon in France, 'tis written, that a Person having withdrawn himself, his Relations charg'd one who was his sworn Enemy with his murder, and examin'd him with such exquisite tortures, that, to shorten them he confess'd the crime: whereupon he was broke alive, and two others as his accomplices were hanged. The Man suppos'd to be murder'd, soon after return'd home.

Brussels 25. O. S. About 2 o’Clock this morning, a dreadful fire broke out in the Arch Dutchess’s palace, which with the goods and furniture, and Royal Chapel were laid in ashes in less than 12 hours. Bourdeaux, Jan. 24. N. S. Forty monks dy’d here in one Night; upon enquiry to discover the cause, a dead Viper was found in a Cask of Wine they had regal’d themselves with, suppos’d to have come in at the bung-hole.

Morlaix, in lower Bretagne, Jan. 11. N. S. By a fire which broke out in the hospital, the whole town was burnt down; the People were reduc’d to the greatest hardships.

Several nuns have dy’d suddenly at Englen, five leagues from Brussels, their Bodies were open’d, but no marks of Contagion or Poison appearing, some weak People believed it must be by witchcraft, but they could not tell whom to accuse. However, the surviving sisters quitted the Cloysters, and with the Bp.’s consent return’d to their Friends.

The following Narrative, given by a Gentleman of unexceptionable Honour and Veracity, has been lately published at Edinburgh.

One William Sutor, Aged about 37, a farmer in Middle-mause (belonging to the Laird of Balgown near Craighal,) being about the month of December, 1728, in the fields with his servants, near his own house, overheard at some distance, as it were, an uncommon skreeking and noise; and they following the Voice, fancied they saw a dark gray-colour’d Dog; but as it was dark night, they concluded it was a Fox, and accordingly were for setting on their Dogs: but it was very observeable, that not one of them would so much as point his Head that way.

About a month after, the said Sutor being occasionally in the same spot, and much about the same time of Night, it appear’d to him again, and in passing, touched him so smartly on the Thigh, that he felt a pain all that Night.

In December 1729, it again cast up to him at about the same place, and past him at some distance.

In June 1730, it appeared to him as formerly: And it was now he began to judge it was something extraordinary.

On the last Monday of Nov. 1730, about sky-setting, as he was coming from Drumlochy, this officious visiter passed him as formerly, and in passing, he distinctly heard it speak these words, Within eight or ten days do or die; and instantly disappear'd, leaving him not a little perplex'd.

Next morning he came to his brother James's house, and gave him a particular account of all that had happen'd: And that night, about 10 of the clock, these two brothers having been visiting their sister at Glanballow, and returning home, stept aside to see the remarkable spot, where they had no sooner arriv'd, then it appear'd to William, who pointing his finger to it, desired his brother and a servant who was with them, to look to it; but neither of them could see any such thing.

Next Saturday evening, as William was at his sheep-fold, it came up to him, and audibly utter'd these Words Come to the spot of ground within, half an hour. Whereupon he went home, and taking a Sword and a staff in his hand, came to the ground, being at last determined to see the Issue. He had scarce encircled himself with a line of circumvallation, when his troublesome familiar came up to him, he ask'd it, In the name of God, who are you? It answer'd, I am David Sutor, George Sutor's Brother: I killed a Man, more than 35 years ago, at a bush by East the road as you go into the Isle. He said to it, David Sutor was a Man, and you appear as a Dog. It answer'd, I killed him with a Dog, and am made to speak out of the mouth of a Dog: and I tell you to go bury these Bones.

This coming to the ears of the Minister of Blair, the Lairds of Glascloon and Rychalzie, &c. about 40 Men, went together to the said Isle; but after opening ground in several places, found no Bones.

On the 23d of Decemb. about midnight, when William was in bed, it came to his door, and said, Come away: you will find the bones at the side of the wither'd Bush, and there are but 8 left; and told him at the same time for a sign, that he would find the print of a Cross impress'd on the Ground.

Next day William and his brother, with about 40 or 50 people who had conven'd out of curiosity, came to the place, where they discover'd the bush, and the cross by it; and upon digging the ground about a foot down found the eight bones: All which they immediately wrapt in clean linen, and being put in a coffin with a mort-cloth over it, were interr'd that evening in the church-yard of Blair, attended by about 100 Persons.

N. B. Several People in that Country remember to have seen this David Sutor; and that he listed for a Soldier, and went abroad about 34 or 35 years ago.

Remarkable ADVERTISEMENTS.

In the Gazette, Jan. 30. 'tis advertis'd, that in July 1729, at Bentworth in the County of Southampton, a barn was set on fire, and the corn and grain therein, the Stables and out houses adjoining were entirely burnt. Several messuages in the said parish have since been confirmed in the same manner, and Bentworth, it self threatned to be laid in ashes; his Majesty's pardon is promised to any one that would discover his Accomplice.

In the Gazette of the same date, 'tis advertis'd, that the widows of such half-pay Officers as serv'd, and to whom they were marry'd in the year 1716, may receive their proportions of the sum of 1500 l. granted the last Sessions of Parliament for that purpose.

London Evening Post, Jan. 28th. 'tis advertis'd from Whitehaven, that a vessel sailed for London, laden with the late Mr. Wood's ore, coals, cinders, and lime-stone, to be carried to Chelsea, to give a Specimen that iron is to be made from the ore and pit-coal. A reason is demanded why Chelsea, that produces neither, is a better place to make iron, than the neighbourhood of Whitehaven, where there is plenty of both, unless there was design of imposing upon the World?

Any poor person may be cured of the Ague gratis, by a dose only, which may be contained in a gill-glass, and never known to fail. To be had of Mr. Sam. Tripland, at the Coach-maker's Arms in Great-windmill-street, over-against the Hay-market.

Letters patent were granted to Mr. G. Kettle of Southwark, for making and dying of hats and ruffs of different colours, except black.

e think it a proper introduction to the history of the year newly begun, to give our readers a transient view of the situation of Affairs at the conclusion of the last; and as we find this ready done to our hands in the Post-Boy, Dec. 31. we shall make no apology for epitomizing his essay upon that Subject.

The Clouds in which the fate of Europe was obscur'd at the close of the Year 1729, are not yet dissipated, notwithstanding the efforts of politicians, the number of Negotiations, and the union of four of the most formidable powers in Europe, by the Treaty of Seville.

The allies of Seville now see in what advantageous situation the treaty of Utrecht has put the Emperor in Italy. We find, that the Empire, which in the reign of Leopold, could not send 20,000 men to the Rhine or Flanders, without subsidies from England or Holland, can send 20,000 men to Italy, and maintain them there without assistance, its revenue amounting to no less than 15 millions of Florins a year. She now employs her Powers to baffle the projects of those who rais'd her to this grandeur: Projects whose only drift is the Execution of a treaty, wherein the Imperial court is one of the principal parties contracting, which treaty was made with two views. The first was an addition to the power of the Emperor in Italy, by bringing under her obedience the two Sicilies. The second chear'd up Spain for the losses she had sustain'd, particularly in the fine branches lopt from that crown, by securing to one of her Infantes the uncertain hope of two successions.

The catholick King and his allies do not undertake or ask anything that the Imperial court has just reason to complain of.

The reasons alledg'd by the Imperialists for their complaints are, that an alteration had been made in one single article of the quadruple alliance, which set forth the manner of securing to the Infante of Spain the eventual succession which had been promis'd him. But,

1. This alteration is of no great importance, because the 6000 neutral troops which by the treaty of London were to be garrison'd in Tuscany and Parma, by the treaty of Seville are only turn'd into Spaniards, which are in some sort made neutral by being discharg'd from the oath to their sovereign, and made to take an oath to the Great Duke, and Duke of Parma.

2. This alteration does not prejudice to the Emperor, or threaten him with any hereafter, because his strict and religious observation of treaties will not suffer him to oppose the Infante's promis'd succession; nor will the bona fide of the king of Spain let him employ his 6000 Spaniards on any design but what is stipulated by the treaty of Seville.

3. This alteration was not made without substantial reasons. The Imperialists always opposed the motion for putting Spaniards in garrison in the towns of Tuscany and Parma; and were averse even to the admission of neutral troops; upon which the allies passed the 4th article of the treaty of Seville.

This article was the subject of the late Negotiations. The resolution of the Imperial court to admit of no deviation from the treaty of Quadruple alliance; and that of the court of Spain never to consent to any alteration in the treaty of Seville, occasion'd the preparations for war all the last summer, but ended in preparations offensive and defensive, and were kept from breaking into action by the thread of negotiation; and the opening of this scene is reserved for the year we are now entering upon; but hitherto Things remain in the same situation, Jan. 30.

Constantinople. Since the great revolution made here by the Janizaries in cutting to pieces the late Vizier, Capigi Aga, Capt. Bashaw, and Mufti, &c., and afterwards deposing Sultan Achmet, and raising the new Sultan (whose father was depos'd in 1703) to the throne; there has been no settled government. For upon divers pretences these tumultuous rebels were frequently up in arms, demanding several new regulations; particularly the promoting of their favourites, and the removal or death of those who were obnoxious to 'em. All which was comply'd with in order to appease them: But this procedure not satisfying them, and they still continuing mutinous, the Grand Segnior under pretence of holding a general council, got the chief of 'em into his palace, cut 'em all off with their servants; and about 7000 of their followers were strangled, to the great joy of this city; these rebellious people grew so insolent, as to tax families what sums they pleas'd, and even to plunder in the street: But now every thing is reduc'd to the old Ottoman rules of government.

Moscow, Jan. 8. Advices from Derbent say, that the princes of Georgia passed that place, in their way home much pleased with the honours they have received from this court, and that one of them, who lives near mount Arrarat, had promis'd to send the Empress a relique of Noah's Ark.

Venice. 'Tis currently reported that this republick will equip a squadron of twenty Ships of war, to put to sea early next spring, to watch the motions of the Turks.

Vienna, Jan. 20. Our hopes of an accommodation with Spain encrease daily.

Paris. New proposals of accommodation are negotiating with Spain and the Emperor; and 'tis thought with a fair prospect of success.

Swisserland, Bern. Provision is making in all the protestant cantons for the reception of a great number of Waldenses, who are depriv'd of their liberties and drove from their habitations, by their sovereign the duke of Savoy.

Vienna. There are privately handed about here copies of the Ultimatum (or last proposals) of the allies of Seville, as transmitted hither from Paris; the substance of which is as follows.

1. They would stipulate by a secret article not to oppose the settlement of Succession which the Emperor might make for his Territories in Italy, and which should be freely accepted by the States thereof; and they would engage to guaranty that Settlement.

2. They would stipulate by a secret article, that they would not oppose the advantages of Succession, which the Emperor, with the consent of the different States of Italy, might procure in favour of the archdutchess his daughter; and contribute to maintain what he shall so establish for his daughters, or for any one he shall pitch upon, with regard to his Territories in Italy; and even to guaranty what may be established by the Emperor in consequence of that Settlement.

Seville, Jan. 16. Couriers are continually arriving upon the heels of one another, which occasion frequent councils.

Hague. About the latter end of this month their High Mightinesses wrote a letter to the United Provinces, for the celebration of the 28th of Feb. as a day of solemn thanksgiving, fasting and prayer, which imports in substance, That altho' it has pleas'd God, in his infinite patience and clemency, that we have enjoy'd peace last year, this peace was nevertheless attended with so much uneasiness and difficulty, in relation to the small success of the negotiations set on foot for terminating amicably the differences in Europe, and establishing a general tranquillity, that we are still in a very uncertain and difficult scituation, and have great reason to fear that a war may at last happen, wherein this State may be engag'd, contrary to its inclination: That our apprehension in this respect increases so much the more when we consider, that notwithstanding all the blessings which it hath pleased God to shower down upon our dear Country, the sins and iniquities thereof, far from diminishing, increase daily, to such a degree, that last year horrible, abominable sins appear'd, almost unknown before in this Country; and that we ought to fear, that the patience of the Lord, justly provok'd, ceasing, his Judgments may at last fall upon our dear Country, unless we endeavour to prevent them, by an unfeigned repentance and conversion.

Observations in GARDENING for the Month of February.

This is a month of great work for the gardener.

In the kitchen-garden renew the heat of your hot-beds with fresh dung, and continue to sow cucumbers and melons as in the former month.

Make a large hot-bed for forward rhadishes and spring carrots; they may be sown together, because the rhadishes be drawn in March, whereby they will make room for the carrots. The bed must be cover'd with earth 7 or 8 inches thick, and defended with mats, supported with hoops.

Make a hot-bed for Battersey kidney-beans, and all sorts of annuals, except African and French marigold, which may be deferr'd 10 or 20 days. About the middle of the month, upon a declining hot-bed sow colly-flower seeds; also in the natural ground pease, beans, parsley, spinach, carrots, parsnips, turnips, onions, leeks, Dutch brown lettuce, and asparagus-seeds.

Sow skerrits in light rich ground, where they may have moisture.

Plant garlick, shalots, and rockambole, for increase, in light ground.

Transplant young cabbage-plants for a crop.

Make plantations of straw-berries, rasberries, goose-berries, currants, and roses.

Elm-setts should now be gather'd from the roots of large trees, and planted in nursery-beds, and young plantations should be now provided with all sorts of forest-trees and shrubs, which are propagated from slips or layers.

Set acorns of the Ilex, cork-tree, English oak, chestnuts, and walnuts.

Sow the sameria of the elm, and bay berries, all which come up the first year.

Lay branches of several trees to take root. This is the best time to raise any thing that will grow of slips.

Prune fruit-trees and vines; for now is your season to bind, splash, nail, and dress, without danger of frosts. This is to be understood of the most tender and delicate wall-fruits not finish'd before: do this before the buds and bearers grow turgid; and yet in the nectarine and like delicate mural fruit, the later the better, notwithstanding what has been, and still is the contrary custom.

The latter end of this month is most proper to graft pears and plums of all sorts; and some likewise graft apples and cherries in the cleft, tho' others defer apples longer. The cyons cut off from the trees last month, are now to be used, without having any regard to the notion of the age of the moon.

Now, as well as in October, may be planted the espaliers of pears, plums, or apples, so useful as well as profitable in a garden; for being planted a convenient distance from a fruit wall, they are an admirable defence against blighting winds, and produce noble fruit.

Rub moss from trees after a shower of rain; scrape and cleanse them from cankers, &c. Cut and lay quick-sets, and trim up palasade hedges.

Earth up the roots of uncover'd fruit-trees, and drain superfluous moisture from roots of trees. Lay bird-lime for the bird called the tit, or tit-mouse, which is a destructive enemy to dwarf pears and plums in this and the preceding month, by destroying the buds.

The beginning of this month you may sow auricula seeds in cases fill'd with light earth, and the seeds of the polyanthois in some shady border.

Transplant all sorts of flowering shrubs, which bear the weather; as roses, jessamine, hony-suckle, laburnum, lelac, syringa, spipeas, altheas, &c. You may make layers of roses, pomegranates, phillyrea, laurus-tinus, and other shrubs.

Cut the Spanish jessamine within 4 inches of the stem, giving them fresh earth, likewise give fresh earth to your carnations planted out in Autumn. Towards the latter end sow lark-spurs, hollyhocks, Canterbury bells, primrose-tree, sweet-williams, annual stocks, candy-tufts, pinks, &c.

Make plantations of the lilly of the valley on the side of some shady bank. Sow orange and lemon kernels in pots; set the pots in hot-beds; the kernels are to be used as soon as taken out of the fruit. Shift such myrtles as require large pots, at the same time shaving off the outside fibres of their root, and if there be occasion, prune their heads pretty close. Turn and skreen Mould for the use of next month, and continue to roll gravel-walks after rain and frost.

BOOKS, &c. published in the Month of January.

It has been unexceptionably advanced, that a good Abridgment of the Law is more intelligible than the Statutes at large; so a nice Model is as entertaining as the Original, and a true Specimen as satisfactory as the whole Parcel: This may serve to illustrate the Reasonableness of our present Undertaking, which in the first place is to give Monthly a View of all the Pieces of Wit, Humour, or Intelligence, daily offer'd to the Publick in the News-Papers, (which of late are so multiply'd, as to render it impossible, unless a man makes it a business, to consult them all) and in the next place we shall join therewith some other matters of Use or Amusement that will be communicated to us.

Upon calculating the Number of News-Papers, 'tis found that (besides divers written Accounts) no less than 200 Half-sheets per Month are thrown from the Press only in London, and about as many printed elsewhere in the Three Kingdoms; a considerable Part of which constantly exhibit Essays on various Subjects for Entertainment; and all the rest, occasionally oblige their Readers with matters of Public Concern, communicated to the World by Persons of Capacity thro' their Means: so that they are become the chief Channels of Amusement and Intelligence. But then being only loose Papers, uncertainly scatter'd about, it often happens, that many things deserving Attention, contained in them, are only seen by Accident, and others not sufficiently publish'd or preserved for universal Benefit and Information.

This Consideration has induced several Gentlemen to promote a Monthly Collection, to treasure up, as in a Magazine, the most remarkable Pieces on the Subjects abovemention'd, or at least impartial Abridgments thereof, as a Method much better calculated to preserve those Things that are curious, than that of transcribing.

In pursuance whereof, and the great Encouragement already given, this WORK will be regularly continued, shall appear earlier, and contain more than any other Monthly Book of the same Price.

As all possible Care will be taken to avoid the Mistakes incident to undertakings of this kind, so the Author will think himself oblig'd to such Persons who shall give him a true state of any Transaction erroneously publish'd in the Papers, or shall please to communicate any Pieces of Wit or Entertainment proper to be inserted; directing for him at the Printer's at St. John's Gate, near Hicks's-Hall, where any Persons sending proper Orders, may have the Numbers sent them, at their first coming out, without further Trouble, whether in Town or Country.

 END OF THE PROJECT GUTENBERG EBOOK THE GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE, JANUARY 1731 ***

Updated editions will replace the previous one—the old editions will be renamed.

Creating the works from print editions not protected by U.S. copyright law means that no one owns a United States copyright in these works, so the Foundation (and you!) can copy and distribute it in the United States without permission and without paying copyright royalties. Special rules, set forth in the General Terms of Use part of this license, apply to copying and distributing Project Gutenberg™ electronic works to protect the PROJECT GUTENBERG™ concept and trademark. Project Gutenberg is a registered trademark, and may not be used if you charge for an eBook, except by following the terms of the trademark license, including paying royalties for use of the Project Gutenberg trademark. If you do not charge anything for copies of this eBook, complying with the trademark license is very easy. You may use this eBook for nearly any purpose such as creation of derivative works, reports, performances and research. Project Gutenberg eBooks may be modified and printed and given away—you may do practically ANYTHING in the United States with eBooks not protected by U.S. copyright law. Redistribution is subject to the trademark license, especially commercial redistribution.

START: FULL LICENSE

THE FULL PROJECT GUTENBERG™ LICENSE

PLEASE READ THIS BEFORE YOU DISTRIBUTE OR USE THIS WORK

To protect the Project Gutenberg™ mission of promoting the free distribution of electronic works, by using or distributing this work (or any other work associated in any way with the phrase “Project Gutenberg”), you agree to comply with all the terms of the Full Project Gutenberg License available with this file or online at www.gutenberg.org/license.

Section 1. General Terms of Use and Redistributing Project Gutenberg electronic works

1.A. By reading or using any part of this Project Gutenberg electronic work, you indicate that you have read, understand, agree to and accept all the terms of this license and intellectual property (trademark/copyright) agreement. If you do not agree to abide by all the terms of this agreement, you must cease using and return or destroy all copies of Project Gutenberg electronic works in your possession. If you paid a fee for obtaining a copy of or access to a Project Gutenberg electronic work and you do not agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement, you may obtain a refund from the person or entity to whom you paid the fee as set forth in paragraph 1.E.8.

1.B. “Project Gutenberg” is a registered trademark. It may only be used on or associated in any way with an electronic work by people who agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement. There are a few things that you can do with most Project Gutenberg electronic works even without complying with the full terms of this agreement. See paragraph 1.C below. There are a lot of things you can do with Project Gutenberg electronic works if you follow the terms of this agreement and help preserve free future access to Project Gutenberg electronic works. See paragraph 1.E below.

1.C. The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation (“the Foundation” or PGLAF), owns a compilation copyright in the collection of Project Gutenberg electronic works. Nearly all the individual works in the collection are in the public domain in the United States. If an individual work is unprotected by copyright law in the United States and you are located in the United States, we do not claim a right to prevent you from copying, distributing, performing, displaying or creating derivative works based on the work as long as all references to Project Gutenberg are removed. Of course, we hope that you will support the Project Gutenberg mission of promoting free access to electronic works by freely sharing Project Gutenberg works in compliance with the terms of this agreement for keeping the Project Gutenberg name associated with the work. You can easily comply with the terms of this agreement by keeping this work in the same format with its attached full Project Gutenberg License when you share it without charge with others.

1.D. The copyright laws of the place where you are located also govern what you can do with this work. Copyright laws in most countries are in a constant state of change. If you are outside the United States, check the laws of your country in addition to the terms of this agreement before downloading, copying, displaying, performing, distributing or creating derivative works based on this work or any other Project Gutenberg work. The Foundation makes no representations concerning the copyright status of any work in any country other than the United States.

1.E. Unless you have removed all references to Project Gutenberg:

1.E.1. The following sentence, with active links to, or other immediate access to, the full Project Gutenberg License must appear prominently whenever any copy of a Project Gutenberg work (any work on which the phrase “Project Gutenberg” appears, or with which the phrase “Project Gutenberg” is associated) is accessed, displayed, performed, viewed, copied or distributed:

This eBook is for the use of anyone anywhere in the United States and most other parts of the world at no cost and with almost no restrictions whatsoever. You may copy it, give it away or re-use it under the terms of the Project Gutenberg™ License included with this eBook or online at www.gutenberg.org. If you are not located in the United States, you will have to check the laws of the country where you are located before using this eBook.

1.E.2. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is derived from texts not protected by U.S. copyright law (does not contain a notice indicating that it is posted with permission of the copyright holder), the work can be copied and distributed to anyone in the United States without paying any fees or charges. If you are redistributing or providing access to a work with the phrase “Project Gutenberg” associated with or appearing on the work, you must comply either with the requirements of paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 or obtain permission for the use of the work and the Project Gutenberg trademark as set forth in paragraphs 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.3. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is posted with the permission of the copyright holder, your use and distribution must comply with both paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 and any additional terms imposed by the copyright holder. Additional terms will be linked to the Project Gutenberg License for all works posted with the permission of the copyright holder found at the beginning of this work.

1.E.4. Do not unlink or detach or remove the full Project Gutenberg License terms from this work, or any files containing a part of this work or any other work associated with Project Gutenberg.

1.E.5. Do not copy, display, perform, distribute or redistribute this electronic work, or any part of this electronic work, without prominently displaying the sentence set forth in paragraph 1.E.1 with active links or immediate access to the full terms of the Project Gutenberg License.

1.E.6. You may convert to and distribute this work in any binary, compressed, marked up, nonproprietary or proprietary form, including any word processing or hypertext form. However, if you provide access to or distribute copies of a Project Gutenberg work in a format other than “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other format used in the official version posted on the official Project Gutenberg website (www.gutenberg.org), you must, at no additional cost, fee or expense to the user, provide a copy, a means of exporting a copy, or a means of obtaining a copy upon request, of the work in its original “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other form. Any alternate format must include the full Project Gutenberg License as specified in paragraph 1.E.1.

1.E.7. Do not charge a fee for access to, viewing, displaying, performing, copying or distributing any Project Gutenberg works unless you comply with paragraph 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.8. You may charge a reasonable fee for copies of or providing access to or distributing Project Gutenberg electronic works provided that:

- You pay a royalty fee of 20% of the gross profits you derive from the use of Project Gutenberg works calculated using the method you already use to calculate your applicable taxes. The fee is owed to the owner of the Project Gutenberg trademark, but he has agreed to donate royalties under this paragraph to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation. Royalty payments must be paid within 60 days following each date on which you prepare (or are legally required to prepare) your periodic tax returns. Royalty payments should be clearly marked as such and sent to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation at the address specified in Section 4, “Information about donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation.”
- You provide a full refund of any money paid by a user who notifies you in writing (or by e-mail) within 30 days of receipt that s/he does not agree to the terms of the full Project Gutenberg™ License. You must require such a user to return or destroy all copies of the works possessed in a physical medium and discontinue all use of and all access to other copies of Project Gutenberg™ works.
- You provide, in accordance with paragraph 1.F.3, a full refund of any money paid for a work or a replacement copy, if a defect in the electronic work is discovered and reported to you within 90 days of receipt of the work.

- You comply with all other terms of this agreement for free distribution of Project Gutenberg™ works.

1.E.9. If you wish to charge a fee or distribute a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work or group of works on different terms than are set forth in this agreement, you must obtain permission in writing from the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the manager of the Project Gutenberg™ trademark. Contact the Foundation as set forth in Section 3 below.

1.F.

1.F.1. Project Gutenberg volunteers and employees expend considerable effort to identify, do copyright research on, transcribe and proofread works not protected by U.S. copyright law in creating the Project Gutenberg™ collection. Despite these efforts, Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, and the medium on which they may be stored, may contain “Defects,” such as, but not limited to, incomplete, inaccurate or corrupt data, transcription errors, a copyright or other intellectual property infringement, a defective or damaged disk or other medium, a computer virus, or computer codes that damage or cannot be read by your equipment.

1.F.2. LIMITED WARRANTY, DISCLAIMER OF DAMAGES - Except for the “Right of Replacement or Refund” described in paragraph 1.F.3, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the owner of the Project Gutenberg™ trademark, and any other party distributing a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work under this agreement, disclaim all liability to you for damages, costs and expenses, including legal fees. YOU AGREE THAT YOU HAVE NO REMEDIES FOR NEGLIGENCE, STRICT LIABILITY, BREACH OF WARRANTY OR BREACH OF CONTRACT EXCEPT THOSE PROVIDED IN PARAGRAPH 1.F.3. YOU AGREE THAT THE FOUNDATION, THE TRADEMARK OWNER, AND ANY DISTRIBUTOR UNDER THIS AGREEMENT WILL NOT BE LIABLE TO YOU FOR ACTUAL, DIRECT, INDIRECT, CONSEQUENTIAL, PUNITIVE OR INCIDENTAL DAMAGES EVEN IF YOU GIVE NOTICE OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGE.

1.F.3. LIMITED RIGHT OF REPLACEMENT OR REFUND - If you discover a defect in this electronic work within 90 days of receiving it, you can receive a refund of the money (if any) you paid for it by sending a written explanation to the person you received the work from. If you received the work on a physical medium, you must return the medium with your written explanation. The person or entity that provided you with the defective work may elect to provide a replacement copy in lieu of a refund. If you received the work electronically, the person or entity providing it to you may choose to give you a second opportunity to receive the work electronically in lieu of a refund. If the second copy is also defective, you may demand a refund in writing without further opportunities to fix the problem.

1.F.4. Except for the limited right of replacement or refund set forth in paragraph 1.F.3, this work is provided to you 'AS-IS', WITH NO OTHER WARRANTIES OF ANY KIND, EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY OR FITNESS FOR ANY PURPOSE.

1.F.5. Some states do not allow disclaimers of certain implied warranties or the exclusion or limitation of certain types of damages. If any disclaimer or limitation set forth in this agreement violates the law of the state applicable to this agreement, the agreement shall be interpreted to make the maximum disclaimer or limitation permitted by the applicable state law. The invalidity or unenforceability of any provision of this agreement shall not void the remaining provisions.

1.F.6. INDEMNITY - You agree to indemnify and hold the Foundation, the trademark owner, any agent or employee of the Foundation, anyone providing copies of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works in accordance with this agreement, and any volunteers associated with the production, promotion and distribution of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, harmless from all liability, costs and expenses, including legal fees, that arise directly or indirectly from any of the following which you do or cause to occur: (a) distribution of this or any Project Gutenberg work, (b) alteration, modification, or additions or deletions to any Project Gutenberg work, and (c) any Defect you cause.

Section 2. Information about the Mission of Project Gutenberg

Project Gutenberg is synonymous with the free distribution of electronic works in formats readable by the widest variety of computers including obsolete, old, middle-aged and new computers. It exists because of the efforts of hundreds of volunteers and donations from people in all walks of life.

Volunteers and financial support to provide volunteers with the assistance they need are critical to reaching Project Gutenberg's goals and ensuring that the Project Gutenberg collection will remain freely available for generations to come. In 2001, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation was created to provide a secure and permanent future for Project Gutenberg and future generations. To learn more about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation and how your efforts and donations can help, see Sections 3 and 4 and the Foundation information page at www.gutenberg.org.

Section 3. Information about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation is a non-profit 501(c)(3) educational corporation organized under the laws of the state of Mississippi and granted tax exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service. The Foundation's EIN or federal tax identification number is 64-6221541. Contributions to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation are tax deductible to the full extent permitted by U.S. federal laws and your state's laws.

The Foundation's business office is located at 41 Watchung Plaza #516, Montclair NJ 07042, USA, +1 (862) 621-9288. Email contact links and up to date contact information can be found at the Foundation's website and official page at www.gutenberg.org/contact

Section 4. Information about Donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

Project Gutenberg™ depends upon and cannot survive without widespread public support and donations to carry out its mission of increasing the number of public domain and licensed works that can be freely distributed in machine-readable form accessible by the widest array of equipment including outdated equipment. Many small donations ($1 to $5,000) are particularly important to maintaining tax exempt status with the IRS.

The Foundation is committed to complying with the laws regulating charities and charitable donations in all 50 states of the United States. Compliance requirements are not uniform and it takes a considerable effort, much paperwork and many fees to meet and keep up with these requirements. We do not solicit donations in locations where we have not received written confirmation of compliance. To SEND DONATIONS or determine the status of compliance for any particular state visit www.gutenberg.org/donate.

While we cannot and do not solicit contributions from states where we have not met the solicitation requirements, we know of no prohibition against accepting unsolicited donations from donors in such states who approach us with offers to donate.

International donations are gratefully accepted, but we cannot make any statements concerning tax treatment of donations received from outside the United States. U.S. laws alone swamp our small staff.

Please check the Project Gutenberg web pages for current donation methods and addresses. Donations are accepted in a number of other ways including checks, online payments and credit card donations. To donate, please visit: www.gutenberg.org/donate.

Section 5. General Information About Project Gutenberg electronic works

Professor Michael S. Hart was the originator of the Project Gutenberg concept of a library of electronic works that could be freely shared with anyone. For forty years, he produced and distributed Project Gutenberg eBooks with only a loose network of volunteer support.

Project Gutenberg eBooks are often created from several printed editions, all of which are confirmed as not protected by copyright in the U.S. unless a copyright notice is included. Thus, we do not necessarily keep eBooks in compliance with any particular paper edition.

Most people start at our website which has the main PG search facility: www.gutenberg.org.

This website includes information about Project Gutenberg, including how to make donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, how to help produce our new eBooks, and how to subscribe to our email newsletter to hear about new eBooks.
