

THE NURSE IN GREEK LIFE

By

SISTER MARY ROSARIA, M. A.

OF THE

SISTERS OF CHARITY, HALIFAX, N. S.

A DISSERTATION

*Submitted to the Catholic Sisters College of the Catholic University of America in Partial Fulfilment
of the Requirements for the Degree
Doctor of Philosophy*

BOSTON

JUNE, 1917

THE NURSE IN GREEK LIFE

By

SISTER MARY ROSARIA, M. A.

OF THE

SISTERS OF CHARITY, HALIFAX, N. S.

A DISSERTATION

*Submitted to the Catholic Sisters College of the Catholic University of America in Partial Fulfilment
of the Requirements for the Degree
Doctor of Philosophy*

BOSTON

JUNE, 1917

The Project Gutenberg eBook of The Nurse in Greek Life

This eBook is for the use of anyone anywhere in the United States and most other parts of the world at no cost and with almost no restrictions whatsoever. You may copy it, give it away or re-use it under the terms of the Project Gutenberg License included with this eBook or online at www.gutenberg.org. If you are not located in the United States, you will have to check the laws of the country where you are located before using this eBook.

Title: The Nurse in Greek Life

Author: Sister Mary Rosaria

Release date: January 4, 2021 [eBook #64215]

Most recently updated: October 18, 2024

Language: English

Other information and formats: www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/64215

Credits: Richard Tonsing and the Online Distributed Proofreading Team at <https://www.pgdp.net> (This file was produced from images generously made available by The Internet Archive)

 START OF THE PROJECT GUTENBERG EBOOK THE NURSE IN GREEK LIFE ***

Transcriber's Note:

The cover image was created by the transcriber and is placed in the public domain.

THE NURSE IN GREEK LIFE

By

SISTER MARY ROSARIA, M. A.

OF THE

SISTERS OF CHARITY, HALIFAX, N. S.

A DISSERTATION

Submitted to the Catholic Sisters College of the Catholic University of America in Partial Fulfilment of the Requirements for the Degree Doctor of Philosophy

BOSTON

JUNE, 1917

PREFACE

The frequent mention of the nurse in connection with the child and the family and the numerous descriptions of her in Greek art have suggested the investigation of Greek classical literature and the inscriptions with the purpose of ascertaining and presenting the position and characteristics of the nurse as a contribution to the private life of the Greeks. The subject here dealt with is viewed solely from the social standpoint, though the writer recognizes its value from the literary and psychological sides.

The scope of this study practically includes the whole range of Greek literature from Homer to Plutarch. A correct notion of the part played in Greek life by this character could not have been obtained from a narrower field. Certain phases of the nurse's life are discussed by Becker in his "Charicles" (Excursus to Scene I), and references to different aspects of the subject are found in Hermann's "Lehrbuch" (3rd. ed., pt. IV). Friedländer's "Sittengeschichte Roms" (5th. ed., I, p. 468ff.) was of special value in throwing light on some of the μυθόι of Chapter IV. Wherever the works of other modern authors dealing with Greek domestic life have been used, due credit will be given them.

SISTER MARY ROSARIA.

Feast of St. Joseph,
March 19, 1917.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	PAGE
PREFACE	3
CHAPTER I. TERMS USED FOR NURSE.
τροφός, τίτθη, τιθήνη, μαῖα	7
CHAPTER II. SOCIAL STATUS OF THE NURSE.
From Homer to Herodotus—In Tragedy—In Athens—Foreign Nurses	9
CHAPTER III. THE NURSE AND THE FAMILY.
Duties to the Child—Bathing—Swaddling—First Nurture—Wet nurses—Food—Child in the Nurse’s Arms—Carrying of Child—Motion Profitable for Young Children—Moulding of Child’s Body—Cradles—σκάφη ... λίκνον,—Rocking of the Cradle—Amusements Furnished by the Nurse—Making of Toys—Balls—Rattles—Dolls—Dandling Fruit—Theatres—General Care Over Children—Keeping them Clean—Fondling Children—Pet Names—Humoring Child—Method of Finding Out What Children Want—Crying of Children—Amulets—Time Spent in Nursery.
The Nurse and the Grown Daughter—Nausicaa’s Nurse—Tragic Nurse—Care of Young Maiden—Go-between in Maiden’s Love Affairs—Comfort and Consolation.
The Nurse and the Grown Son—Eurycleia—Cilissa—Moschio’s Nurse—Old Nurse in Demosthenes—Esteem for Nurse....
The Nurse in the Household—Washing—Eurycleia’s Duties—Duties Enumerated by Demeter—Tragedy—Comedy—General Characteristics of the Nurse—Eurycleia—Nurse in Herodotus—Orestes’ Nurse—Nurse in Medea—in Trachiniae—in Hippolytus—Aristophanes’ πιστή, τροφός—Nurse’s Care Shown in Samia—in Real Life—Instances of Unkindness Few—Plutarch—Stobaeus—Aristophanes—Chattering and Tippling Propensities—Metaphors of Nurse	16
CHAPTER IV. NURSERY TALES AND LULLABIES.

The Nurse in Education—First Lessons Imparted by Means of Tales—Isolated Traces of Nursery Tales—Held in Contempt by the Greeks—Apotropaic Tales—Lamia—Gorgon—Mormolyke—Acco—Alphito—Empusa—Strigla—Wolf—Example from Theocritus—from Callimachus—Mormo—Bad Effects of these Tales—Protreptic Tales—Subject Matter—Censorship by Plato and Aristotle—Immoral effects of Stories about the Gods—Hermes—Hercules—Odysseus—Theseus and Ariadne—Magic Rings—Rings of Gyges—Tales Told for Comfort and Consolation—Festival of the Oschophoria—Style—Purpose—Aesopic Tales—Libyan—Cyprian—Sybaritic—Traces of Lullabies—Metrical Humming—Peculiar Tune—Imitations of Lullabies—Lullaby of Alcmena—Lament of Danae—Chorus in Philoctetes—in Orestes

34

CHAPTER V. MONUMENTS TO THE NURSE.

Form—Relief—Melitta—Malicha—τίτθη χρηστή—Name of Nurse Added—Her Master—Country—Simple Word τίτθη—Nurse represented on Monument of Mother—Shared in Grief of Family—Literary Evidence of Monuments—Theocritus—Anthology—Callimachus

45

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

I. TEXTS OF SOURCES

49

II. SECONDARY AUTHORITIES

50

CHAPTER I

TERMS USED FOR NURSE

Of the various terms employed in the literature to designate the nurse we shall speak only of four: τροφός, τιθήνη, μαῖα, and τίτθη. The first three are found in Homer^[1] and the Hymns^[2] with no apparent difference of meaning. τίτθη is of later origin and is used of a wet-nurse by Plato,^[3] Demosthenes,^[4] Aristotle,^[5] Antiphanes,^[6] Plutarch,^[7] Soranus.^[8] The ancient lexicographers generally bear out this meaning of the word. While Herodianus (I, 456, l. 2, Lentz), Hesychius and Photius give τροφός as a synonym for τίτθη, Suidas defines it more at length: τίτθαι, οὕτω καλοῦνται αἱ τοῖς τιτθίοις καὶ τῷ γάλακτι τρέφουσαι τὰ παιδία. Eustathius^[9] calls wet-nurses τίτθαι, and those who have the care of children after weaning τιθηνοί and τροφοί: τίτθαι ... αἱ τοὺς τιτθοὺς παρέχουσαι ... τιθηνοὶ δέ, ἔτι δὲ καὶ τροφοὶ ... αἱ τὸν ἄλλον φασί, πόνον μετὰ τὸν ἀπογαλακτισμὸν ἀναεχόμεναι. Pollux defines τίτθαι as αἱ θηλάζουσαι (II, 163) and again (III, 50) he says: τὴν δὲ θηλάζουσαν Εὐπόλις τίττην θηλάστριαν ὠνόμασε. Between τιθήνη and τίτθη he makes this distinction: ἡ δὲ τροφὸς τῆς κόρης, τιθήνη· καὶ ἡ γάλα παρέχουσα τίτθη (III, 41). However, a writer of the second century A. D. plainly referring to a wet-nurse, uses τίτηνη, κοῦρος ὑπ' ἐκ μαζοῖο τιθήνης χεῖλεσιν αὖ ἐρύει λαρὸν γλάγος.^[10]

The Etymologicum Magnum refers τιθήνη to τιθόν: τιθήνας, τροφούς παρὰ τὸ τιθόν. According to Brugmann^[11] τίτθη, τιθήνη, τίτθος are formed by reduplication beside θήλη, “mother’s breast.”

As to the word τροφός, Herodianus (I, 225, l. 11, Lentz) refers it to τρέφω. Hesychius^[12] contrasts it with θρέμμα, “nursling.” Pollux (l. c.)

seems to distinguish τροφός and μαῖα and to take the latter as meaning more strictly, “Ea quae lactat,” as Stephanus remarks in his Thesaurus.

Various meanings were attached to the word μαῖα. Besides its use as “mid-wife,” it was employed as a form of address in speaking to nurses:

εἰ δ’ ἄγε δὴ μοι, μαῖα φίλη.^[13]

μαῖα, θεῶν μὲν δῶρα καὶ ἀχνύμενοι περ ἀνάγκη.^[14]

μαῖα, πάλιν μου κρύψον κεφαλάν.^[15]

The signification was even extended to embrace the true mother, as attested by Euripides, Alcestis 393, where the child says of its mother: μαῖα δὴ κάτω βέβακεν.

To distinguish accurately and sharply between the different words for nurse is not our present purpose. Doubtless the differences between them were not broad and clear even to the Greeks themselves. τροφός seems to be employed as the generic term, while τίθη is generally used for “wet-nurse” and τροφός and τιθήνη for “nursery-maid.”

CHAPTER II

SOCIAL STATUS OF THE NURSE

From Homer to Herodotus

The Homeric poems deal wholly with the life of the upper classes. Hence we do not get from them a complete picture of how all classes lived. Even for the aristocrat therein described, the habits of life were simple. Mothers nursed their own children: thus Hecuba speaks to her son, Hector:

Ἕκτορ, τέκνον ἐμόν, τάδε τ' αἶδεο καὶ μ' ἐλέησον
αὐτήν, εἴ ποτέ τοι λαθικηδέα μαζὸν ἐπέσχον.^[16]

Still, there is one instance which points to a different practice. Odysseus in addressing his old nurse Eurycleia says:

μαῖα, τίη μ' ἐθέλεις ὀλέσαι; σὺ δέ μ' ἔτρεφες αὐτὴ
τῷ σῶ ἐπὶ μαζῷ.^[17]

The expression ἐπὶ μαζῷ here employed is used in another place of the relation between mother and child:

πάις δέ οἱ ἦν ἐπὶ μαζῷ
νήπιος, ὅς που νῦν γε μετ' ἀνδρῶν ἵζει ἀριθμῷ.^[18]

However this may be, nurses were employed as the attendants of the children whom they amused and brought up as long as they remained in the house of the parents.

Whatever function she performed, the Homeric nurse was a slave, either a captive:

τήν ποτ' Ἀπείρηθεν νέες ἤγαγον ἀμφιέλισσαι.^[19]

or purchased as an ordinary slave:

τήν ποτε Λαέρτης πρίατο κτεάτεσσιν ἐοῖσι, πρωθήβην ἔτ' ἐοῦσαν, εἰκοσάβοια δ' ἔδωκεν.^[20]

The Phrygian nurse of Hector's son may be taken as a model of the Greek nurse of an infant. Nothing is said as to her social standing, but we infer from her occupation^[21] that she was a slave.

The Phoenician woman, nurse to Eumaeus, gives us an instance of the nurse of an older child. She had been captured and sold as a slave to a master, whose hard bonds she feared:

ἀλλά μ' ἀνήρπαξαν Τάφιοι ληίστορες ἄνδρες ἀγρόθεν ἐρχομένην, πέρασαν δέ τε δεῦρ' ἀγαγόντες τοῦδ' ἀνδρὸς πρὸς δώμαθ'· ὁ δ' ἄξιον ὄνον ἔδωκε.

μή τις ποτὶ δῶμα γέροντι
ἐλθὼν ἐξείπῃ, ὁ δ' οἷσάμενος καταδήσῃ δεσμῷ ἐν ἀργαλέῳ, ὑμῖν δ' ἐπιφράσσειτ' ὄλεθρον.^[25]

In striking contrast to this unfaithful slave is Eurycleia, the nurse of the grown son, whose rank is higher than that of the ordinary slave, for she had general supervision over the fifty female slaves of the household and assisted the mistress in teaching them:

πεντήκοντά τοί εἰσιν ἐνὶ μεγάροισι γυναῖκες δμωαί, τὰς μὲν τ' ἔργα διδάξαμεν ἐργάζεσθαι, εἰρία τε ξαίνειν καὶ δουλοσύνην ἀνέχεσθαι.^[23]

It is she, too, who fills the important office of ταμίη.^[24] Indeed, she is treated as a member of the family, is the friend and confidante of the mistress who shows her great deference.^[25]

The nurse of the grown daughter is seen in Eurymedusa who had been a captive, the prize of King Alcinous.^[26]

Penelope's nurse, Eurynome, has much the same office as Eurycleia.^[27] Like her, she is a trusted slave devoted to her mistress.

In the Homeric Hymn to Demeter, the duties which the goddess takes upon herself when she assumes the form of a nurse are identical with those performed by Eurycleia in the Odyssey:

καί κεν παῖδα νεογνὸν ἐν ἀγκοίνῃσιν ἔχουσα
καλὰ τιθηνοίμην, καὶ δώματα τηρήσαιμι, καί κε λέχος στορέσαιμι μυχῶ θαλάμων εὐπῆκτων
δεσπόσυνον, καί κ' ἔργα διδασκῆσαιμι γυναῖκας.^[28]

Still, she is not the slave of the people for whom she works, and is promised such compensation (θρεπτήρια) for her services as would make her an object of envy to the women of the household.^[29]

Aphrodite learned Anchises' language from her Trojan nurse:

γλῶσσαν δ' ὑμετέρην καὶ ἡμετέρην σάφα οἶδα·
Τρῶας γὰρ μεγάρῳ με τροφὸς τρέφεν, ἡ δὲ διαπρό σμικρὴν παῖδ' ἀτίταλλε φίλης παρὰ μητρὸς ἐλοῦσα.^[30]

The nurse is probably a slave, for wherever slave-trading was known it must have been usual to employ a foreign nurse.

The historians naturally have but little occasion to speak of domestic life. Herodotus, however, introduces into his narrative not only political history, but also matters of purely social interest. Hence we are not surprised to find a nurse in his sixth book.^[31] This nurse is presumably a slave, for she receives the commands of the parents to show the child to no one.

In Tragedy.

The nurses of Tragedy are old women who have spent years in the service of their masters (παλαιὸν οἴκων κτῆμα).^[32] Even after the child they had nursed had grown up, they were still retained in the household.^[33] There can be no doubt that like the nurses of Homer they were slaves.^[34] Medea's nurse is addressed as κτῆμα δεσποίνης^[35] and when speaking to the παιδαγωγός, she calls herself σύνδουλος.^[36] Then, too, the fall of the mistress involved that of the nurse, a calamity hinted at in Hippolytus:

οὐ δῆθ' ἐκοῦσά γ', ἐν δὲ σοὶ λελείψομαι;^[37]

and in Medea:

χρηστοῖσι δούλοις ξυμφορὰ τὰ δεσποτῶν
κακῶς πίτνοντα, καὶ φρενῶν ἀνθάπτεται.^[38]

Hecuba, bewailing her fate, foresees that she who had once been Queen of Troy will be forced to become the nurse of children.^[39]

In Athens

But it was not only captives and slaves who nursed children. In the fourth century we find at Athens free women performing the office of nurse. Euxitelos in pleading against Eubolides answers the reproach they attach to his mother of having been a nurse. He says that his father had gone to the war, leaving his mother with two small children to support. Hence she was obliged to take Cleinias to nurse: αὐτὴ δ' οὗ σ' ἐν ἀπορίαις, ἠναγκάσθη τὸν Κλεινίαν τὸν τοῦ Κλειδίκου τιθεῖσαι.^[40] He admits that it is a mean employment, but affirms that he can give the names of free-born women, who, like his mother, were compelled by stress of poverty to become nurses: καὶ γὰρ νῦν ἀστὰς γυναῖκας πολλὰς εὐρήσετε τιθευούσας.^[41]

In another Oration of Demosthenes, In Evergum, there is an instance of an old and poor nurse living with the man she had nursed as a child. The father of this person, in recompense for her care, had given her her freedom: καὶ μετ' αὐτῆς τίτθῃ τις ἐμοὶ γενομένη πρεσβυτέρα, ἄνθρωπος εὖνους καὶ πιστή, καὶ ἀφειμένη ἐλευθέρα ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς τοῦ ἐμοῦ.^[42] She married and on the death of her husband returned to her nursling, who received her all the more willingly inasmuch as he was about to leave home and was pleased to have such a sure companion for his wife. When Euvergus and his accomplices break into the house, they find the old woman seated at table with the mistress and children. The nurse, trying to conceal a vase in her dress, is seen by the robbers who fall upon her and beat her until she gives it up. Some days afterwards she dies from injuries received, but not before having been cared for by a doctor summoned especially for her.

No instance is given by Plato or Aristotle of the manumission of a nurse. The former, on the contrary, speaks of the δούλεια ἥθη τροφῶν.^[43]

The nurse of New Comedy is usually a slave; still she sometimes receives her freedom, as in the case of Moschio's nurse in the Samia of Menander:

τοῦ δὲ Μοσχίωνος ἦν
τίτθῃ τις αὕτη πρεσβυτέρα, γεγονυῖ ἐμὴ θεράπαιν', ἐλευθέρα δὲ νῦν.^[44]

“Though emancipated, she yet remained in the service of her former master,” her status being similar to that of the metic.^[45] We also have inscriptional evidence that women belonging to the metic class were employed as nurses who being free-born must have received wages: Ἀπολλοδώρου ἰσοτέλου θυγάτηρ Μέλιττα τίτθη.^[46]

Foreign Nurses

Though the Athenians had a natural repugnance to the severity of the Spartan discipline, still the aversion was not so intense but that some of the Lacedemonian customs found ready acceptance in Athens. Aristophanes, Birds, 1281,^[47] makes it clear that the Athenians were “Spartan-mad.” For this reason, no doubt, Spartan women whose robust health was famed throughout Greece,^[48] were sought to inaugurate that regimen peculiar to the Spartan nurse. Hence Plutarch: Διὸ καὶ τῶν ἔξωθεν ἔνιοι τοῖς τέκνοις Λακωνικὰς ἐωνοῦντο τιτθάς,^[49] and he also records that Amycla, the nurse of Alcibiades was a Spartan: Ἀλκιβιάδου δὲ καὶ τίτθην, γένος Λάκαιναν, Ἀμύκλαν ὄνομα.^[50] The virtue of these Spartan women and the esteem in which they were generally held are attested to by a monument erected by Diogeitus to the nurse of his children. On it we find the following inscription:

Ἐνθάδε γῇ κατέχει τίτθην παιδίων Διογείτου ἐκ
Πελοποννήσου τὴν δὲ δικαιοτάτην.
Μαλίχα Κυθηρία.^[51]

But it was not only from Sparta that the Athenians obtained nurses for their children. We have an inscription from the monument of the Corinthian nurse Φάνιον.^[52] And there is an epigram of Callimachus on a Phrygian nurse whose master cared for her during her life-time, and when she was dead set up her statue, that posterity might see how the old woman received in full the thanks for her nurture.^[53] Thrace, too, furnished its share of types of nurses:

καί μ' ἄ Θευχαρίδα Θρᾷσσα τροφὸς ἄ μακαρῖτις ἀγχίθυρος ναίεισα, κατεύξατο καὶ λιτάνεσε
τὰν πομπὰν θάσασθαι.^[54]

Such was the honor in which they were held that one Cleita was considered worthy of a monument, as we learn from an epigram of Theocritus:

ὁ μίκκος τόδ' ἔτευξε τᾷ Θραΐσσᾳ,
Μήδειος τὸ μνᾶμ' ἐπὶ τᾷ ὁδῷ κήπέγραψε Κλείτας.^[55]

The fact that the Greeks employed foreign nurses may also be inferred from the essay, De Liberis Educandis, attributed to Plutarch, in which the author loudly inveighs against the practice of entrusting children to any nurse whatsoever. He insists on her being selected with the utmost care, laying down as a fundamental qualification that she be of the Greek race: ἀλλὰ τάς γε τίθας καὶ τὰς τροφούς, οὐ τὰς τυχούσας, ἀλλ' ὥς ἔνι μάλιστα σπουδαίας, δοκιμαστέον ἐστί. πρῶτον μὲν τοῖς ἡθεσιν Ἑλληνίδας.^[56] According to the same author these women received wages for their work: αἱ τίθαι δὲ καὶ αἱ τροφοὶ τὴν εὖνοιαν ὑποβολιμαίαν καὶ παρέγγραπτον ἔχουσιν, ἅτε μισθοῦ φιλοῦσαι.^[57]

Such was the social status of this Greek nurse, a picture necessarily composite since the details are drawn from so many sources; but from what has been said, it may be concluded that the nurse, though usually a slave, was sometimes manumitted, that a preference was frequently shown at Athens for the foreign-bred nurse and that on occasion free women resorted to nursing as a means of gaining a livelihood.

CHAPTER III

THE NURSE AND THE FAMILY

The helpless condition of infancy has always called for special offices to tide the child over the first years of life. These offices are performed either by mother or nurse. Among the Greeks, the nurse was a familiar figure in the household; and although our knowledge of Greek domestic life must necessarily be limited from the fact that the women's apartments are so persistently closed against us, nevertheless from side-lights furnished by our threefold source of information—the literature, the art and the inscriptions—we cannot help being impressed by the important place which the nurse held in the family.

Let us now turn to a more exact consideration of the various duties of the nurse in relation to the children, to the grown daughter, the grown son and lastly to the household. In this way we shall be led to a clearer conception of the general characteristics which marked the nurse's dealings with her charge.

DUTIES TO THE CHILD

Bathing

Among the principal duties incumbent on the nurse of an infant was the giving of the bath. That it was given immediately after birth, we infer from Lycophron's Alexandra, 309, where a child dies πρὶν ἐκ λοχείας γυῖα χυτλῶσαι δρόσῳ, and also from Plautus, Amphitryo, 1103: "Postquam peperit pueros lavere iussit nos." The heroine nymphs of Libya, acting as nurses, bathed Athena when she leaped in gleaming armor from the head of Zeus.^[58] Some nurses preferred pure water;^[59] others, like the Spartans, bathed the child in wine as a test of its strength, they being of the opinion that the weakly ones would faint, but the more vigorous would acquire firmness and hardness after a bath of this kind.^[60] On a vase portraying the life of Achilles one of the scenes shows the nurse giving the infant son of Thetis his first bath.^[61] The vessel in which this bath is given is mentioned by Pindar:

ἐπεὶ νιν καθαροῦ λέβητος ἔξελε Κλωθώ.^[62]

Swaddling Clothes

Attic nurses wrapped the infant in swaddling clothes (σπάργανα).^[63] As far as we can gather from the grave-reliefs these seem to have been long narrow strips of cloth bound like bandages around the child's body, which they completely covered from head to foot, leaving nothing but the face uncovered.^[64] White,^[65] purple,^[66] and saffron^[67] are mentioned as colors of these bands. The practice of swaddling children is alluded to by Hesiod,^[68] and frequent reference is made to it by the Tragedians.^[69] The Theban children given over to the state were swaddled.^[70] The nurse in the Amphitryo complained that Hercules was so large she could not swathe him.^[71] How long the children were kept thus bound we do not know; but we can hardly suppose that it was until they had reached the age of two years, as Plato advises.^[72] The Spartan nurses dispensed with these bands, allowing the children to grow up unrestrained in limb and form.^[73] Exposed children were sometimes recognized by the swaddling clothes.^[74]

Food

The child was suckled either by mother^[75] or nurse.^[76] Naturally the practice of employing wet-nurses prevailed chiefly among well-to-do mothers.^[77] The author of the De Liberis Educandis counsels mothers to nurse their own children, and dilates on the advantages accruing therefrom; nevertheless he permits the employment of wet-nurses wherever the mothers cannot perform the duty themselves.^[78] Antiphanes considered the Scythians the wisest of men because they fed their children on mare's and cow's milk, and did not entrust them to nurses as did the Greeks.^[79] In the Menaechmi of Plautus distinction is made between "mater quae mammam dabat" and "mater quae pepererat,"^[80] and in the Adelphi of Terence the services of a nurse are secured for a courtesan.^[81] We have ample evidence from Demosthenes that this employment was resorted to by poor women as a means of livelihood during the hard times which followed the Peloponnesian War.^[82] We read besides that nurses were allowed to nurse but one child at a time.^[83] Plato refers to definite laws regarding the nurture of children,^[84] and speaks of the time when they were fed with milk: ἐκ νέων παίδων ἔτι ἐν γάλαξιν τρεφόμενοι.^[85] In the community of wives and children, he would have the mothers, from a feeling of humanity, assisted in the nurture of the children by wet-nurses: καὶ ἄλλας γάλα ἐχούσας ἐκπορίζοντες.^[86] Aristotle associates infantile maladies with the physical condition of the nurse: εἴωτε δὲ τὰ παῖδια τὰ πλεῖστα σπασμὸς ἐπιλαμβάνειν καὶ μᾶλλον τὰ εὐτραφέστερα καὶ γάλακτι χρώμενα πλείονα ἢ παχυτέρῳ καὶ τίτθαις εὐσάρκεις,^[87] and φύει δὲ πρῶτον τοὺς προσθίους, καὶ τὰ μὲν τοὺς ἄνωθεν πρότερον, τὰ δὲ τοὺς κάτωθεν. πάντα δὲ θᾶπτον φύουσιν, ὅσων αἱ τίτθαι θερμότερον ἔχουσι τὸ γάλα.^[88] He objects to the use of wine for young children,^[89] and deems it unsuitable for the nurses as well: διὸ τοῖς παιδίοις οὐ συμφέρουσιν οἱ οἶνοι, οὐδὲ ταῖς τίτθαις.^[90] Dion Chrysostom speaks of its use: ὥσπερ ὑπὸ τίτθης γάλακτι καὶ οἴνῳ καὶ σιτίοις,^[91] but Hippocrates says: ἀμεῖνον εἶναι τοῖς παιδίοισιν τὸν οἶνον ὡς ὑδαρέστατον διδόναι.^[92] After being weaned,^[93] children were fed on milk,^[94] and honey.^[95] According to Athenaeus, young children thrive well on the juice of figs.^[96] They were also fed on morsels: “αἱ τὰ παιδιά ψωμίζουσι τροφοί.”^[97] The practice of first chewing the food before giving it to the child seems to have been usual, for we have several allusions to it. Democrates likens the orators to nurses αἱ τὸ ψώμισμα καταπίνουσαι, τῷ σιάλῳ τὰ παιδιά παραλείφουσι,^[98] and Sextus Empiricus has a similar statement: εἰκότως ταῖς τίθαις, αἱ μικρὸν τοῦ ψωμίσματος τοῖς παιδίοις διδοῦσαι τὸ ὅλον καταπίνουσι.^[99] Nor did it escape the ridicule of Aristophanes who says:

καθ’ ὥσπερ αἱ τίθαι γε σιτίζεις κακῶς μασώμενος γὰρ τῷ μὲν ὀλίγον ἐντίθης αὐτὸς δ’ ἐκεῖνον τριπλάσιον κατέσπακας.^[100]

Athenaeus tells the absurd story of a man who had his nurse chew his food for him all his life: Σάγαριν τὸν Μαριανδυνὸν ὑπὸ τοῦ τρυφῆς σιτεῖσθε μὲν μέχρι γήρωος ἐκ τοῦ τῆς τίθης στόματος, ἵνα μὴ μασώμενος πονήσειεν.^[101]

The Child in the Nurse’s Arms

In the beautiful idyllic scene of Iliad, vi, 389 ff., where Hector bids farewell to Andromache and his darling son, it is to the familiar arms of the nurse that the child turns when frightened by the glancing helm:

ἄψ δ’ ὁ παῖς πρὸς κόλπον εὐζώνοιο τιθήνης
ἐκλίνθη ἰάχων.^[102]

In those arms he had been carried,^[103] and when tired out from his childish play there he had slept on a soft cushion satisfied with every comfort:

αὐτὰρ ὅθ’ ὕπνος ἔλοι, παύσαιτό τε νηπιαχεύων, εὐδεσκ’ ἐν λέκτροισιν, ἐν ἀγκαλίδεσσι τιθήνης,
εὐνῇ ἐνι μαλακῇ, θαλέων ἐμπλησάμενος κῆρ.^[104]

In the Odyssey, too, the faithful Eurycleia is spoken of as carrying Odysseus and laying him in the arms of his grandsire, that the latter might choose for him a name.^[105] The author of the Homeric Hymn to Demeter puts these words into the mouth of the goddess-nurse:

καί κεν παῖδα νεογνὸν ἐν ἀγκοίνῃσιν ἔχουσα
καλὰ τιθηνοίμην.^[106]

The nurse in Herodotus carried the child each day to the temple of Helen.^[107] Iphigenia speaking of Orestes says that she left him at home a young child in the arms of his nurse:

ἔλιπον ἀγκάλαισι νεαρόν τροφοῦ.^[108]

At the festival of the Amphidromia, it was the nurse who carried the child around the hearth;^[109] and in the Nurse-festival (τιθηνίδια) at Sparta, the nurses carried the male children to the temple of Artemis.^[110] We know that nurses walked the floor with fretful children in order to soothe them. A good instance of this is given in Menander's Samia, 26–30 (Capps), where an old nurse fondles a child to her heart's content, kissing it and calling it soft names, walking around with it until it is quieted. “The homeopathic cure of morbid ‘enthusiasm’ by means of music was, it may be incidentally observed, known to Plato. In a passage of the Laws,^[111] where he is laying down the rules for the management of infants, his advice is that infants should be kept in perpetual motion, and live as if they were always tossing at sea. He proceeds to compare the principle on which religious ecstasy is cured by a strain of impassioned music, with the method of nurses, who lull their babes to sleep not by silence but by singing, not by holding them quiet, but by rocking them in their arms.... An external agitation (κίνησις) is employed to calm and counteract an internal. But Plato recognized the principle only as it applied to music and to the useful art of nursing.”

This perpetual motion used by the nurse is referred to in the Timaeus,^[112] and Aristotle thinks “it is of advantage to have all the movements made (of the bodies of infants) that it is possible to have made in the case of creatures so young.”^[113] Plato lays down regulations for the nurses to carry the children into the fields, to the temples, and on visits to their acquaintances until they are able to stand alone. He would have them carried until the end of the third year, lest their limbs should be distorted by standing on them too soon: καὶ δὴ καὶ τὰς τροφούς ἀναγκάζωμεν νόμῳ ζημιοῦντες τὰ παιδία ἢ πρὸς ἀγρούς ἢ πρὸς ἱερὰ ἢ πρὸς οἰκείους αἰεὶ πη φέρειν, μέχρι περ ἂν ἱκανῶς ἴστασθαι δυνατὰ γίγνηται, καὶ τότε διευλαβουμένας, ἔτι νέων ὄντων μή πη βία ἐπηρειδομένων στρέφηται τὰ κῶλα ἐπιπονεῖν φερούσας, ἕως ἂν τριέτες ἀποτελεσθῇ τὸ γινόμενον;^[114] This is doubtless the reason why there is no mention made of a contrivance to keep the children's limbs straight like the “serperastra”^[115] in use among the Romans.^[116] The Greeks were careful to develop the body and to have it well-shapen. In the Pseudo-

Plutarchian Essay, De Liberis Educandis, the writer thinks it necessary for the members of children to be shapen aright as soon as they are born: ὥσπερ γὰρ τὰ μέλη τοῦ σώματος εὐθὺς ἀπὸ γενέσεως πλάττειν τῶν τέκνων ἀναγκαῖόν ἐστι.^[117] In the De Virtute, the author tells us that this is the work of the nurses: αἱ τίθται ταῖς χερσὶ τὸ σῶμα πλάττουσι.^[118] Plato, speaking of the influence of stories on the minds of children, says that we must persuade the nurses and the mothers to form the souls of their children by these stories πολὺ μᾶλλον ἢ τὰ σώματα ταῖς χερσίν.^[119] This practice continued down to the days of Galen as is shown from the following: τὰ κῶλα διαπλάττουσι αἱ τροφοὶ τῶν βρεφῶν ὥσπερ κήρινα.^[120]

Cradles

The nurse had various contrivances in which to place the children after they were lulled to sleep. We read that Alcmena cradled her children in a shield:

χάλκειον κατέθηκεν ἐπ' ἀσπίδα.^[121]

The scholiast on Callimachus, Jove, 48, alluding to this passage of Theocritus, says that military men were accustomed to place their children in shields after birth that they might become vigorous and strong. A specimen of a Greek cradle, that of the infant Hermes, a little two-handled basket shaped like a shoe, is seen on a vase.^[122] The σκάφη, another kind of cradle, is mentioned as being instrumental in the ἀναγνώρισις of children: καὶ οἶνον ἐν τῇ Τυροῖ διὰ τῆς σκάφης.^[123] Children were also exposed in a σκάφη: ἐνθήμενος οὖν εἰς σκάφην τὰ βρέφη.^[124] Adrasteia, the nurse of Zeus, lulled him to sleep in a golden winnowing-fan:

Λίκνω ἐνὶ χρυσέῳ.^[125]

It was considered an omen of future wealth and prosperity to place children in these λίκνα.^[126] Bacchus is called λικνίτης,^[127] and is represented as carried in a λίκνον between a faun and a Bacchante.^[128] Hermes is conceived to have been cradled in the same manner.^[129] Another kind of cradle shown on a vase looks like a bed on rollers,^[130] and answers very well to the description given by Plutarch, Fragm. in Hesiod, 45: οἷά τισιν εὐκίνητα κλινίδια μεμηχάνηται πρὸς τὴν τῶν παιδίων εὐνήν. The rocking of the cradle is mentioned by Athenaeus: ἡ τροφὸς ... ἐτίθει αὐτὸ ἐν σκάφῃ ... ὅτε δὲ κλαίοι ... τὴν σκάφην ἐκίνει καὶ κατεκοίμιζεν αὐτό.^[131]

Amusements Furnished by the Nurse

It was natural for the nurse to amuse the children with the various kinds of toys in use in antiquity. Of these, both the literature and the art of Greece furnish many examples. We shall here consider only the toys which are mentioned in direct connection with the nurse. That the nurse sometimes made toys for the children, we learn from Apollonius Rhodius, iii, 131 ff., where the wonderful ball of Zeus τὸ οἷ ποίησε φίλη τροφὸς Ἀδράστεια is described. The shaking of rattles (κρόταλα) before children by the nurse is spoken of by Stobaeus,^[132] and Pollux has preserved a passage dealing with the same subject: τὸ κρόταλον καὶ τὸ σεῖστρον, ᾧ καταβαυκαλῶσιν αἱ τίτθαι ψυχαγωγοῦσαι τὰ δυσυπνοῦντα τῶν παιδίων.^[133] We have a vase-painting which portrays a nurse holding in her arms a child, while before its face she dandles a fruit.^[134] Plutarch's little daughter used to ask her nurse to give her dolls the breast.^[135] We learn from Plautus that the nurses took the children to the theatres:

Nutrix ...

Me spectatum tulerat per Dionysia.^[136]

And in the Poenulus, the nurses are bidden to refrain from bringing the children to that play.^[137] In Vitruvius' account of the origin of the Corinthian Capital, there is mention made of a Corinthian nurse who gathers in a basket the playthings which had served for the amusement of her nursling in life, in order to adorn the tomb with them after death.^[138]

General Care Over Children

To keep the child clean and to attend to all its wants were the principal occupations of the nurse. Cilissa recalls in touching terms the childhood of her dear nursling whose death she had just learned. She ran to him by night, at his least cry, anticipating all his wishes and foreseeing all his needs. Careful for the child's cleanliness, she washes its garments and its linen:

ὄν ἐξέθρεψα μητρόθεν δεδεγμένη, καὶ νυκτιπλάγκτον ὀρθίων κελευμάτων
καὶ πολλὰ καὶ μοχθήρ' ἄνωφέλητ' ἐμοὶ τλάσῃ. τὸ μὴ φρονοῦν γὰρ ὥσπερ εἰ βοτὸν τρέφειν ἀνάγκη, πῶς γὰρ οὐ; τρόπῳ φρενός· οὐ γὰρ τι φωνεῖ παῖς ἔτ' ὢν ἐν σπαργάνοις, εἰ λιμός ἢ δίψη τις, ἢ λιψουρία
ἔχει· νέα δὲ νηδὺς αὐτάρκης τέκνων.
τούτων πρόμαντις οὐσα, πολλὰ δ', οἴομαι, ψευσθεῖσα παιδὸς σπαργάνων φαιδρύντρια·
γναφεὺς τροφεὺς τε ταῦτόν εἰχέτην τέλος.^[139]

With less vividness Moschio's nurse recalls the days of his infancy.

πρώην τοιοῦτον ὄντα Μοσχίων' ἐγώ, αὐτόν ἐπιθνούμην ἀγαπῶσα, νῦν δ' ἐπεὶ
παιδίον ἐκείνου γέγονεν.^[140]

Suidas suggests another duty in an anonymous passage: μεῖράκια, ταῖς τίτθαις ἀπομύττειν ... ἀποπέμψατε, and the same thing is referred to in the first book of the Republic: περιορᾷ καὶ οὐκ ἀπομύττει.^[141] After the children were washed and dressed by the nurses, they were brought to their mothers who took them up and played with them.^[142] This fondling of children is mentioned in Agamemnon:

πολέα δ' ἔσχ' ἐν ἀγκάλαις νεοτρόφου τέκνου δίκαν.^[143]

and in Orestes:

καὶ γὰρ μ' ἔθρεψε σμικρὸν ὄντα, πολλὰ δὲ φιλήματ' ἐξέπλησε, τὸν Ἀγαμέμνονος παῖδ' ἀγκάλαισι περιφέρων.^[144]

That it was resorted to by the nurses, we gather from Samia, 29 ff., where we also learn that the nurse used pet names in speaking to the children. Aeschines says that Demosthenes acquired the nickname βᾶταλος from his nurse.^[145]

In learning to walk the children must have had many a tumble; but the nurse was always at hand to pick them up, and clean them, and tidy their dress and afterwards find fault with and correct them: καὶ γὰρ αἱ τίτθαι τοῖς παιδίοις πεσοῦσιν οὐ λοιδορησόμεναι προστρέχουσιν, ἀλλ' ἡγειραν καὶ κατέστειλαν, εἴθ' οὕτως ἐπιπλήττουσι καὶ κολάζουσι.^[146] Epictetus speaks of a nurse beating the stone which had caused a child to stumble.^[147]

Philoctetes, miserably crawling along the ground to obtain food, likens himself to a child without its kind nurse:

τότ' ἂν εἰλυόμενος, παῖς ἄτερ ὥς φίλας τίθηνας.^[148]

Plato speaks of a method nurses had of finding out what children want. When anything is brought to an infant and he is silent, then he is supposed to be pleased, but when he weeps and cries out, then he is not pleased.^[149] Aristotle thinks that the crying of infants should not be restrained since it is conducive to their growth: συμφέρουσι γὰρ πρὸς αὐξήσιν,^[150] but Plutarch in his De Cohibenda Ira says: ὅπερ οὖν αἱ τίτθαι πρὸς τὰ παῖδια λέγουσι “μὴ κλαῖε καὶ λήψῃ” τοῦτο πρὸς τὸν θυμὸν οὐκ ἀχρήστως.^[151] By means of amulets and charms the nurses sedulously guarded the children against the pernicious influence of witchcraft and the evil eye. Demeter, in the Homeric Hymn, promises the mother that no harm shall come to the child from witchcraft:

θρέψω, κοῦ μιν ἔολπα κακοφραδίῃσι τιθήνης
οὔτ' ἄρ' ἐπηλυσίη δηλήσεται οὔθ' ὑποτάμνον.^[152]

The amulets were usually of a grotesque character that the sight being diverted to them should not make so strong an impression on the child.^[153] On the approach of a stranger, a nurse in charge of a sleeping infant would spit towards him as if to keep off from the child a possibly evil influence.^[154] Another charm against the evil eye is preserved by St. John Chrysostom: βόρβορον αἱ γυναῖκες ἐν τῷ βαλανείῳ λαμβάνουσαι τροφοὶ καὶ θεραπαινίδες καὶ τῷ δακτύλῳ χρίσασαι κατὰ τοῦ πετώπου τυποῦσι τοῦ παιδίου κἂν ἔρηται τις, τί βούλεται ὁ βόρβορος τί δὲ ὁ πηλός; ὁφθαλμὸν πονηρὸν ἀναστρέφει, φασί, καὶ βασκανίαν καὶ φθόνον.^[155]

At what age the children left the care of the nurses is not certain. Chrysippus allows three years to them,^[156] and according to Plato, the boys and girls were separated at six.^[157] It seems clear that the boys, at least, were sent early to school to keep them out of harm's way: ἐπεὶ καὶ αἱ τίτθαι τοιάδε λέγουσι περὶ τῶν παιδίων ὥς ἀπιτέον αὐτοῖς ἐς διδασκάλου. καὶ γὰρ ἂν μηδέπω μαθεῖν ἀγαθὸν τι δύνωνται, ἀλλ' οὖν φαῦλον οὐδὲν ποιήσουσιν ἐκεῖ μένοντες.^[158]

The Nurse and the Grown Daughter

The tie between nurse and child might continue strong in later years. She often remained in the family as the attendant and sometimes as the confidante of the young maiden. Thus Nausicaa's old nurse lights her fire and prepares her evening meal:

ἢ οἱ πῦρ ἀνέκαιε καὶ εἴσω δόρπον ἐκόσμιε.^[159]

The same nurse who had tended Phaedra as an infant remained in her service until the death of her mistress. Her devotion, introduced mainly as a dramatic expedient, is nevertheless lifelike. Indeed it is the blindness, even to precipitancy, of her love of Phaedra which must be held accountable for the method employed by her to cure the distemper of her mistress. This she herself acknowledges in her answer to Phaedra:

ἔθρεψά σ' εὖνους τ' εἰμί· τῆς νόσου δέ σοι ζητοῦσα φάρμαχ' ἡὔρον οὐχ ἀβουλόμην.
εἰ δ' εὖ γ' ἔπραξα, κάρτ' ἂν ἐν σοφοῖσιν ᾤ· πρὸς τὰς τύχας γὰρ τὰς φρένας κεκτήμεθα.^[160]

We read that the nurse accompanied the young maiden out of doors, guarded her well, looking askance at admirers who were attracted by the girl's beauty: "Thou old nurse of a loved one, why do you bark at me while approaching you, and harshly throw me into twice as many pains? For you are leading a very beautiful virgin in whose steps I am treading. See, how I am going along my own path. It is sweet merely to look upon her form. What grudging of eyes is there, thou wretched one! We look upon the forms of even the immortals...."^[161]

Still, she is sometimes the go-between in the maiden's love affairs, as in the tale of Acontius and Cydippe.^[162] So, too, the old nurse of Hero dries the tears of her love-sick charge and receives her confidence.^[163] The power and influence of Polyxo, the aged nurse of Hypsipyle, are evidenced by the fact of her being consulted in an affair of state.^[164] That these old nurses were wont to comfort and console their charges when grown up, we learn from the following:

ἤυτε κούρη
οἴοθεν ἀσπασίως πολιὴν τροφὸν ἀμφιπεσοῦσα μύρεται.^[165]

The Nurse and the Grown Son

Outside of Homer, we do not find the nurse as actively engaged in duties towards the grown son as towards the daughter. Eurycleia continued her care of Telemachus until he came to man's estate. She accompanied him to his chamber, folded and smoothed his clothes, and having hung them up, carefully closed the door after her.^[166] She welcomed him as a son on his return from Pylos,^[167] and is sought by him as his faithful friend.^[168] She gently reproved him for having blamed his mother where there was no blame,^[169] yet she was anxious to see him established in his rights.^[170] She is the first to recognize her old master and former nursling, Odysseus.^[171] On the recognition, he addresses her by the old name of his childhood, μάῃα, which Telemachus also uses.^[172]

The grief of Cilissa for Orestes shows that her love for him had endured beyond the nursery days.^[173] The unfortunate woodcutter in Callimachus' Demeter, who had offended the goddess, was bewailed by the nurse by whom he had been suckled.^[174] Moschio's nurse still retained loving thoughts of her dear child, Moschio, and was much interested in the son for the sake of the father.^[175] The old nurse in Demosthenes' In Evergum was welcomed by her former nursling as a safe companion for his wife during his absence, and his care of her after the robbery is an evidence of the esteem in which she was held.^[176] A further indication of the love and gratitude evinced by young men for the nurses of their childhood is shown in the relatively large number of monuments and epigrams dedicated to them.^[177]

The Nurse in the Household

When the nurse was not occupied with the child, she owed towards the household, duties which are specifically mentioned in Homer; but not so clearly defined in later authors. Thus the nurse of Eumaeus is engaged in washing when she is seduced by the pirates.^[178] Eurycleia is the mainstay of the house in Ithaca, having complete charge of the domestic arrangements. In the morning, she gives her directions for the day's work to the female slaves^[179] over whom she has joint supervision with the mistress.^[180] These, she taught how to perform the various works of the house—making beds, strewing couches, carding wool, setting tables and cleaning rooms. Besides, she is the stewardess of the household:

έν δὲ γυνὴ ταμίη νύκτας τε καὶ ἡμᾶρ
ἔσχ', ἣ πάντ' ἐφύλασσε νόου πολυιδρεΐησιν, Εὐρύκλει', Ὡπος θυγάτηρ Πεισηνορίδαο.^[181] and to her Telemachus applies for provisions for his journey.^[182] It is characteristic of her to keep the best wine against the homecoming of Odysseus.^[183]

Demeter enumerates the duties incumbent on a nurse in addition to her nursing cares:

οἷά τε τροφοὶ εἰσι θεμιστοπόλων βασιλῆων παίδων καὶ ταμίαι κατὰ δώματα ἡχήμεντα.
... καὶ δώματα τηρήσαιμι,
καὶ κε λέχος στορέσαιμι μυχῶ θαλάμων εὐπήκτων δεσπόσυνον, καὶ κ' ἔργα διδασκῆσαιμι γυναῖκας.^[184]

They are substantially the same as those of Eurycleia.

So far as we can see, the nurse of Tragedy is occupied almost exclusively with the mistress. The nurse of Medea, however, affects a superior tone in speaking to the παιδαγωγός,^[185] and gives him directions concerning the children.^[186] In a similar way the nurse of Comedy seems to have authority over some of the servants.^[187]

General Characteristics of the Nurse

Instances of the love and devotedness of nurses are not wanting in the literature. From Homer down, we see the nurse as a kind mother lavishing love and affection on the child that she nursed. In the Odyssey, Eurycleia is represented as loving Telemachus more than did the other women:

καὶ ἔτρεφε τυτθὸν ἐόντα.^[188]

and Penelope bears witness that Eurycleia had diligently nursed and tended Odysseus:

εὐ τρέφεν ἥδ' ἀτίταλλε.^[189]

Right willingly did the old nurse give her services to one who reminded her of her master. She is the first to recognize him by the scar he had received in his youth. Then

τὴν δ' ἅμα χάρμα καὶ ἄλγος ἔλε φρένα, τὼ δέ οἱ ὄσσε δακρυόφι πλησθεν, θαλερὲ δέ οἱ ἔσχετο φωνή.^[190]

A picture of true devotedness is given by Herodotus,^[191] where a nurse takes an ugly child every day to the temple of Helen to implore the gift of beauty for her charge.

Stesichorus^[192] and Pindar^[193] assert that it was the nurse who saved Orestes from his mother after his father's murder. Aeschylus calls her Cilissa, and points her out to us as full of love and devotedness for the child.^[194] Such is the devotion of Medea's nurse for her mistress that the old παιδαγωγός is surprised to see her outside the place without Medea.^[195] The nurse in the Trachiniae shows real grief for the fate of her mistress,^[196] while Phaedra's nurse attributes her unwise action to excess of love,^[197] and Hypsipyle's nursling is as dear to her as her own child.^[198] Fidelity is the attribute which characterizes Aristophanes' πιστὴ τροφός.^[199] A good instance of the nurse's care for the child is given in Menander, where an old nurse, seeing a child crying and neglected, goes up to it and says: "My darling, and my precious, and where is Mama?" She then kisses it and walks about with it until it stops crying, when she says to herself, "Ah me, it seems but yesterday I was nursing that dear child, Moschio, and now that a child is born to him!" Then to a young girl who comes running in from outside: "Bathe the child, can't you? What is this? Is it because it is his father's wedding day that you have no care of the little one?"^[200]

Examples of tender attachment are also met with in real life. Demosthenes furnishes a typical illustration in Oration, xlvii. "I explained to the interpreters the attachment of the woman to our family, the cause of my having her in my house, and that she had lost her life in the defense of my property. She had no kind of family connection with me, except that she had been my nurse."

In contrast to these, we have but few instances of unkindness on the part of the nurse. However, the perversity of human nature is exemplified in the illustration Plutarch gives: "For nurses, who are often rubbing the dirt off their infants, sometimes tear the flesh and put them to torture."^[201] This contrary note is again struck in Stobaeus,^[202] where the lack of skill and teasing humor of some nurses is portrayed. The child is hungry, the nurse obliges it to sleep; it is thirsty, she gives it a bath; it is sleepy, she keeps it awake by shaking rattles in its ears. Aristophanes, too, does not spare those nurses who rob their nurslings of a part of their meal.^[203] Though the chattering^[204] and tippling propensities^[205] of the nurse are sometimes referred to, we do not read that they led her to neglect the child. In fact, neglect and unkindness to children are not characteristic of the Greek nurse as popularly conceived. Of this we have ample evidence from the number of metaphors employed in the literature wherein the nurse figures and always in a good sense. One's fatherland is frequently called a nurse, since the care and nurture bestowed on a man by his country is like that given the child by the nurse. We read of the much-nourishing nurse, Greece (Ἑλλάδος ἀμητῆρα πολυθρέπτοιο τιθήνης),^[206] your motherland, most beloved nurse (γῆ τε μητρί, φιλότατη τροφῶ;)^[207] this, thy country, nursed thee:

(οὔτ' ἔννομ' εἶπας οὔτε προσφιλές πόλει τῇδ', ἣ σ' ἔθρεψε, τήνδ' ἀποστερῶν φάτιν;)^[208]

Apollo may love me as caring for his dear nurse, i. e. the island of Delos (Κύνθιος αἰνήσῃ με φίλης ἀλέγοντα τιθήνης),^[209] and many other examples. The dinner table is styled the nurse of life (βίου τιθήνη).^[210] The dove keeping the snake from her brood is an all-attentive nurse:

(δράκοντες ὥς τις τέκνων
ὑπερδέδοικεν λεχαίων δυσσευνάτορας πάντροφος πελειάς.)^[211]

The fountains are called the nurses of Bacchus, because the water being mingled with the wine increased the quantity of the wine.^[212]

Thus we find that in the performance of her fourfold office towards child, grown daughter, grown son, and household, the nurse exhibited a tender devotion towards the family in which she lived and especially towards the members of it who had been the former objects of her care.

CHAPTER IV

NURSERY TALES AND LULLABIES

The importance of the nurse in Greek life may be judged from the fact that to her as well as to the mother was entrusted the early education of the child. Quintilian quoting Chrysippus, whose treatise on Greek education has unfortunately been lost, says: “Those advise better who like Chrysippus think that no part of a child’s life should be exempt from education. For Chrysippus, though he has allowed three years to the nurses, yet is of the opinion that the minds of children may be imbued with excellent instruction even by them.”^[213] The same author wishes nurses to be women of some knowledge. At any rate, they should be the best circumstances allow.^[214] If we can judge from Republic, 343 a, the nurse taught the children to distinguish between ordinary words: εἰπέ μοι, ἔφη, ὦ Σώκρατες, τίτθη σοι ἔστιν;... ὅτι τοί σε, ἔφη, κορυζῶντα περιορᾷ καὶ οὐκ ἀπομύττει δεόμενον, ὅς γε αὐτῇ οὐδὲ πρόβατα οὐδὲ ποιμένα γινώσκεις.

The first lessons of the nurse were imparted by means of stories and songs, when children were not of an age to learn gymnastic. Of this Plato makes mention in the following passage: οὐ μανθάνεις, ἦν δ’ ἐγώ, ὅτι πρῶτον τοῖς παιδίοις μύθοις λεγόμενον; τοῦτο δέ που ὡς τὸ ὅλον εἰπεῖν ψεῦδος, ἔνι δὲ καὶ ἀληθῆ. πρότερον δὲ μύθοις πρὸς τὰ παιδία ἢ γυμνασίοις χρώμεθα.^[215] Furthermore, he would have mothers and nurses mould the minds of the children by means of these tales: πείσομεν τὰς τροφούς τε καὶ μητέρας πλάττειν τὰς ψυχὰς αὐτῶν τοῖς μύθοις πόλυ μᾶλλον ἢ τὰ σώματα ταῖς χερσίν.^[216]

In ancient literature, however, we find only isolated traces of nursery tales which may perhaps be accounted for by the contempt with which the Greeks regarded this form of literature, an inference drawn from Socrates’ answer to Hippias: σοι χαίρουσιν οἱ Λακεδαιμόνιοι, ἅτε πολλὰ εἰδότι· καὶ χρῶνται ὥσπερ ταῖς πρεσβύτισιν οἱ παῖδες πρὸς τὸ ἡδέως μυθολογῆσαι.^[217] More emphatic is his answer to Gorgias: τάχα δ' οὖν ταῦτα μῦθος σοι δοκεῖ λέγεσθαι, ὥσπερ γραός· καὶ καταφρονεῖς αὐτῶν.^[218] In a similar strain writes Lucian: ἔτι σοι γραῶν μῦθοι τὰ λεγόμενα ἐστί.^[219] Disconnected as are the allusion to nursery tales and notwithstanding the contempt in which they were held, we have sufficient evidence to prove their existence and suggest their character.

Nurses had many ways of acting on the imaginations of their young charges in order to secure their obedience, to quiet them or put them in good humor. The choice of the tales depended on the nurse and on the intelligence of the children whom they nursed διὰ μυθολογίας,^[220] and quieted again by tales after they had beaten them: καθάπερ αἱ τίτθαι τὰ παιδιά, ἐπειδὴν αὐτοῖς πληγὰς ἐμβάλωσι παραμυθούμεναι καὶ χαριζόμεναι μῦθον αὐτοῖς ὕστερον διηγῆσαντο.^[221] This recounting of tales is also mentioned by Philostratus: καὶ καταμυθολόγει με ἡ τίτθη χαριέντως.^[222]

As a substitute for the sandal, which according to Lucian^[223] was energetically applied, they sometimes told the children stories of an awe-inspiring character. The time-honored bogey was always in requisition to frighten them into good behavior, while there were tales of a pleasing character for the good children. These two classes of tales which we may designate as protreptic and apotropaic are clearly defined by Strabo in the following passage: τοῖς τε γὰρ παισὶ προσφέρομεν τοὺς ἡδεῖς μύθους εἰς προτροπὴν εἰς ἀποτροπὴν δὲ τοὺς φοβερούς.^[224]

We shall first consider the apotropaic tales, or bogeys. Of these, the most frequently mentioned is Lamia who is so intimately connected with the domain of fable that Plutarch called Demetrius Μῦθος because the name of his mistress was Lamia: Δημοχάρης δὲ ὁ Σόλιος τὸν Δημήτριον ἐκάλει Μῦθον· εἶναι γὰρ αὐτῷ καὶ Λαμίαν (Λάμιαν).^[225]

From Diodorus we learn that she was of Libya: τίς τοῦνομα ἐπονείδιστον βροτοῖς οὐκ οἶδε Λαμίας τῆς Λιβυστικῆς γένος.^[226] The Scholiast on Aristophanes, Peace, 758, says that she was a Libyan woman with whom Zeus consorted, not without the knowledge of Hera, who being jealous, destroyed Lamia's children. When they were killed and she was overburdened, Lamia killed the children of others.^[227] Therefore, nurses called Lamia to them to frighten children. And the story is told how she by the counsel of Hera passed her life sleepless, so that day and night she was in continual pain, until Zeus taking pity on her made her eyes removable.^[228] Plutarch thus speaks of her in De Curiositate: νῦν δὲ ὥσπερ ἐν τῷ μύθῳ τὴν Λάμιαν λέγουσιν· οἴκοι μὲν ἄδιν τυφλήν, ἐν ἀγγείῳ τι τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς ἔχουσιν ἀποκειμένους ἔξω δὲ προιοῦσαν ἐπιτίθεσθαι καὶ βλέπειν. Her singing would attract children to her abode but they had a chance to escape when her eyes were ἐν ἀγγείῳ.^[229]

The fear which children had for the Lamia is referred to by Lucian in a passage where he is speaking of the stories told to children: μυθῖδια παίδων ψυχὰς κηλεῖν δυνάμενα ἔτι τὴν Μορμῶ καὶ τὴν Λάμιαν δεδιότων.^[230] She was said to devour children alive. Whence Horace: “Neu pransae Lamia vivum puerum extrabat alvo.”^[231] Philostratus represents her as a monster, possessing the blood-sucking reputation of the vampire.^[232] Dionysius of Halicarnassus mentions her in a passage in which he is treating of the fables of earlier historians: Λαμίας τινὰς ἱστοροῦντες ἐν ὕλαις καὶ νάπαις ἐκ γῆς ἀνιέμενας, καὶ ναΐδας ἀμφιβίους ἐκ ταρτάρων ἐξιούσας καὶ διὰ πελάγους νηχομένας καὶ μιζόθερας, καὶ ταύτας εἰς ὁμιλίαν ἀνθρώποις συνερχομένας.^[233]

Lamia plays an important part in modern Greek nursery tales, where she is portrayed as a monster, hideous and deformed, hungry for human flesh, partaking of the nature of the Harpy, the Gorgon, and the Empusa.^[234] Belief in her is so common in Greece that Wachsmuth says when a child dies suddenly they say: τὸ παιδὶ τὸ ἐπνιξε ἡ Λάμια.^[235]

With Lamia, Strabo groups: Γοργῶ καὶ ὁ Ἐφιάλτης καὶ ἡ Μορμολύκη.^[236] That the hideous aspect of the Gorgon was used as a bugbear, may be gathered from Aristophanes, Acharnians, 582, where Lammachus is bidden to take away his shield which has the Gorgon for a device: ἀπένεγκε μου τὴν μορμόνα. As if the speaker said: “Take away the representation of the Gorgon which strikes terror into me, as μορμῶ does into children.” Mormolyke is called the nurse of Acheron, husband of Gorgyce by Sophron.^[237] The significance of the name is derived from μορμολύκεια, the general term for “bogey” of which Plato, speaking of the fear of death, says: μὴ δεδιέναι τὸν θάνατον, ὥσπερ τὰ μορμολύκεια.^[238]

To the apotropaic nursery tales belong also the stories of Acco and Alphito which are classed together by Plutarch: τῆς Ἀκκοῦς καὶ τῆς Ἀλφίτους δ’ ὧν τὰ παιδάκια τοῦ κακοσχολεῖν αἱ γυναῖκες ἀνείργουσιν.^[239] According to Hesychius the word Acco is etymologically connected with ἄσκός and ἄκκόρ, so that by Acco was originally meant a bugbear which carried off naughty children in a bag. In a similar manner Alphito, from ἄλφιτα is explained.

Another favorite of the nurses was Gello: δαίμων ἦν γυναιῖκες τὰ νεογνὰ παιδία φασὶν ἄρπάζειν. (Hesychius.) Zenobius, iii, 3, explaining the proverb, Γελλῶ παιδοφιλωτέρα, says of her: Γελλῶ γάρ τις ἦν παρθένος, καὶ ἐπειδὴ ἁώρως ἐτελεύτησε, φασὶν οἱ Λέσβιοι αὐτῆς τὸ φάντασμα ἐπιφοιτᾶν ἐπὶ τὰ παιδία, καὶ τοὺς τῶν ἁώρων θανάτους αὐτῇ ἀνατιθέασι. Μέννηται ταύτης Σαπφώ.^[240] Hesychius also styles her εἰδῶλον Ἐμπούσης. The Empusa here referred to is placed in the same category with Lamia and Mormolyke: ἡ χρηστὴ νύμφη μία τῶν Ἐμπουσῶν ἐστίν, ἧς Λαμίας τε καὶ μορμολοκίας οἱ πολλοὶ ἡγοῦνται.^[241] She possessed the property of assuming any form she pleased: “For they were travelling by a bright moonlight when the figure of an empusa or hobgoblin appeared to them that changed from one form into another until finally it vanished into nothing.”^[242] According to the Scholiast on Apollonius Rhodius, iii, 860, Hecate often sends out ghosts, the so-called Ἐκαταῖρα and often changes her form, wherefore she is called Empusa. Aeschines’ mother acquired the nickname Empusa ἐκ τοῦ πάντα ποιεῖν,^[243] according to the Scholiast πάντα τὰ αἰσχρὰ καὶ ἀνόσια.

Another bogey was the Strigla, the Roman Strix (Mod. Greek στρίγλαις), of which mention is made in a fragment of an ancient nursery song:

Στρίγγ’ ἀποπομπεῖν νυκτιβόαν, στρίγγ’ ἀπὸ λαῶν, ὄρνιν ἀνωνυμίαν ὠκυπόρους ἐπὶ νῆας.^[244]

The wolf had also its place in this literature, since its name was used in the same manner as the bugbears mentioned above:

Ἄγροικος ἠπείλησε νηπίῳ τίτθῃ
κλαίοντι ‘Παῦσι· μή σε τῷ λύκῳ ρίψω.’^[245]

A good example of the way in which children were frightened by these bogeys is given in Theocritus, where Praxinoe who wants to go out to the Adonis festival says to the child who runs after her crying:

οὐκ ἄξω τυ, τέκνον· Μορμώ, δάκνει ἵππος·
δάκρυε, ὅσσα θέλεις· χωλὸν δ’ οὐ δεῖ σε γένεσθαι.^[246]

Another instance is given by Callimachus in the Hymn to Artemis, where he tells that when a mother in Olympus cannot get her daughter to obey her, she calls one of the Cyclopes, and the indefatigable Hermes appears immediately with his face smeared with soot to personate the Cyclops. Then the child hastens in fright to her mother and puts her head on her bosom:

ἀλλ' ὅτε κουράων τις ἀπειθέα μητέρι τεύχε,
μήτηρ μὲν Κύκλωπας ἔῃ ἐπὶ παιδί καλιστρεῖ,
Ἄργην, ἢ Στερόπην· ὁ δὲ δώματος ἐκ μυχάτοιο, ἔρχεται Ἑρμείης σποδίῃ κεχρημένος αἶθρη.
αὐτίκα τὴν κούρην μορμύσσειται.^[247]

The Scholion on this passage says: καταπληκτικὰ φοβερὰ. ἐκ μεταφορᾶς τῆς μορμοῦς τὰ βρέφη φοβούσης.^[248] The μορμῶ here spoken of was a woman of horrible and monstrous aspect which Hesychius calls τὸ φόβητρον τοῖς παιδίοις. Xenophon likens the fear of the allies to that which young children have for μορμῶ: οἱ μὲν Λακεδαιμόνιοι ἐπισκώπτειν ἐτόλμων ὥς οἱ σύμμαχοι φοβοῖντο τοὺς πελταστὰς, ὥσπερ μορμόνας παιδάρια.^[249] Aristophanes also makes use of this word:

οὐδὲν δέομεθ', ὦνθρωπε, τῆς σῆς μόρμονος.^[250] ὀφρῦς ἔχοντα καὶ λόφους, δεῖν' ἅττα μορμορωπὰ.^[251]
ὥς δὴ καταπιόμενός με. μορμῶ τοῦ θράσους.^[252]

Such were the tales told by nurses to frighten children into good behavior. We cannot but think that these stories, although they secured obedience for the time being, must have had a deleterious effect on the children. This view is substantiated by a passage of Lucian: “If you do not want to fill these boys’ heads with ghosts and hobgoblins, postpone your grotesque horrors for a more suitable occasion. Have some mercy on the lads: do not accustom them to listen to a tangle of superstitious stuff that will cling to them for the rest of their lives and make them start at their own shadow.”^[253]

What the children naturally preferred to these threats were the stories told to put them to sleep or to amuse them—the protreptic tales. The nurses had a store of such tales, and γραῶν or τιτθῶν μῦθοι have grown into a proverb.^[254]

The subject matter of these tales was the actions of the gods and heroes of mythology: γεγονῶς αὐτὸς ἐκ Διός τε καὶ τῆς τοῦ δήμου ἀρχηγέτου θυγατρὸς· ἅπερ αἱ γραῖαι ᾗδουσι.^[255] Hence the telling of them might have the greatest influence on the moral education of the children. Plato, therefore, enlarges on the care to be taken in their selection, so that the children might not receive immoral impressions and false ideas: ἄρ' οὖν ῥαδίως οὕτω παρήσομεν τοὺς ἐπιτυχόντας ὑπὸ τῶν ἐπιτυχόντων μύθους πλασθέντας ἀκούειν τοὺς παῖδας καὶ λαμβάνειν ἐν ταῖς ψυχαῖς ὥς ἐπὶ τὸ πολὺ ἐναντίας δόξας ἐκείναις, ἃς ἐπειδὴν τελεωθῶσιν, ἔχειν οἰησόμεθα δεῖν αὐτούς;^[256] He therefore establishes a censorship of the writers of fiction, and rejects even Hesiod and Homer: πρῶτον δὴ ἡμῖν, ὥς ἔοικεν, ἐπιστατητέον τοῖς μυθοποιοῖς, καὶ ὃν μὲν ἂν καλὸν ποιήσωσιν, ἐγκριτέον, ὃν δ' ἂν μή, ἀποκριτέον. τοὺς δ' ἐγκριθέντας πείσομεν τὰς τροφούς τε καὶ μητέρας λέγειν τοῖς παισὶ.^[257] As a matter of fact, all sins that men could commit were imputed to the gods by these poets.^[258]

The story of Zeus who thrust his father from the throne would teach children disloyalty to parents,^[259] while his amorous connections with goddesses and mortals could not but have a pernicious effect on young minds. Plutarch thinks nurses should be restrained in the selection of these tales: μὴ τοὺς τυχόντας μύθους τοῖς παιδίοις λέγειν, ἵνα μὴ τὰς τούτων ψυχὰς ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἀνοίας καὶ διαφθορᾶς ἀναπύμπλασθαι συμβαίνει,^[260] and Aristotle wishes to place these matters under the supervision of the Paedonomoi: καὶ περὶ λόγων τε καὶ μύθων ποίους τινὰς ἀκούειν δεῖ τοὺς τηλικούτους ἐπιμελὲς ἔστω τοῖς ἄρχουσιν, οὓς καλοῦσι παιδονόμους.^[261]

On the other hand, ancient mythology is so full of humor and imagination and so rich in amusing adventures, that many of these same stories might do excellent service to-day as nursery tales. For example, the story of the inventiveness of Hermes even in his cradle, the adventures of Odysseus, the labors of Hercules, and many others would furnish enjoyment to many a child.^[262]

Philostratus records that nurses made use of the tale of Theseus and Ariadne: ὅτι τὴν Ἀριάδνην ὁ Θησεὺς ἄδικα δρῶν κατέλιπεν ἐν Δία τῇ νήσῳ καθεύδουσα τάχαν, του καὶ τίτθης διάκησας, σοφαὶ γὰρ ἐκείναι τὰ τοιαῦτα καὶ δακρύουσαν ἐπ' αὐτοῖς ὅταν ἐθελῶσιν.^[263]

The magic rings which Timolous wishes for in Lucian, seem to have been borrowed from a nursery tale,^[264] and the story of the ring of Gyges, which rendered its wearer invisible, contains elements of the nursery tale.^[265] Stories told for comfort and consolation are alluded to by Euripides, where

Amphitryon counsels Megara to tell tales to the children disturbed over their father's absence:

ἀλλ' ἡσύχαζε καὶ δακρυρρόους τέκνων
πηγὰς ἀφαίρει καὶ παρευκῆλαι λόγοις, κλέπτουσα μύθοις ἀθλίνους κλοπὰς ὅμως.^[266]

At the festival of the Oschophoria, the telling of old fables and tales to children was part of the ritual.^[267]

The style characteristic of modern nursery tales was in vogue in classical times, as we learn from Aristophanes where the first words of a tale correspond to our well-known "Once upon a time."

οὕτω ποτ' ἦν μῦς καὶ γαλῆ.^[268]

The Scholiast commenting on this line says: πρὸς τὴν συνήθειαν, ὅτι τὸν μῦθον προέταττον οὕτως, οἶον, ἦν οὕτω γέρων καὶ γραῦς. καὶ Πλάτων ἐν Φαίδρῳ (237 B) ἦν οὕτω δὴ παῖς μᾶλλον δὲ μειρακίσκος· τούτῳ δ' ἦσαν ἐράσται πάνυ πολλοί. There is another instance in Lysistrata, where the semi-choruses, telling each other a little nursery tale begin:

οὕτως ἦν πότε
οὕτω^[269]

The purpose of all these tales is training to virtue, and is well expressed by the Scholiast on Hermogenes, Progymnasmata, i.e.: τὸν μῦθον ἀξιοῦσι προσάγειν τοῖς νεοῖς ὅτι τὰς ψυχὰς αὐτῶν πρὸς τὸ βέλτιον ρυθμίζειν δύναται.

We conclude that there was at Athens a store of popular tales for the amusement of children, many of which were attributed to Aesop whom Herodotus calls λογοποιός.^[270] The word λογοποιός seems to indicate that a prose version of his fables may have circulated in Athens in the time of Socrates.^[271] What is certain, however, is that these tales were very much enjoyed and that Socrates himself versified some of them.^[272] The so-called Aesopic tales began "Aesop said."^[273] Other tales were classified as Libyan, Cyprian and Sybaritic, distinguishable by the opening words: "A man (or a woman) of Sybaris (or of Libya or of Cypris) said."^[274] A further distinction between the fables of Aesop and those of Sybaris is that the latter were political and about men; the former, ethical and about animals.^[275] A

Λιβυκὸς μῦθος is mentioned by Dion Chrysostom employed to calm children after they had been chastised.[\[276\]](#)

LULLABIES

Allied to the nursery tales are the lullabies of the nurses “aussi vieux que le monde et qui dureront autant que lui,”^[277] which Athenaeus calls καταβαυκαλήσεις: αἱ δὲ τῶν τιθηνουσῶν ὥδαι καταβαυκαλήσεις ὀνομάζονται.^[278] They are also called βαυκαλήματα^[279] from βαυκαλάω “to lull to sleep” onomatopoetically formed from the nurse’s song. Plato refers to them in the Laws where he says that when mothers and nurses are desirous to put their children to sleep, they do not bring them to a state of quiet, but on the contrary of motion, καὶ οὐ σιγὴν, ἀλλὰ τινα μελωδίαν.^[280]

The following passage from Aristotle seems to indicate that they were simple melodies without words, sung to a certain rhythm: διὰ τί ῥυθμῷ καὶ μέλει καὶ ὅλως ταῖς συμφωνίαις χαίρουσι πάντες; ἢ ὅτι ταῖς κατὰ φύσιν κινήσεσι χαίρομεν κατὰ φύσιν; σημεῖον δὲ τὸ τὰ παιδιά εὐθὺς γεγόμενα χαίρειν αὐτοῖς.^[281]

Chrysippus assigns a peculiar tune for the lullabies of nurses.^[282] Sextus Empiricus very appropriately styles them a metrical humming (ἐμμέλης μινύρισμα).^[283] It is probable also that to these melodies, the nurses adapted improvised words, as we do. This view is borne out by the fact that certain specimens exist which are imitations or elaborations of those really in use at the time they were written. The Lullaby of Alcmena in Theocritus is an instance:

εὐδετ’ ἐμὰ βρέφεα γλυκερὸν καὶ ἐγέρσιμον ὕπνον·
εὐδετ’ ἐμὰ ψυχὰ, δὴ ἀδελφεῶ, εὖσοα τέκνα·
ὄλβιοι εὐνάζοισθε, καὶ ὄλβιοι ᾧ ἵκεσθαι.^[284]

The melody of these lines is beautiful; the crooning sound of the open vowels in the first two, the rounded refrain of the last, with its repeated ὄλβιοι and rhyming halves give it all the characteristics of a lullaby.^[285]

Not less beautiful are Simonides’ lines in the fragment called “The Lament of Danae.” While tossed about by the waves, she sings her child to sleep with these words:

κέλομαι εὐδε βρέφος, εὐδέτω, δὲ πόντος, εὐδέτω δ’ ἀμέτερον κακόν.
μεταβολία δὲ τις φανείη Ζεῦ πάτερ, ἐκ σέο.

ὅττι δέ θαρσαλέον ἔπος
εὖχομαι καὶ νόσφι δίκας, συγγνωθὶ μοι.[\[286\]](#)

The spirit of rest which pervades the song of the chorus to the sorely-suffering Philoctetes suggests the lullaby:

ὕπν' ὀδύνας ἀδαῆς, ὕπνε δ' ἀλγέων,
εὐαδὲς ἡμῖν ἔλθοις,
εὐαίων, εὐαίων, ὦναξ·
ὄμμασι δ' ἀντίσχοις
τὰν δ' αἶγλαν, ἃ τέταται τὰ νῦν.[\[287\]](#)

Finally, we have another recollection of the nurse's song in Orestes:

πότνια, πότνια νύξ,
ὑπνοδότειρα τῶν πολυτόνων βροτῶν,
ἐρεβόθεν ἴθι, μόλε μόλε κατάπτερος
τὸν Ἀγαμεμνόνιον ἐπὶ δόμον.
ὑπὸ γὰρ ἀλγέων ὑπὸ τε συμφορᾶς
δ' διοιχόμεθ', οἰχόμεθα. κτύπον ἡγάγετ'· οὐχὶ σῖγα σῖγα φυλασσομένα στόματος
ἄνα κέλαδον ἀπὸ λέχεος ἥσυχον ὕπνου χάριν παρέξεις, φίλα;[\[288\]](#)

These are but the traces of a class of songs, which without doubt were employed by the Greek mothers and nurses to lull the children to sleep. From the very nature of these songs, it is highly improbable that any lullaby should survive in the literature.

CHAPTER V

MONUMENTS TO THE NURSE

The relations between nurse and master were of that sacred character which cease not with death. Her sincere and tender affection was not only repaid during life by the master's solicitude for her well-being; but after death her memory was frequently perpetuated by the erection of monuments.

The unearthing of many of these has proved a fertile source of information concerning the nurse. Her name, sometimes her parentage, and even details of her life and virtues find expression in the sepulchral inscriptions.

The commonest form of grave-stone erected to the memory of the nurse is the "Stele", a horizontal grave-relief more or less ornamented, and usually representing the nurse seated, bidding farewell to her master or mistress. Conze in his Die attischen Grabreliefs describes several of these.

The nurse Melitta, daughter of Apollodorus, the metic, is honored by a monument erected by her master, Hippostrates, who is also represented on the relief. Beneath is the following inscription:

Ἐνθάδε τὴν χρηστὴν τίτθην κατὰ γαῖαν καλύπτει
Ἱπποστράτης· καὶ νῦν ποθεῖ σε.
καὶ ζῶσάν σ' ἐφίλουν, τίτθη, καὶ νῦν σ' ἔτι τιμῶ οὕσαν καὶ κατὰ γῆς, καὶ τιμήσω σε ἄχρι ἂν ζῶ· οἶδα δὲ σοι ὅτι καὶ κατὰ γῆς, εἴπερ χρηστοῖς γέρας ἐστίν, πρώτῃ σοι τιμαί, τίτθη, παρὰ Φερσεφόνει
Πλούτονι τε κεῖνται.[\[289\]](#)

This inscription bears witness to the virtues of the nurse and the fond relations which must have existed between her and her master, for having loved her during life, he yearns for her when she is no more, and promises to honor her as long as he lives, thus uniting with those great honors which must necessarily be paid her in Hades, if there be there any honor paid the good.

The “Stele” of Malicha of Cytherea, the Spartan nurse of the children of Diogeitus, is engraved with an inscription bearing witness to her goodness:

Ἐνθάδε γῆ κατέχει τίτθην παίδων
Διογείτου ἐκ Πελοποννήσου τήνδε δικαιοτάτην
Μαλίχα Κυθηρία.^[290]

The epithet χρηστή so often seen on the monuments finds place on those of nurses. Thus the combination τίτθη χρηστή,^[291] to which is sometimes added the name of the nurse, occurs: Παίδευσις τίτθη χρηστή,^[292] Πυρρίχη τροφὸς χρηστή.^[293] Sometimes the name of the nurse and the word τίτθη are found, as Δημητρία τίτθη,^[294] Χοιρίνη τίτθη,^[295] Φιλύρα τίτθη,^[296] and there are instances where the simple word τίτθη or τείτθη occurs.^[297] Then too, the name of the nurse’s country is sometimes mentioned in the inscription: Φάνιον Κορινθία τίτθη^[298] and also that of her nursling: Ῥωξάνη Ζωπύρου Ἀλειέως τίτθη.^[299] Βιότη Λύσωνος Ἀμαξαντέως τροφός.^[300] In these inscriptions τροφός is less frequently used for “nurse” than τίτθη.

Besides the monuments erected especially to nurses, we often find the nurse shown on the grave-relief of a mother in the act of handing the child to her for the last farewell,^[301] or holding in her arms a young child enveloped in swaddling clothes.^[302] The representation of the nurse in this connection is quite in keeping with her relations towards the family during the sad hours which preceded the burial. While the immediate members of the family were considered as the chief mourners, they did not look upon it as a condescension to allow the sympathetic heart of the nurse to unite its share of grief with theirs.^[303]

In addition to the sepulchral inscriptions mentioned above, we have literary evidence of the existence of other monuments in honor of nurses. Theocritus furnishes the following:

ὁ μικκὸς τόδ’ ἔτευξε τὰ Θραῖσσα, Μήδειος τὸ μνᾶμ’ ἐπὶ τᾷ ὁδῷ κηπέγραψε Κλείτας ἔξει τὰν χάριν ἅ γυνᾶ ἀντὶ τήνων ὧν τὸν κοῦρον ἔθρεψε. τί μάν; ἔτι χρησίμα καλεῖται.^[304]

The use of χρησίμα in the last line is in accordance with the custom referred to before.^[305]

Less complimentary to the nurse is the following selection from the Anthology, ascribed to Dioscuridus:

Τὴν τίτθην Ἰέρων Σειληνίδα, τὴν, ὅτι πίνου
Ζωρὸν, ὑπ' οὐδεμιῆς θλιβουμένην κύλικος,
Ἀγρῶν ἐντὸς ἔθηκεν, ἵν' ἡ φιλάκρητος ἐκείνη
Καὶ φθιμένη, ληνῶν γείτονα τύμβον ἔχη.[\[306\]](#)

The unfortunate weakness of this nurse was made a subject of jest with the comic poets.[\[307\]](#)

But more in keeping with the true character of the nurse is Callimachus' epigram, wherein he commemorates the goodness of the Phrygian nurse Aeschra, to whose memory her master set up her statue in token of gratitude for her nurture:

Τὴν Φρυγίην Αἴσχρην, ἀγαθὸν γάλα, πᾶσιν ἐν ἐσθλοῖς
Μίκκος καὶ ζωὴν οὖσαν ἐγηροκόμει,
Καὶ φθιμένην ἀνέθηκεν, ἐπ' ἐσσομένοισιν ὀρᾶσθαι,
Ἥ γρῆυς μαστῶν ὥς ἀπέχει χάριτας.[\[308\]](#)

Thus from the study of the inscriptions, as well as from the literature, we learn that the Greeks had for those devoted women who stood to them in place of mother, a tender attachment which often continued all through life; and even after the nurse's death they sought to give some expression to it by writing epitaphs and erecting monuments to their memory.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. TEXTS OF SOURCES

- AELIAN: Varia Historia, ed. Hercher. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1866.
- AESCHINES: Orationes, ed. Blass. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1896.
- AESCHYLUS: Tragoediæ, ed. Weil. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1898.
- AESOP: Fabulæ, ed. Halm. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1901.
- ANTHOLOGIA GRAECA, ed. Bosch. 1795–1822.
- ANALECTA VETERUM POETARUM GRÆCORUM, ed. Brunck, 1776.
- APOLLONIUS RHODIUS: Argonautica, ed. Seaton. London, 1912.
- ARISTOTLE: Opera, ed. Didot. Paris, 1848.
- ATHENAEUS: Deipnosophistæ, ed. Kaibel. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1890.
- BERGK: Poetæ Lyrici Græci, Lipsiæ, 1878–1882.
- BLAYDES: Aristophanes, Halis, 1883.
- CALLIMACHUS, Hymni, ed. Blomfield. London, 1815.
- CICERO: De Officiis, ed. Holden. Cambridge, 1899.
- CORPUS INSCRIPTIONUM ATTICARUM, ed. Boeckh, 1875–1882.
- DEMOSTHENES: Orationes, ed. Blass. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1901.
- DIODORUS SICULUS: Bibliotheca Historica, ed. Vogel. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1888.
- DION CHRYSOSTOM: Orationes, ed. Dindorf. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1857.

DIONYSIUS OF HALICARNASSUS: Antiquitatum Romanorum, ed. Jacoby. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1885.

DIONYSIUS PERIGETES, ed. Wells. Oxford, 1704.

EPICLETUS: Dissertationes, ed. Didot. Paris, 1840.

EPIGRAMMATUM ANTHOLOGIA PALATINA, ed. Dübner. Paris, 1864.

ETYMOLOGICON MAGNUM, ed. Gaisford. Oxford, 1848.

EURIPIDES, ed. Murray. Oxford, 1901–1909.

GALEN, De Temperamentis, ed. Helmreich. Lipsiæ, 1904.

GEOPONICA, ed. Bech. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1895.

HERMOGENES: Progymnasmata, ed. Rabe. Lipsiæ; Teubner, 1913.

HERODOTUS: Historia, ed. Kallenberg. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1901.

HESIOD: Carmina, ed. Reach. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1902.

HESYCHIUS: Lexicon. Jenæ, 1858–1863.

HOMER: Iliad, ed. Monroe. Oxford, 1903–1906. Odyssey, ed. Merry. Oxford, 1899–1907.

HOMERIC HYMNS, ed. Allen and Sikes. London, 1904.

HORACE: Carmina, ed. Müller. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1893.

KABBADIA: Γλυπτὰ τοῦ Ἐθνικοῦ Μουσείου, Athens, 1890–1892.

LUCIAN: Opera, ed. Didot. Paris, 1840.

LYCOPHRON: Alexandra, ed. Kinkel. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1880.

LYSIAS: Orationes, ed. Thalheim. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1901.

MAXIMUS TYRIUS: Dissertationes, ed. Dübner. Paris, 1840.

MEINEKE: Fragmenta Comicarum Græcorum. Berlin, 1836–1857.

OPPIAN: Halieutica, ed. Schneider. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1813.

PAROEMIOGRAPHI GRÆCI, ed. Gaisford. Oxford, 1836.

PAUSANIUS: Descriptio Græciæ, ed. Schubart. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1889.

PINDAR: Carmina, ed. Schneidewin. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1865.

PHILOSTRATUS: Life of Apollonius of Tyana, ed. Loeb. London, 1912.

PLATO: Dialogi, ed. Wohlrab. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1908.

PLAUTUS: Comoediæ. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1894–1901.

PLUTARCH: Vitæ, ed. Sentenis. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1908–1912.
Scripta Moralia, ed. Didot. Paris, 1841.

POLLUX: Onomasticon, ed. Dindorf. Lipsiæ, 1824.

QUINTILIAN: Institutiones Oratoriæ, ed. Bonnell. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1896.

SEXTUS EMPIRICUS: Opera, ed. Mutschmann. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1914.

SOPHOCLES: Tragoediæ et Fragmenta, ed. Didot. Paris, 1846.

SORANUS: Gynæcia, ed. Rose. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1895.

STRABO: Geographia, ed. Meineke. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1895.

STOBAEUS: Floreligium, ed. Gaisford. Oxford, 1822.

SUIDAS: Lexicon, ed. Becker. Berlin, 1854.

TERENTIUS: Comoediæ, ed. Fleckeisen. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1898.

THEOCRITUS: Opera, ed. Ludolph. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1856.

THEOPHRASTUS: Characteres, ed. Didot. Paris, 1849.

VARRO: De Lingua Latina, ed. Spengel. Berlin, 1885.

VITRUVIUS: De Architectura, ed. Rose. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1899.

XENOPHON: Opera, ed. Didot. Paris, 1858.

ZENOBIUS: ed. Gaisford. Oxford, 1836.

II. SECONDARY AUTHORITIES

BAUMEISTER, Denkmäler des klassischen Altertums. München, 1885–1888.

BECKER, W. A. Charicles, Leipzig, 1840.

BLÜMMER, H. Leben und Sitten der Griechen. Leipzig, 1887.

BRUGES, Greek Anthology. London, 1893.

BRUGMANN, Grundriss der vergleichenden Grammatik. Strassburg, 1886–1892.

BUCHHOLZ, E. Die Homerischen Realien. Leipzig, 1881.

CAPPS, E. Four Plays of Menander. Boston, 1910.

CHOLMELEY, Theocritus. London, 1901.

CLAUDE, J. J. Diatribe de Nutricibus et Paedagogis. Ultrajecti apud Johannem Visch, 1752.

CONZE, Die Attischen Grabreliefs. Berlin, 1893–1913.

CROISET, Histoire de la littérature grecque. Paris, 1901.

EUSTATHIUS, Commentarii in Odysseam. Leipzig, 1825.

Commentarii ad Homeri Iliadem. Leipzig, 1827–1828.

FRIEDLAENDER, L. Darstellung aus der Sittengeschichte Roms. 5th ed., Leipzig, 1881.

GELLIUS, A. Noctes Atticae, ed. Gronovius. London, 1824.

KINGSLEY, C. Life and Works. London, 1901–1903.

LEGRAND, Daos. Lyon, 1910.

LENTZ, Herodiani technici reliquae. Lipsiae, 1867.

MUELLER, von I. Die griechischen Privataltertümer. München, 1893.

NEWMAN, Aristotle's Politics. Oxford, 1902.

NOTAE VARIORUM IN ARISTOPHANEM, London, 1829.

OXYRHYNCHUS PAPYRI, Part VI., London, 1908.

PANOFKA, T. Manners and Customs of the Greeks. London, 1849.

ROSCHER, Lexicon der griechischen und römischen Mythologie. Leipzig, 1884–.

SEYMOUR, Life in the Homeric Age. New York, 1910.

SMYTHE, Greek Melic Poets. London, 1900.

STEPHANUS, Thesaurus. London, 1816–1826.

THIELS, G. “Die vorliterarische Fabel der Griechen.” In neue Jahrbücher für klassisches Altertum. Lipsiæ: Teubner, 1908, xi, 393.

TRANSACTIONS OF THE AMERICAN PHILOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION, Boston, 1913, vol. 44.

VON HAHN, Griechische und albanische Märchen, Leipzig, 1864.

VERRALL, A. Collected Studies in Greek and Latin Scholarship. Cambridge, 1913.

WACHSMUTH, Das alte Griechenland im neuen. Bonn, 1864.

WINCKELMANN, Monumenti inediti, 2d. ed., Rome, 1821.

VITA

The writer of this dissertation, Sister Mary Rosaria Gorman, was born in Antigonish, Nova Scotia, June 21, 1880. She received her early education in the Public Schools of that Province, and was graduated from St. Patrick's Girls' High School, Halifax, N. S., in 1897. In 1912 she obtained a Head Master's License to teach in the Nova Scotia schools. From 1902 to 1910, she was Assistant Teacher in St. Patrick's Girls' High School, Halifax. In 1907, she matriculated at the University of London. From 1910 to 1913, she taught in the Academy of Mount Saint Vincent, Halifax.

The years 1913–1914, 1914–1915, 1915–1916 have been spent in residence at the Catholic Sisters College, Catholic University of America. The degree Bachelor of Arts was received in 1914, that of Master of Arts in 1915. In her graduate work, the principal courses followed have been those under J. B. O'Connor, Ph.D. and Reverend F. J. Coeln, Ph.D., to both of whom it is the writer's pleasure and honor to return thanks, but especially to Dr. J. B. O'Connor for his valuable assistance and kind encouragement in the preparation of this dissertation.

1. Od. ii, 361; xix, 15, 21, 489; ii, 349, 372; xvii, 499; Il. vi, 389; xxii, 503.

2. Hom. Hymn to Aphrod., 114; Dem., 103, 147, 227, 291.

3. Republic, 373C.

4. xlvii, 55, 56, 72.

5. H. A., vii, 12.

6. Athen., vi, 9.

7. Alc., 1, Lyc., 16.

- 8. Gynæcia, i, 87, 88.
- 9. Com. on Il., vi, p. 513.
- 10. Oppian, Halieutica. II, 404–5.
- 11. Brugmann, Grundriss der vergleichenden Grammatik, Strassburg, 1889, ii, S. 92.
- 12. Lexicon, s. v. τροφοί.
- 13. Od., xxiii, 171. Cf. xxiii, 35, 81, 11; xix, 482, 500, etc.
- 14. Homeric Hymn Dem., 147.
- 15. Euripides, Hipp., 243.
- 16. Il., xxii, 82. Cf. also xvi, 203 and Od., xi, 448.
- 17. Od., xix, 482.
- 18. Ibid., xi, 448.

NOTE.—Seymour (Life in the Homeric Age, N. Y., 1914, p. 139), objects to this on the ground that “nothing indicates that she (Eurycleia) ever bore a child and could have served as a wet-nurse.” The words εὐνή δ’ οὐ ποτ’ ἔμικτο (Od. I, 433) merely show that Eurycleia was not the concubine of Laertes, and not that she was childless. Dolius, the slave, had a wife and family in the household of Laertes (Od. xxiv, 389). Moreover, if the apportioning of awards mentioned in Od., xxi, 214 (ἄξομαι ἀμφοτέροις ἀλόχους) were a matter of custom, would not the faithful Eurycleia have served as a very special prize? Cf. Buchholz, Die Hom. Realien, Leipzig, 1881, vol. II, Pt. 2, p. 24.

- 19. Od., vii, 9.
- 20. Ibid., i, 430. Cf. also xv, 428.
- 21. Il., 389.
- 22. Od., xv, 427–444.
- 23. Ibid., xxii, 421.
- 24. Ibid., ii, 345.
- 25. Ibid., xxiii, 24.
- 26. Od., vii, 10.
- 27. Ibid., xx, 1–4.
- 28. Hom., Hymn to Dem., 141ff.
- 29. Hom., 166ff.
- 30. Hom., Hymn to Aphrod., 113ff.

- 31. Herodotus, vi, 61.
- 32. Euripides, Medea, 49.
- 33. Aeschylus, Cho., 750; Eur., Hipp., 698.
- 34. Eur., Hipp., 649.; And., 812.
- 35. Ibid., Med., 49.
- 36. Ibid., Med., 65: μή, πρὸς γενεΐου, κρύπτε σὺνδουλον, σέθεν.
- 37. Hipp., 324.
- 38. Med., 54.
- 39. Troades, 195ff.
- 40. Dem., lvii, 42.
- 41. Ibid., lvii, 35.
- 42. Ibid., xlvii, 35ff.
- 43. Plato, Laws, 790A.
- 44. Samia, 21ff.
- 45. Capps, Four Plays of Menander, Boston, 1910, pp. 15, 239.
- 46. C. I. A., ii, 2729.
- 47. ἐλακωνομάνουν ἅπαντες ἄνθρωποι τότε.
- 48. Aristoph., Lys. 80–1. Cf. also Xen., Rep. Lac., I, 4.
- 49. Lyc., 16.
- 50. Alc., 1.
- 51. C. I. A., ii., 3111.
- 52. C. I. A., ii, 3097.
- 53. Epigram liv.
- 54. Theocritus, Ibid., ii, 70.
- 55. Theocritus, Epigram xx.
- 56. Pseudo-Plutarch, De Liberis Educandis, § 5.
- 57. Ibid.

58. Apollonius Rhodius, iv, 1309–10.

59. Callimachus, Jove, 15. Cf. also Soranus, I, xxviii, 81. For the practice of “dipping” the child, see Newman, “Politics of Aristotle,” Oxford, 1902, vol. 3, p. 481ff.

60. Plutarch, Lyc., 26.

61. Baumeister, Denkmäler. Leipzig, 1885, vol. I, p. 4.

62. Olymp. I, 40–1.

63. Hom. H. to Mer., 151, 237, 306; Apollod., III., 10. 2; Plaut. Truc. 13, Amph. 52.

64. Conze, Die Attischen Grabreliefs. Berlin 1893–, 405, 302, 276, Taf. lxiv, etc.

65. Hom. H. to Apollo, 121, 122.

66. Pind., Pyth., IV., 203: σπαργάνοις ἐν πορφυρέοις.

67. Ibid., Nem., I., 58.

68. Theog., 485.

69. Cf. Aeschyl., Coeph., 529, 544; Eur., Ion, 32, 1351, 1598.

70. Aelian, Var. Hist., II, 7.

71. Plaut., Amphit., 1104.

72. Laws, 789E. In the third century A. D., the child was swaddled from forty to sixty days. Cf. Soranus, Gynæcia, ed. Rose, for this and other details of later usage.

73. Plut., Op. Cit.

74. Eurip., Ion, 1420ff.

75. Il., xxii, 83; xvi, 203; Od., xi, 448; Soph., Ajax, 849; Lysis, De Caed. Erat., 9.

76. Od., xix, 482; Dem., lvii, 42; Callim., Dem., 90, Ep. 54; Men., Sam., 32.

77. Eur., Hipp., 698, Cf. also Aul. Gel., 12, 5.

78. Pseudo-Plut., De Lib. Ed., § 5.

79. Athen., vi, 9.

80. Menech., 19–21.

81. Adelphi, 979.

82. Dem., Op. Cit.

83. Geoponica, v. 13, 4.

- 84. Crito, 50D.
- 85. Laws, 887D.
- 86. Rep., 460D.
- 87. Hist. An., vii, 12.
- 88. Hist. An., vii, 10.
- 89. Pol., vii, 17.
- 90. De Somno., iii.
- 91. Orat., 4, 155R.
- 92. De Aere, Aquis, Locis., I, 542.
- 93. Athen., vi, 51.
- 94. Athen., xiii, 85. Cf. Arist., Pol., vii, 17.
- 95. Pindar, Olymp., vi, 45; Schol. Aristoph., Thesm., 506; Apoll., Rhod., iv., 1136; Callim., Jove, 40.
- 96. Athen., iii, 15.
- 97. Cf. also Aristophanes, Lysistrata, 18–19.
- 98. Aristotle, Rhet., iii, 4.
- 99. Adv. Math., ii, 42. Cf. also Theophr., Char., 20.
- 100. Aristoph., Knights, 716. Cf. also Plut., Rom., 2.
- 101. Athen., xii, 40.
- 102. Il., vi, 467.
- 103. Ibid., vi, 389, 400.
- 104. Il., xxii, 503ff.
- 105. Od., xix, 401.
- 106. Hom. H. to Dem., 141.
- 107. Herod., vi, 61.
- 108. Eur., Iph. in Taur., 835.
- 109. Eurip., Electra, 1125ff.

- 110. Athen., iv, 16.
- 111. Laws, 789E.
- 112. Plato, Timaeus, 52D.
- 113. Pol., vii, 17.
- 114. Laws, 789E.
- 115. Varro, Ling. Lat., ix, 5.
- 116. Cf. also Aristotle, Pol., vii, 17.
- 117. § 5.
- 118. Plut., De Virtute, § 2.
- 119. Rep., 377C.
- 120. Galen, De Temperamentis, ii, 578.
- 121. Theoc., Idylls, xxiv., 10.
- 122. Panofka, T. Manners and Customs of the Greeks. London, 1849, Plate xi, 1.
- 123. Arist., Poetics, 16.
- 124. Plut., Rom., 3. Cf. also Eur., Ion, 1398.
- 125. Callimachus, Jove, 48.
- 126. Schol. on Cal., Jove, 48. Etym. Mag. s. v. λείκνον.
- 127. Hesychius, s. v. λικνίτης.
- 128. Winckelmann, Mon. Ined., Pl. 53.
- 129. Hom. H. to Hermes, 254.
- 130. Blümmer, H. Leben und Sitten der Griechen, Fig. 60.
- 131. Athen., xiii, 85.
- 132. Stobaeus, Flor., 98, 72.
- 133. Pollux, Onomasticon, ix, 27. Cf. Oxyrhynchus Papyri, Pt. vi, Lond., 1908, 852, fr. 1.
- 134. Heydemann, Griechische Vasenbilder, Taf. 8.
- 135. Plut., Consol. ad. Ux., § 22.
- 136. Curculio, v, 2, 45.

- 137. Poen., 29–30.
- 138. Vitruvius, De Architectura, iv, 1, 9.
- 139. Aeschylus, Choe., 750ff.
- 140. Menander, Samia, 31–3. (Capps.)
- 141. Plato, Rep., 343A.
- 142. Plut., De Consol., § 6.
- 143. Aeschy., Ag., 723.
- 144. Eur., Orestes, 462ff.
- 145. Timarch., 139.
- 146. Plut., De disc. amico ab adul., § 28.
- 147. Epict., Diss., xix.
- 148. Soph., Phil., 704.
- 149. Laws, 792A.
- 150. Polit., vii., 17, 6.
- 151. § 10.
- 152. Hom., Hymn to Dem., 227.
- 153. Plut., Symp., v, 7, 3.
- 154. Pliny, N. H., xxviii, 38.
- 155. Ep. i. ad Cor., Hom., 12, 7.
- 156. Quintilian, i, 1, 16.
- 157. Laws, 794C.
- 158. Lucian, Hermotim., 82.
- 159. Od., vii., 13.
- 160. Eur., Hippias, 698ff.
- 161. Bruges, Greek Anthology, London, 1893, cxxxii.
- 162. This tale was written by Callimachus in his Aetia. There is a prose résumé by Aristaenetus, Bk. I, Ep. 10. Cf. Ovid., Ep. 21.

- 163. Ovid, Ep. 18.
- 164. Apollonius Rhodius, I, 667ff.
- 165. Ibid., I, 269ff.
- 166. Od., I, 427ff.
- 167. Ibid., xvii, 31ff.
- 168. Ibid., ii, 349ff.
- 169. Ibid., xx, 135.
- 170. Ibid., xix, 21ff.
- 171. Ibid., xix, 468.
- 172. Ibid., ii, 349, xix, 482.
- 173. Aeschylus, Choe., l. c.
- 174. Demeter, 90.
- 175. Menander, Samia, l. c.
- 176. Demosth., In Evergum, l. c.
- 177. Cf. Chap. V.
- 178. Od., xv, 420.
- 179. Od., xx, 149.
- 180. Ibid., xxii, 420–5.
- 181. Ibid., ii, 345ff.
- 182. Ibid., ii, 349ff.
- 183. Ibid., ii, 352.
- 184. Hom., H. to Demeter, 103–4; 142–4.
- 185. Eur., Medea, 60.
- 186. Ibid., 90.
- 187. Menander, Samia, 40. (Capps.)
- 188. Od., I, 435.
- 189. Od., xix, 354.

190. Ibid., xix, 471.

191. vi., 61.

192. Frag. 42. (Bergk.)

193. Pyth., xi, 28.

194. Choe., 738–82.

195. Medea, 52.

196. Soph., Trach., 871ff.

197. Hipp., 698.

198. The Oxyrhynchus Papyri, pt. VI, Euripides, Hys., fr. 60.

199. M., ii, 1965.

200. Samia, 40ff. St. Paul instances the nurse as the exemplar of gentleness; but “nurse” here is usually interpreted “mother.” Cf. I. Thess., ii, 7. ὥς ἐὰν τροφὸς θάλῃ τὰ ἑαυτῆς τέκνα.

201. De Vitiosa Pudore, § 2.

202. Florelegium, 98, 72.

203. Knights, 717.

204. M., iv, 89.

205. Men., Samia, 90; Terence, Andria, 229. Cf. also Legrand, Daos, Lyon, 1910, p. 132.

206. Anthologia Graeca, ed. Bosch, 1795. L. 5, T. 1, E. 66.

207. Aesch., Seven against Thebes, 16.

208. Soph., O. R., 322.

209. Call., Delos, 10.

210. Athen., x, 83.

211. Aesch., Seven against Thebes, 291.

212. Athen., xi, 13.

213. Quintilian, I. 1, 16.

214. Ibid., I. 1, 4.

215. Plato, Rep., 377A.

- 216. Rep., 377C.
- 217. Plato, Hipp. Maj., 286A.
- 218. Gorgias, 527A. Cf. also Rep., 350E and Lysis, 205D.
- 219. Lucian, Philopseudes, 9.
- 220. Maximus Tyrius, I, x, 3. καθάπερ αἱ τιτθαὶ τοὺς παῖδας διὰ μυθολογίας βαυκαλῶσι.
- 221. Dion Chrysostom, 4, 164.
- 222. Philostr., Her., I, p. 668.
- 223. Lucian, Philops., 28.
- 224. Strabo, I, 2, 6.
- 225. Plutarch, Dem., 27.
- 226. xx, 41.
- 227. Scholia on Peace, 758.
- 228. Ibid. on Wasps, 1035.
- 229. Thucy., 2.
- 230. Philops., 2.
- 231. Ars Poetica, 340. Cf. A. W. Verrall, Collected Studies in Greek and Latin Scholarship, Cambridge 1913, p. 306.
- 232. Vit. Apoll. Tyan., iv, 25.
- 233. De Thucy., Jud., 6.
- 234. Von Hahn, Griech. und Alb. Märchen.
- 235. Wachsmuth, Das alte Griechenland im neuen, Bonn, 1864, S. 57.
- 236. Geographica, I, 19.
- 237. Cf. Roscher, Lexicon, Leipzig 1884—. s. v. Gorgo.
- 238. Phaedo, 77A. Cf. Lucian, Philops., 23; Tox., 24; Zeus, 12.
- 239. De Stoic. repugn., 15.
- 240. Cf. Sappho, frag. 27 (Bergk).
- 241. Philostratus, Life of Apoll. Tyan., Bk. iv., c. 25.

242. Ibid., Bk. ii., c. 5.

243. Demosthenes, De Corona, 270.

244. Smythe, Melic Poets, p. 158. Cf. also Oliphant's learned article "The Story of the Strix: Ancient" in "Transactions of the Am. Philol. Asso.", Boston, 1913, vol. xlv.

245. Aesop, Babrius, 49.

246. Idylls, xv, 40.

247. Callimachus, Artem., 66ff.

248. Scholion on Theocritus, Idylls, xv, 49.

249. Hellenica, 4.

250. Peace, 474.

251. Frogs, 925.

252. Knights, 693.

253. Lucian, Philop., 37 (Fowler's Translation).

254. Plato, Gorgias, 527; Hip. Maj., 286; Lucian, Phil., 9.

255. Plato, Lysis, 295D.

256. Ibid., Rep., 377B.

257. Ibid., Rep., 377D.

258. Sextus Empiricus, adv. Math., ix, 193.

259. Cf. Aristoph., Clouds, 904; Plato, Laws, 8860.

260. Pseudo-Plut., De Lib. Ed., § 5.

261. Aristotle, Pol., vii, 17.

262. Cf. Kingsley's "Greek Heroes."

263. Philostr., Imag., i, 15.

264. Navigium, 42.

265. Plato, Rep., 359D.

266. Hercules Furens, 98ff.

267. Plut., Theseus, 23.

- 268. Wasps, 1182.
- 269. Aristoph., Lys., 781–793.
- 270. ii, 134.
- 271. Croiset, Hist. de la lit. grecque, Paris, 1898, vol. 2, p. 475.
- 272. Plato, Phaedo, 600D.
- 273. Theon, Progymn., 3.
- 274. Aristophanes, Wasps, 1427. Cf. also Hermog., Progymn., I.
- 275. Scholion on Aristoph., Wasps, 1259.
- 276. Dion Chrysostom, 4, 163R (Dindorf). Cf. also Schol. on Birds, 807.
- 277. Croiset, vol. II, p. 19.
- 278. Athenaeus, 618E.
- 279. Socraticorum Epistolae. Cf. also Hesychius.
- 280. Plato, Laws, 790E.
- 281. Problems, xix, 38.
- 282. Quintilian, I, 10, 32.
- 283. Adv. Math., 6, 32.
- 284. Idylls, xxiv, 6.
- 285. Cf. Cholmeley, Theocritus, London, 1901, p. 343.
- 286. Simonides, Fragment 37 (Bergk).
- 287. Sophocles, Philoctetes, 827ff.
- 288. Euripides, Orestes, 174ff.
- 289. C. I. A., ii, 2729. Cf. Conze, 340, Taf. lxxxiv.
- 290. Ibid., ii, 3111.
- 291. Ibid., ii, 4196, 4197.
- 292. Ibid., ii, 5050.
- 293. Ibid., ii, 4109.
- 294. Ibid., ii, 3599.

295. Ibid., iv, 4284b.

296. Ibid., iii, 1458.

297. Ibid., ii, 4195; iii, 3384; Kabbadia, 1027.

298. Ibid., ii, 3097. Cf. also ii, 3111.

299. Ibid., iii, 1457.

300. Ibid., iv, 3553b.

301. Conze, 280, Taf. lxv.

302. Ibid., 276, 294, 306, 310, 380, 461, 471, 1143, etc.

303. Cf. Baumeister, Denkmäler, 1885–8, p. 238, Taf. 23.

304. Epigram xx. Cf. also Plut., Thes., 20: καὶ τροφὸν μετ’ αὐτῆς ὄνομα Κορκύνην ἣς δαίκνυσθαι τάφον.

305. Cf. p. 63.

306. Anthologia Pal., 456.

307. Cf. Menander, Samia, 90, Capps’ note. Cf. Terence, Andria 229.

308. Callimachus, Epigram 54.

TRANSCRIBER'S NOTES

Corrections

Page or Footnote	Changed from	Changed to
5	τίθεε, τιθένε	τίτθη, τιθήνη
5	σκάφε	σκάφη
5	πιστὲ	πιστὴ
5	τίθεε χρηστή—Name of Nurse Added—Her Master—Country— Simple Word τίθεε	τίτθη χρηστή—Name of Nurse Added—Her Master—Country— Simple Word τίτθη
7	ἔτι δὲ καὶ τροφοὶ ... αἱ τὸν ἄλλον φασί, πόνον μετὰ τὸν ἀπογαλακτισμὸν ἀνα εχόμεναι	ἔτι δὲ καὶ τροφοὶ ... αἱ τὸν ἄλλον φασί, πόνον μετὰ τὸν ἀπογαλακτισμὸν ἀναδεχόμεναι
7	αὐ'	αὖ
9	δὲ	δέ
9	ἐθελείς ὀλέσαι; σὺ δέ μ' ἔτρεφες αὐτή	ἐθέλεις ὀλέσαι; σὺ δέ μ' ἔτρεφες αὐτή
9	ἔμικτο	ἔμικτο
10	ἀργόθεν ἐρχονένην	ἀγρόθεν ἐρχομένην
10	ἐξείπη, ὁ δ' οἰσάμενος	ἐξείπη, ὁ δ' οἰσάμενος
10	τήν	τήν
10	ἀγγαλέω, ὑμῖν δ' ἐπιφράσσει'	ἀργαλέω, ὑμῖν δ' ἐπιφράσσει'
11	νεογόν	νεογνόν
12	ἀνθαπτεται	ἀνθάπτεται
13	τροφων	τροφῶν
14	κατέχερ τίττην παιδίων Διογείτου ἐκ Πελοποννήσου τὴν δὲ δικαιοσύνην	κατέχει τίττην παιδίων Διογείτου ἐκ Πελοποννήσου τὴν δὲ δικαιοσύνην
14	καὶ μ' ἅ Θεχαρίδα	καὶ μ' ἅ Θεουχαρίδα
14	ἐπὶ τᾷ ὁδῷ κηπέγραψε	ἐπὶ τᾷ ὁδῷ κήπέγραψε
15	τάς	τάς
15	Ἑλλ' ἠνίδας	Ἑλληνίδας
15	ἄτε	ἄτε
18	εχούσας	ἐχούσας
18	εἴωθε δὲ τὰ παιδιά τὰ πλεῖστα σπασμὸς ἐπιλαμβάνειν καὶ μᾶλλον τὰ εὐτραφέστρα	εἴωθε δὲ τὰ παιδιά τὰ πλεῖστα σπασμὸς ἐπιλαμβάνειν καὶ μᾶλλον τὰ εὐτραφέστερα

19	μικρόν	μικρόν
19	ἐκείνον	ἐκεῖνον
20	παῖς	παῖς
20	εὕδεσκ’	εὕδεσκ’
23	οἷα	οἷα
23	σκάφη	σκάφη
24	ψυεσθεῖσα παιδὸς σπαργάνων φαιδρύντρια· γναφεὺς τροφεύς τε παῦτόν εἰχέτην	ψευσθεῖσα παιδὸς σπαργάνων φαιδρύντρια· γναφεὺς τροφεύς τε ταῦτόν εἰχέτην
25	Βάταλος	βάταλος
26	και	καὶ
27	της νόσου δέ σοι ζητοῦσα φάρμαχ’ ηὔρον αὐχ ἀβουλόμην. εἰ δ’ εὖ γ’ ἔπραξα	τῆς νόσου δέ σοι ζητοῦσα φάρμαχ’ ηὔρον οὐχ ἀβουλόμην. εἰ δ’ εὖ γ’ ἔπραξα
30	πλῆσθιν, θαλερὲ δὲ	πλῆσθεν, θαλερὲ δέ
32	φιλτάτη	φιλτάτη
34	εἰπή μοι, ἔφη, ὦ	εἰπέ μοι, ἔφη, ὦ
35	οὖν ταῦτα μῦθος σοι δοκεῖ λέγεσθαι, ὥσπερ γραός· και	οὖν ταῦτα μῦθος σοι δοκεῖ λέγεσθαι, ὥσπερ γραός· καὶ
36	ἔχουσαν	ἔχουσαν
36	ἔπι	ἔτι
37	ἐ	ἢ
37	ἦν	τὴν
37	Θάνατον	θάνατον
37	της	τῆς
37	παιδαφιλωτέρα	παιδοφιλωτέρα
37	αὐτῆς τὸ φάντασμα ἐπιφοιτᾶν ἐπὶ τὰ παιδία, καὶ τοὺς τῶν ἁώρων θανάτους αὐτῇ	αὐτῆς τὸ φάντασμα ἐπιφοιτᾶν ἐπὶ τὰ παιδία, καὶ τοὺς τῶν ἁώρων θανάτους αὐτῇ
38	στριγγ’	στρίγγ’
38	τω	τῷ
40	μητέρας	μητέρας
41	κατελίπεν	κατέλιπεν
41	δακρυρρόους	δακρυρρόους
42	ρυθμίζειν	ρύθμίζειν
43	ἦ	ἦ
43	ρυθμῶ	ρύθμῳ
44	ιοιχόμεθ’	διοιχόμεθ’

46	δικαισάτην	δικαιοτάτην
47	μικκός	μικκός
47	ἔξει	ἔξει
47	Ἀργῶν	Ἀγρῶν
47	Ἀίσχρην	Αἴσχρην
[47]	ἐλακωνομάνουν	ἐλακωνομάνουν
[200]	θάλη	θάλη
[223]	Philips	Philops.
[228]	Waspa	Wasps
[238]	Philips	Philops.
[285]	Cholmey	Cholmeley
[304]	ἦς	ἦς

1. Silently corrected typographical errors and variations in spelling.
2. Archaic, non-standard, and uncertain spellings retained as printed.

 END OF THE PROJECT GUTENBERG EBOOK THE NURSE IN GREEK LIFE ***

Updated editions will replace the previous one—the old editions will be renamed.

Creating the works from print editions not protected by U.S. copyright law means that no one owns a United States copyright in these works, so the Foundation (and you!) can copy and distribute it in the United States without permission and without paying copyright royalties. Special rules, set forth in the General Terms of Use part of this license, apply to copying and distributing Project Gutenberg™ electronic works to protect the PROJECT GUTENBERG™ concept and trademark. Project Gutenberg is a registered trademark, and may not be used if you charge for an eBook, except by following the terms of the trademark license, including paying royalties for use of the Project Gutenberg trademark. If you do not charge anything for copies of this eBook, complying with the trademark license is very easy. You may use this eBook for nearly any purpose such as creation of derivative works, reports, performances and research. Project Gutenberg eBooks may be modified and printed and given away—you may do practically ANYTHING in the United States with eBooks not protected by U.S. copyright law. Redistribution is subject to the trademark license, especially commercial redistribution.

START: FULL LICENSE

THE FULL PROJECT GUTENBERG™ LICENSE

PLEASE READ THIS BEFORE YOU DISTRIBUTE OR USE THIS WORK

To protect the Project Gutenberg™ mission of promoting the free distribution of electronic works, by using or distributing this work (or any other work associated in any way with the phrase “Project Gutenberg”), you agree to comply with all the terms of the Full Project Gutenberg License available with this file or online at www.gutenberg.org/license.

Section 1. General Terms of Use and Redistributing Project Gutenberg electronic works

1.A. By reading or using any part of this Project Gutenberg electronic work, you indicate that you have read, understand, agree to and accept all the terms of this license and intellectual property (trademark/copyright) agreement. If you do not agree to abide by all the terms of this agreement, you must cease using and return or destroy all copies of Project Gutenberg electronic works in your possession. If you paid a fee for obtaining a copy of or access to a Project Gutenberg electronic work and you do not agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement, you may obtain a refund from the person or entity to whom you paid the fee as set forth in paragraph 1.E.8.

1.B. “Project Gutenberg” is a registered trademark. It may only be used on or associated in any way with an electronic work by people who agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement. There are a few things that you can do with most Project Gutenberg electronic works even without complying with the full terms of this agreement. See paragraph 1.C below. There are a lot of things you can do with Project Gutenberg electronic works if you follow the terms of this agreement and help preserve free future access to Project Gutenberg electronic works. See paragraph 1.E below.

1.C. The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation (“the Foundation” or PGLAF), owns a compilation copyright in the collection of Project Gutenberg electronic works. Nearly all the individual works in the collection are in the public domain in the United States. If an individual work is unprotected by copyright law in the United States and you are located in the United States, we do not claim a right to prevent you from copying, distributing, performing, displaying or creating derivative works based on the work as long as all references to Project Gutenberg are removed. Of course, we hope that you will support the Project Gutenberg mission of promoting free access to electronic works by freely sharing Project Gutenberg works in compliance with the terms of this agreement for keeping the Project Gutenberg name associated with the work. You can easily comply with the terms of this agreement by keeping this work in the same format with its attached full Project Gutenberg License when you share it without charge with others.

1.D. The copyright laws of the place where you are located also govern what you can do with this work. Copyright laws in most countries are in a constant state of change. If you are outside the United States, check the laws of your country in addition to the terms of this agreement before downloading, copying, displaying, performing, distributing or creating derivative works based on this work or any other Project Gutenberg work. The Foundation makes no representations concerning the copyright status of any work in any country other than the United States.

1.E. Unless you have removed all references to Project Gutenberg:

1.E.1. The following sentence, with active links to, or other immediate access to, the full Project Gutenberg License must appear prominently whenever any copy of a Project Gutenberg work (any work on which the phrase “Project Gutenberg” appears, or with which the phrase “Project Gutenberg” is associated) is accessed, displayed, performed, viewed, copied or distributed:

This eBook is for the use of anyone anywhere in the United States and most other parts of the world at no cost and with almost no restrictions whatsoever. You may copy it, give it away or re-use it under the terms of the Project Gutenberg™ License included with this eBook or online at www.gutenberg.org. If you are not located in the United States, you will have to check the laws of the country where you are located before using this eBook.

1.E.2. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is derived from texts not protected by U.S. copyright law (does not contain a notice indicating that it is posted with permission of the copyright holder), the work can be copied and distributed to anyone in the United States without paying any fees or charges. If you are redistributing or providing access to a work with the phrase “Project Gutenberg” associated with or appearing on the work, you must comply either with the requirements of paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 or obtain permission for the use of the work and the Project Gutenberg trademark as set forth in paragraphs 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.3. If an individual Project Gutenberg electronic work is posted with the permission of the copyright holder, your use and distribution must comply with both paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 and any additional terms imposed by the copyright holder. Additional terms will be linked to the Project Gutenberg License for all works posted with the permission of the copyright holder found at the beginning of this work.

1.E.4. Do not unlink or detach or remove the full Project Gutenberg License terms from this work, or any files containing a part of this work or any other work associated with Project Gutenberg.

1.E.5. Do not copy, display, perform, distribute or redistribute this electronic work, or any part of this electronic work, without prominently displaying the sentence set forth in paragraph 1.E.1 with active links or immediate access to the full terms of the Project Gutenberg License.

1.E.6. You may convert to and distribute this work in any binary, compressed, marked up, nonproprietary or proprietary form, including any word processing or hypertext form. However, if you provide access to or distribute copies of a Project Gutenberg work in a format other than “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other format used in the official version posted on the official Project Gutenberg website (www.gutenberg.org), you must, at no additional cost, fee or expense to the user, provide a copy, a means of exporting a copy, or a means of obtaining a copy upon request, of the work in its original “Plain Vanilla ASCII” or other form. Any alternate format must include the full Project Gutenberg License as specified in paragraph 1.E.1.

1.E.7. Do not charge a fee for access to, viewing, displaying, performing, copying or distributing any Project Gutenberg works unless you comply with paragraph 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.8. You may charge a reasonable fee for copies of or providing access to or distributing Project Gutenberg electronic works provided that:

- You pay a royalty fee of 20% of the gross profits you derive from the use of Project Gutenberg works calculated using the method you already use to calculate your applicable taxes. The fee is owed to the owner of the Project Gutenberg trademark, but he has agreed to donate royalties under this paragraph to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation. Royalty payments must be paid within 60 days following each date on which you prepare (or are legally required to prepare) your periodic tax returns. Royalty payments should be clearly marked as such and sent to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation at the address specified in Section 4, “Information about donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation.”
- You provide a full refund of any money paid by a user who notifies you in writing (or by e-mail) within 30 days of receipt that s/he does not agree to the terms of the full Project Gutenberg™ License. You must require such a user to return or destroy all copies of the works possessed in a physical medium and discontinue all use of and all access to other copies of Project Gutenberg™ works.
- You provide, in accordance with paragraph 1.F.3, a full refund of any money paid for a work or a replacement copy, if a defect in the electronic work is discovered and reported to you within 90 days of receipt of the work.

- You comply with all other terms of this agreement for free distribution of Project Gutenberg™ works.

1.E.9. If you wish to charge a fee or distribute a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work or group of works on different terms than are set forth in this agreement, you must obtain permission in writing from the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the manager of the Project Gutenberg™ trademark. Contact the Foundation as set forth in Section 3 below.

1.F.

1.F.1. Project Gutenberg volunteers and employees expend considerable effort to identify, do copyright research on, transcribe and proofread works not protected by U.S. copyright law in creating the Project Gutenberg™ collection. Despite these efforts, Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, and the medium on which they may be stored, may contain “Defects,” such as, but not limited to, incomplete, inaccurate or corrupt data, transcription errors, a copyright or other intellectual property infringement, a defective or damaged disk or other medium, a computer virus, or computer codes that damage or cannot be read by your equipment.

1.F.2. LIMITED WARRANTY, DISCLAIMER OF DAMAGES - Except for the “Right of Replacement or Refund” described in paragraph 1.F.3, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the owner of the Project Gutenberg™ trademark, and any other party distributing a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work under this agreement, disclaim all liability to you for damages, costs and expenses, including legal fees. YOU AGREE THAT YOU HAVE NO REMEDIES FOR NEGLIGENCE, STRICT LIABILITY, BREACH OF WARRANTY OR BREACH OF CONTRACT EXCEPT THOSE PROVIDED IN PARAGRAPH 1.F.3. YOU AGREE THAT THE FOUNDATION, THE TRADEMARK OWNER, AND ANY DISTRIBUTOR UNDER THIS AGREEMENT WILL NOT BE LIABLE TO YOU FOR ACTUAL, DIRECT, INDIRECT, CONSEQUENTIAL, PUNITIVE OR INCIDENTAL DAMAGES

EVEN IF YOU GIVE NOTICE OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGE.

1.F.3. LIMITED RIGHT OF REPLACEMENT OR REFUND - If you discover a defect in this electronic work within 90 days of receiving it, you can receive a refund of the money (if any) you paid for it by sending a written explanation to the person you received the work from. If you received the work on a physical medium, you must return the medium with your written explanation. The person or entity that provided you with the defective work may elect to provide a replacement copy in lieu of a refund. If you received the work electronically, the person or entity providing it to you may choose to give you a second opportunity to receive the work electronically in lieu of a refund. If the second copy is also defective, you may demand a refund in writing without further opportunities to fix the problem.

1.F.4. Except for the limited right of replacement or refund set forth in paragraph 1.F.3, this work is provided to you 'AS-IS', WITH NO OTHER WARRANTIES OF ANY KIND, EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY OR FITNESS FOR ANY PURPOSE.

1.F.5. Some states do not allow disclaimers of certain implied warranties or the exclusion or limitation of certain types of damages. If any disclaimer or limitation set forth in this agreement violates the law of the state applicable to this agreement, the agreement shall be interpreted to make the maximum disclaimer or limitation permitted by the applicable state law. The invalidity or unenforceability of any provision of this agreement shall not void the remaining provisions.

1.F.6. INDEMNITY - You agree to indemnify and hold the Foundation, the trademark owner, any agent or employee of the Foundation, anyone providing copies of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works in accordance with this agreement, and any volunteers associated with the production, promotion and distribution of Project Gutenberg™ electronic works, harmless from all liability, costs and expenses, including legal fees, that arise directly or indirectly from any of the following which you do or cause to occur: (a) distribution of this or any Project Gutenberg work, (b) alteration, modification, or additions or deletions to any Project Gutenberg work, and (c) any Defect you cause.

Section 2. Information about the Mission of Project Gutenberg

Project Gutenberg is synonymous with the free distribution of electronic works in formats readable by the widest variety of computers including obsolete, old, middle-aged and new computers. It exists because of the efforts of hundreds of volunteers and donations from people in all walks of life.

Volunteers and financial support to provide volunteers with the assistance they need are critical to reaching Project Gutenberg's goals and ensuring that the Project Gutenberg collection will remain freely available for generations to come. In 2001, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation was created to provide a secure and permanent future for Project Gutenberg and future generations. To learn more about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation and how your efforts and donations can help, see Sections 3 and 4 and the Foundation information page at www.gutenberg.org.

Section 3. Information about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation is a non-profit 501(c)(3) educational corporation organized under the laws of the state of Mississippi and granted tax exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service. The Foundation's EIN or federal tax identification number is 64-6221541. Contributions to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation are tax deductible to the full extent permitted by U.S. federal laws and your state's laws.

The Foundation's business office is located at 41 Watchung Plaza #516, Montclair NJ 07042, USA, +1 (862) 621-9288. Email contact links and up to date contact information can be found at the Foundation's website and official page at www.gutenberg.org/contact

Section 4. Information about Donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

Project Gutenberg™ depends upon and cannot survive without widespread public support and donations to carry out its mission of increasing the number of public domain and licensed works that can be freely distributed in machine-readable form accessible by the widest array of equipment including outdated equipment. Many small donations ($1 to $5,000) are particularly important to maintaining tax exempt status with the IRS.

The Foundation is committed to complying with the laws regulating charities and charitable donations in all 50 states of the United States. Compliance requirements are not uniform and it takes a considerable effort, much paperwork and many fees to meet and keep up with these requirements. We do not solicit donations in locations where we have not received written confirmation of compliance. To SEND DONATIONS or determine the status of compliance for any particular state visit www.gutenberg.org/donate.

While we cannot and do not solicit contributions from states where we have not met the solicitation requirements, we know of no prohibition against accepting unsolicited donations from donors in such states who approach us with offers to donate.

International donations are gratefully accepted, but we cannot make any statements concerning tax treatment of donations received from outside the United States. U.S. laws alone swamp our small staff.

Please check the Project Gutenberg web pages for current donation methods and addresses. Donations are accepted in a number of other ways including checks, online payments and credit card donations. To donate, please visit: www.gutenberg.org/donate.

Section 5. General Information About Project Gutenberg electronic works

Professor Michael S. Hart was the originator of the Project Gutenberg concept of a library of electronic works that could be freely shared with anyone. For forty years, he produced and distributed Project Gutenberg eBooks with only a loose network of volunteer support.

Project Gutenberg eBooks are often created from several printed editions, all of which are confirmed as not protected by copyright in the U.S. unless a copyright notice is included. Thus, we do not necessarily keep eBooks in compliance with any particular paper edition.

Most people start at our website which has the main PG search facility: www.gutenberg.org.

This website includes information about Project Gutenberg, including how to make donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, how to help produce our new eBooks, and how to subscribe to our email newsletter to hear about new eBooks.